Medical aid in Boston.

DR. BUTLER,
NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as a quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevails to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of "illingsgate," in the false description of their infallible specifics, and multitudinous compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sexes, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

All letters must be post paid.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

FOR THE CURE OF

Consumption and Lacer Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obstructed Catarrhus, Eruptions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States, J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician.

JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant

Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine:

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast ending in consumption. I have tried many medicines, but have not obtained the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised my blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 30, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy

Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

Dear Sir—I am glad to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with consumption, which was very distressing, great fatigues, with a cold, heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc. I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured me, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I mother very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

Quincy, May 20, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House,

Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum:

Sir—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Slow Fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. W. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief which the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

MISCELLANY.

TRUSTING TO APPEARANCES.

"There are a great many folks in this world who are amazingly taken by outside looks," said my aunt Sally the other evening. Now Aunt Sally is an old maid, past redemption—one of the oldest kind, for good soul, she's hard upon sixty. She always did say, though, that she needn't have been a spinster all her days, if she'd took up with any thing that came along—and I do believe her. Like most old folks, she seems sometimes to run of a notion that every body else must be thinking over in their minds, just what she's dreaming about—in a kind of magnetic communication as the Mesmerites say—though Aunt Sally knows nothing about Mesmerism; and I think it would be better for some younger people, if they didn't. But she appears to fancy, when she's been chewing the cud of memory over, all to herself, and then breaks out in a new spot with some wise say, that all of us know what she means by it. So says she the other night, as I told you, "There are a great many people in this world, who are amazingly taken by outside looks." Then she hitched her chair nearer to the jamb, gave the skirts of her gown a tack, held her hand over the fire to warm her fingers, and looked all around, first to father, then to mother, then to Fanny, then to me, as if she waited for somebody to speak. Nobody said a word, and she pinched her lips up, trotted her left leg on her right knee, and looked right into the fire. I saw the old lady wanted somebody to speak, as I took my eyes off of Chitty on Evidence for a minute and said:

"That's a fact, Aunt Sally, appearances are deceitful; but what's to be done about it?"

"Why, Zekiel," she said, "didn't you see that in the Philadelfy Post?"

"What in the Post?" said I.

Aunt Sally got the newspaper, and pointed to a paragraph which set out how a poor drunken creature set down on a railroad and went to sleep and how the whole train went over him crushing him all to pieces, and how his jug was broken in his hand; and furthermore, that he had left a destitute widow and that his children, if they wasn't exactly helpless from infancy, had grown up helpless from bad examples. Well, I read it out loud, as Aunt Sally asked me, and though it did seem a painful narrative enough, I couldn't see any thing to do with Aunt Sally. So says I, "Well, Aunt Sally, I don't see now what you are coming at." Father looked as if he did, but as mother and Fanny and I and all seemed curious, Aunt Sally put herself in a story-telling posture, and began:

"I could have told that man what would be his end, forty years ago."

"Why, aunt," says I, "they didn't have railroad then, nor dream of them."

"Never you mind, Ezekiel Jones. People who are too fond of the bottle didn't have to wait till railroad cars came into fashion, to find that sudden death laid in ambush for them. I can tell you. The drunkard's grave always gaped for him ever since the world was made, and many is the time young man who has begun to slide into it, before ever he knew which way his feet were slipping; or before he found out that he didn't stand as fast as the everlasting hills. But I'm fairly set down for a story, and seeing that Fanny is here too, I mean to tell it." And father he folded up the newspaper he was reading. I shut my book, and mother she made haste to count the stitches in the knitting work, where she was drawing in to fit my calves. Fanny crossed her feet with one sly peep at her own handsome article, and we all put on our listening caps for

AUNT SALLY'S STORY.

"I'm going to talk about things that I don't often mention; for when a body's nose and chin begin to look as if they were forever going to kiss each other, and the gray hairs will begin to struggle out from under their cap, and the hands are shrivelled and skinny and the lips puckered and thin, it seems kind of strange to young folks, that old folks, and old maids in particular, should talk as if they had ever known or felt any thing like what we used to call love when I was a girl, and what you still know by the same name for want of a better. But I can tell you Fanny Arbuckle, that my cheeks were once as full and red as yours, (didn't Fan blush and simper,) and that my lips pouted as handsome and red for a kiss, (she couldn't help smiling half spiteful,) and that I showed as pretty a set of teeth when I laughed, (Lord how Fanny's eyes snapped!) There wasn't a delicate wart in the State, and I had as good a pair of feet to stand upon as them that are now peeping out from under your new alpaca lustre."

I rather guess Fanny's were drawn in about the quickest. Father he went off into a horse laugh, and mother looked pleased enough.

Aunt Sally stooped over and looked at Fanny's gown, as if she had just thought of minding it.

"There," says she, "it's a good deal like what we used to call Prince's cloth, when I was a girl, but it's got more of a gloss. But that ain't telling my story."

"There was hardly a young man in these parts that didn't shin up to me some time or other, and that your father knows, Zekiel. He was a kind brother then, as he has been ever since, and though I say it to his face, it's no disgrace between two such old rheumatics as we are now. He took an amazing deal of pains to find out all about the young men who took a shine to me, and he came pretty near the mark generally, though he wasn't always right, as the account in the Philadelfy Post has shown after so many years."

Now, if this had been said at almost any other time, father would have gone into an argument with his sister, but he didn't feel like it now. I could see that his eyes glistened in the fire-light as his memory dwelt on the old times that aunt Sally had been raking up; and I now began to put that and that together, and to catch a notion of what the horrible accident had to do with the glances between my father and aunt. For a few minutes she went on—

"Forty years ago this winter—it may be more, for I can't rightly remember, there was a great sleighing party contrived up by the young men. It was in that party that I had my first regular invite. I'd been a great many times before, to be sure. Sometimes I had been taken along as one of the children, and sometimes your father had put me under the buffalo skin in his sleigh, when he kind of wanted to coax some shy girl to ride out with him, and knew she wouldn't go, if the ride looked altogether too much on purpose. Sometimes too, the girls in the set older than me, would agree to ride out with some spark, and then up and ask me to go too, for a spite to their beaux. Didn't the fellows use to wish me further! But I didn't care for that; I had the ride. This though, was my first sleigh ride, where a young man had harnessed up his horse on purpose to treat me to a jaunt, and to throw out his hints about how pleasant a short journey was together, and how we might make a longer one, and all that sort of nonsense that the young men were just as good at forty years ago as they are now."

I can truly and honestly say that I never had a pleasanter frolic in my life. The bells jingled and the snow flew, and the laugh rang clear, and Josh Beamis looked as if there never was a handsomer man. I felt proud of my beau, and as proud of his horse as if it had been my own, and as proud of his driving, as if I had held the reins, and as cheerful and happy as ever an artless, untroubled and innocent young girl could on a harmless frolic. To be sure, though my ears were too well covered from the cold to feel the frost, Josh did make them tingle a little. Oh, you may smile, Fanny Arbuckle, but when you are as old as I am, you will own like me that there is nothing in after life ever puts a woman into such a happy flutter, as when she hears, for the first time what is said for her own private ear and nobody's else. It is such a delightful secret that there never was a woman yet, who could keep it longer than she met somebody to tell it to.

Well, then we got at the stopping place, the older girls who had been courting till the business had lost all its freshness, and the beaux, who had been paying attention till they did it with as much of course as the doctor's horse stops before the house of an ailing family, they began to throw out their jokes and hints, and twits. Perhaps they thought it teased us; but I know that though I kind of dreaded the gauntlet that I knew that I had to run from my young acquaintances, I should have been dreadfully disappointed and provoked if nobody had said anything, and I guess Josh felt pretty much the same. We hadn't been in the house over a minute before one of the girls got the whole story out of my blushes in the corner, and then she turned to the rest, and such a tease as they put me into! I had forty minds in a minute—first, that I never would speak to Josh again—then that I would run right out and walk home about ten miles through the snow—and then that I certainly would pour out at Josh that he would never trouble me more. Just that minute I heard a great haw! haw! haw! in the bar, where the fellows had all gone to order in refreshments. Then I knew that they were plaguing Josh too, and when he came in with the rest, he was trying to look as if he had nothing in particular, and didn't care for anybody. But he couldn't help looking as if somebody had caught him running away with a sheep upon his back—and of course, as all the rest were against us, we were obliged to help each other face them out. We couldn't help it—and on the whole I guess we didn't want to. Seeing Josh and I were the youngest couple, and rather the most awkward, our sleigh was brought to the door last, and when Josh handed me in, he put his face into my mood, and—

Fanny looked at the speaker at this passage.

"He didn't bite me or I him, Fanny Arbuckle, I can tell you. Well, the ride passed off nicely. Your father, Zekiel, tried to plague me a little after we got home, but I fixed him up in short order with the kitchen tongs. I knew most as well as could be, that it was a match of your father's coaxing; that he was tickler than I, if that was possible, for young Joshua Beamis, Esq., was thought a match for any body, if 'an old vagrant and inebriate, named Beamis,' that's what the paper says, did kill the other day, on a railroad. 'Ah, well!' continued aunt Sally, with a sigh, after a moment's pause, 'We are all born, not buried,' as the saying is."

I shall leave you to guess of whom I dreamed, Fanny, that night. Time passed on, and I grew every day more discreet and woman like and better worth respect and love; for there is nothing fixes character, for good or ill, like the first serious, thoughtful and sincere attachment. But it was broken off. What separated us? Now I am going to tell you."

Father looked up from the fire with a great deal of earnestness at Aunt Sally—and Fanny and I were not a little interested too. Who knows but we shall be separated too, thought I. I stole a look at her face, her eyes met mine, and it didn't need any words to tell me that our thoughts were on pretty much the same thing—Aunt Sally continued, addressing my father:

"Do you remember that we were out of milk early of a morning in the Spring after that sleigh ride?"

Father shook his head.

"Why," said Aunt Sally "I'm sure I should think you would. Father was going to Boston and took an early breakfast—there was none left over night, and the cows hadn't been milked."

The old gentleman made no answer.

"Well, then, what a fool I am?" Aunt Sally said. I do believe I am getting old.

To think that I think that you would remember such a thing for forty years as well as I do, whose life has turned upon it!

Well to make a long story short, mother told me to take a pitcher and run into the neighbors. I tried and tried, at two or three places and then ran into the tavern, that was where Mr. Guttridge's house is now. I was in the kitchen, and I heard a laugh in the bar-room. I should have known that laugh if I had heard it among a thousand, and I never heard it before, when it didn't make my heart jump to answer. But what could Joshua be doing there before day-light? In a minute more I heard the stick rattle in the tumbler and then Josh's voice again. I couldn't help listening, and such coarse jokes as those of which I was the subject? Why I like to have dropped, going home, more than once, milk, pitcher, and all. It wasn't the mere words that were said, I wouldn't have you think, for though they were bad enough, but meant no harm. It wasn't altogether the place neither in which they spoke; but the hour—and what went into the mouth before the words came out—a morning dream.

Aunt Sally wiped her tears, and we all felt serious, I can tell you, but father he looked like a man who had just found out a riddle that had puzzled him all his life.

"I said nothing to nobody—how could I? But when Josh Beamis came over in the evening, how could I be as happy to see him as I was the evening before. And when you scolded me for not being cheerful, brother, I could not answer. The rest you know. I was led to watch Joshua, and I found that the morning dream was not a mere accidental thing, but a habit; and tho' there were a great many who used to do the same thing, I never could feel that they were safe."

Well, one thing brought on another, till at last Joshua began to leave longer spells between his visits. And when he did come that unlucky morning had fancied me with a key too much of what you fancied was mere good humor, and then again I found that there was a cloud over his face, that he said came from something else. I tried to joke him out of his habit of moderate drinking; but he took it only as a joke, and only laughed at me. I dared once to reason seriously with him, and he asked me if I thought him a drunkard, and that was the last time I spoke to him on the subject. And now I can look back and tell the living truth, when I say that the hour in which I ascertained that he was coaxed away by an artful rival was one of relief. She courted, and she won him."

"People pitied me. You almost quarrelled with me; I told you then not to trust to appearances, and you thought it was only envy. And so it did seem. He was rich, he was prosperous, he was honoured, he went from step to step in public life, he has been to the General Court and he has been to Congress. His children were lovers and pets, his house and homestead were a sight to behold for their pleasantness, and I know you did think me almost a fool that I had not been a sharer in all this."

"But flourished as the tree might, I knew what worm was at its root, and when in his jovial manner, his pleasant parties, his dinners, his drives, his popularity, other folks saw only bright happiness, I could see that all these appearances were the plainest marks of decay—just as your trees turn all sorts of colors, when their leaves are e'n just ready to drop. And just when the world thought him best off, his one vice began to strip him. Leaf after leaf fell, till the trees were left all bare, and it is only a few old creatures like me who can recollect who that 'vagrant' was, and what that inebriate once possessed. Now he is dead—and his widow, with her long life of earthly hope—of glad prosperity—of contemptuous pride—followed by humiliation, trouble, embarrassment and squalid poverty—her children the plagues of her life—her husband a torment in her eyes—her name forgotten—her heart and home desolate, and all crowned by that piece in the paper; is she who trusted to appearances better off now than the poor lonely old maid that did not?"

Aunt Sally hid her face in her hands. Father got up and walked right across the fire-place to her. "Not lonely," said he as he took her hands in his—and the brother and sister got up and kissed each other as if they were both children, and Sally had been telling over some girlish trouble, which could all be wiped out with the lips. I guess there wasn't an eye there, though, that didn't swim in tears; and as to Fanny, I do believe she will be afraid of me hereafter, if I only look at the outside of a case of spirits of turpentine.

[Note.—It is hardly necessary to say that Fanny is Mr. Jones' affianced.]

For the Quincy Patriot.

RAILROAD MEETING AT ABINGTON.

A large and respectable number of the inhabitants of this town, after previous notice had been posted up in all parts of it, met in convention at the Town House, on Monday, the 26th inst., at two o'clock, afternoon, to take into consideration the subject of a Railroad from Plymouth to Boston.

The Convention was called to order by BENJ. HOBART, Esq.

On motion of Harvey Torrey, Esq., a committee of seven was appointed to nominate officers for the Convention, and also to nominate a committee to prepare resolutions for the consideration of the same. The following gentlemen were chosen to constitute said committee, viz:

Harvey Torrey, Jared Whitman, Asaph Dunbar, Jenkins Lane, Esqrs., Capt. Isaac Hersey, Dr. Alonzo Chapin, and H. H. Brigham.

The above committee reported the following gentlemen as officers of the Convention, viz:

HARVEY TORREY, Esq., President.
H. H. BRIGHAM, } Secretaries.
W. H. DUNBAR, }

Benj. Hobart, Asaph Dunbar, Joseph Cleverly, Esqrs., committee to report resolutions.

The President on taking the chair, made some remarks explanatory of the objects of the meeting, and read the "Act" incorporating the "Old Colony Railroad Corporation;" after which the committee on resolutions reported the following, for the consideration and adoption of the Convention.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That whereas the act establishing the "Old Colony Railroad Corporation" granting them liberty to construct a Railroad from Boston to Plymouth, provides that a selection of one of two routes called the Eastern and Western, named in the Act, may be made by the original petitioners for said incorporation, one of which routes, the Eastern, passes "through nearly the middle of Abington,"—now we highly approve of the idea of connecting Boston and Plymouth by a Railroad, and will strenuously advocate it, and take all lawful means and measures to have the same located through this town.

Resolved, That we believe that this town would give more efficient aid and support to a Railroad thus established, than any other town would, were the Road established on either route. Abington has now a population, it is computed, of nearly 4000, and has no aid from any other Rail Road, as the towns on the South and West of us have, to divert any portion of its travel and transportation. Abington is engaged very extensively in the manufacture of boots and shoes, to the amount, it is estimated, of over $1,200,000 yearly; besides there are other manufactures, as of tacks, brads, shoe nails, leather, boxes, &c., making in all a total amount of nearly one and a half millions of dollars in value yearly, and the transportation to and from Boston and Weymouth Landing, is estimated to amount yearly to $19,335. $16,000 of which is from and to Boston, and $3,335, to and from Weymouth Landing, and $7,500 for travel in stages and otherwise, estimated at stage fare, making in the whole paid for transportation and travel, yearly, from this town, $26,835. There is no one very large establishment in this town that furnishes a great proportion of the freight and business, but it is divided among a great many enterprising manufacturers, and therefore, likely to be more permanent, and the travel would be very extensive, as the shoe business requires a great deal of personal attention at Boston, and the town is advancing rapidly in population and business.

Resolved, That it is our firm belief, that a Rail Road established on the Eastern route, will have decided advantages over one on the Western route, as to a profitable investment of capital; that route is over five and a half miles farther, and will require an outlay and investment of a capital at least from $100,000 to $125,000 more than the Eastern route, and subject a great proportion of the travel on the road in going from Plymouth to Boston, and back, to an extra travel of nearly twelve miles, and enhance the price for the same and for transportation. There would have to be a clear profit of about $7500 over and above that on the Eastern route, to pay the interest on the extra cost. Where is this addition to come from? It must be gained in the Bridgewater and Randolph, at the loss of Pembroke, Hanson, Hanover, Abington, Weymouth, West Scituate, and South Hingham, whilst there would be no towns on the west to give more aid hereafter, but being so near the Taunton Branch, and Boston and Providence Rail Roads there would be an endless competition betwixt them for the patronage of the little strip of territory intervening betwixt them. Besides the western route being on the margin of those Rail Roads, and doing a good deal of their business there now, there has been a late act establishing a Branch Rail Road from the Boston and Providence Rail Road at Canton, to Stoughton, which will accommodate North Bridgewater, and a large portion of Randolph, being less than five miles from North Bridgewater centre, and about three miles from West Randolph Meeting House, and much nearer to a great proportion of the inhabitants of those towns which are in the vicinity of Stoughton; and what would be singular, the western route, if adopted, would come within about three miles of this Stoughton Branch, the establishment of which has been aided and patronized by leading individuals from all the Bridgewaters, as the published Rail Road Meeting at Stoughton shows; but on the other hand the Eastern route would have a clear coast through towns not interfered with by other Rail Roads, and with towns bordering on both sides of the route to turn in their travel and freight, and coming so near the town of Bridgewater, and even into the town of East Bridgewater, that these towns would be well accommodated by this route, by a branch railroad about four miles long; and without this branch Bridgewater would save about six miles by land carriage to a depot in East Bridgewater, and fifteen miles by railroad to Boston, instead of going by Taunton Branch Rail Road, where now much of their travel and transportation goes, at as low a charge for freight and travel, as from Taunton depot, the Taunton Rail Road Corporation deducting the land carriage of ten miles from Bridgewater to Taunton. The centre of East Bridgewater would be about as near to this route as to the western, as one route is on the extreme east of the town, and the other on the extreme west. Now it certainly seems, that such a short branch from Bridgewater would be much more preferable to one of ten or fifteen miles to Stoughton or Quincy, which has been frequently named by leading individuals of those towns, but only perhaps with a view to influence the location of the Old Colony Rail Road that way. It would seem therefore, on the whole, that the Eastern route has a decided preference, not only as to distance, but as to travel and freight; and being a short Rail Road, about 36 miles, and through an old and thickly settled district of country, where there is now much business, and enterprise, and that constantly increasing, and a rail road itself will give a new stimulus, [and then there is the whole county of Barnstable, comprising all Cape Cod, and towns southerly, as Wareham, Carver, and Middleborough, and on the east, Duxbury and Marshfield to come in aid of the road.] there can scarcely be a doubt that its stock will be a good investment, and some have estimated, that it will command ten per cent advance as soon as secured, and instalments paid.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to make out statistics of the amount of travel and freight from this town, and present the same to the board named in the aforesaid act to select the route, and to correspond with the same and to advise with them on all such things that may favor a location through this town, and to aid in getting stock taken up in this town to build said road.

Resolved, That we recommend to those who have funds to invest in this town, to subscribe liberally for stock in said Road, and we would say to the many here who are doing a good business, let them take stock freely, which will give a double return hereafter, by aiding their business, and in good dividends, and if at any time such stock is wanted to be turned into money, there will be a ready sale. Let the industrious mechanics and laborers take their one, two, or three shares, who can do it without inconvenience, and let them become interested in a great public improvement in the town, which will certainly benefit them equal to any class of citizens, for a rail road to them, will be worth more than a good horse, for they will be at no expense for keeping him, or for saddle and bridle, and they will risk nothing, for the stock will never be below par; in this way, all classes in town may do something, and combinedly, a great deal, to establish the location of the road through this town, the advantages of which neither we, nor our posterity for a long time to come, can estimate. It will open to us an easy and quick intercourse with all other railroads in the State, and in the United States, and invite passengers from a distance to come and trade with us for our manufacture.

Resolved, That we would recommend and urge that if the Eastern route is adopted, that it pass near Weymouth Landing. We have been long in the habit of getting many of our heavy articles from there, as lumber, coal, grain, &c., and being the nearest tide water to us, it is the most convenient place for us to make our purchases and selections of those articles; besides we believe that place would be one of the best situations for a depot on the road, for passengers, and freight, and stone, as besides their own business, South Hingham, South Scituate, North Hanover, and East Weymouth, would enter there by the Queen Anne Turnpike, and other roads. We would advise our Weymouth friends to subscribe liberally for stock, and to do something more if necessary, by way of aid in giving lands, materials, and in helping build a viaduct over Monaquot river, so as to make easy in some measure the difference in the estimated cost of a more Western route by them.

Resolved, That in respect to the routes surveyed through this town, and others named, we give our decided preference to the one called the middle route, passing a few rods west of the Town House, and near where the old wind mill once stood, so to Vincent's swamp, without passing the road again from said wind mill, as surveyed in part by Mr. Parker. This route is nearer the middle of the town than any other surveyed or named, and will the best accommodate all parts of the town, and can be built at a much cheaper rate than any other named, and more especially so than the one which has been surveyed west of it, and reported, and which diverges from a straight line through the town nearly three quarters of a mile, and increases the distance nearly one quarter of a mile, and crosses seven roads, and passes over higher lands, and through farms diagonally, cutting gardens and valuable lots in two, and passing near many dwelling houses, and having no convenient place for a depot, and too far to the west in the town, whilst the middle route is only twenty-five rods farther than the straight line, and fifty rods less than the above route through the town, and may pass over only four roads in going over six miles to the town, and passes more than two miles where the land is not fenced, and is very cheap, and cuts through no valuable farms, gardens, or lots of land, and generally quite remote from buildings, and is a very level route, and easy to be made, being mostly swail, and meadow lands, not fit for building lots, lying betwixt the two great leading roads passing through the whole distance of the town, on which roads the principal settlements are, which two roads are united by four principal cross roads as named above; the situation of all which is very favorable for a rail road, and will accommodate all parts of the town much better than any other location.

The above resolutions called forth an interesting discussion, in which Benj. Hobart, Joseph Cleverly, Jared Whitman, Asaph Dunbar, Esqrs., Drs. Ezekiel Thaxter and Alonzo Chapin, Gen. Benj. King, Jenkins Lane, and others, participated. All of them spoke highly and energetically, in favor of the proposed road—of its utility and importance. The resolutions were taken up separately, and passed unanimously, with the exception of the last, and this passed also with a very large majority.

The committee of three named in the fourth resolution, was then chosen by ballot, viz.: Benj. Hobart, Harvey Torrey, Joseph Cleverly, Esqrs.

Voted, That the doings of this meeting be signed by the officers of the convention, and published. At a quarter after seven o'clock, in the afternoon, the convention adjourned, sine die.

REPLY.

Mr. GREEN.—The editor of the Aurora protests against being considered quite so much of a "Green" as to get his knowledge of butties from some singletons; now, we would inform him, that we never considered him a Green, or any thing like GREEN; but had he not professed to have been a temperance man, we should have thought he must have been a little blue, when he discovered the "whereabouts" of butties, as persons in such a state are very apt to imagine the size of objects as large as they might appear to others when looking through "colored" common maxims of EXTRA ROWEN." Why, Mr. Editor, one would suppose him an antiquarian of the first magnitude, and that he would like to have the "appendages" to ladies' dresses made in the primeval fashion of the days of Mother Eve to meet his approbation.

Nor was it our intention to do him "honor over much." We are not an EGYPTIAN CROCODATA, therefore we dare not presume to contend with an ASTROLOGY of the nineteenth century; and, as we are quite a young Miss, having just entered our teens, and being altogether unacquainted with such weapons as he alludes to, we think it would be advisable for us to give way to some older lady that may have had some experience in that mode of warfare, and one who has a greater relish for antiquity, as we should be an unequal competitor, although by the hints he has thrown out in the Aurora, we are led to believe that his "breastwork" begins to suffer at the first onset; he really begins to think of losing a world and gaining a woman.

We had no idea his breastwork was composed of such tender materials: we have heretofore considered it invincible, but, like other strong fortresses, we perceive it has been penetrated, and that Cupid, the inveterate enemy of bachelors, has already inflicted a severe wound.

By the way, we wonder if he does not think those young gentlemen looked first rate, with chins as smooth, checks as plump, and hair as sleek as so many youthful Adonises.

Now, we wish this NOBLE KNIGHT OF THE BUTTLES to own the truth and acknowledge that he was a little jealous of that Spartan Band with a LEONIDAS at their head, of which he speaks so lightly, (although in our opinion he intended as a baronetcy on the Society.) What causes him to be so much concerned of late? Is he afraid he shall be eclipsed and passed over until another four years have gone the mighty round before it will be his turn? We have read in romance of discontented knights, but had no conception that a man of so respectable appearance as the Editor of the Aurora—one so grave and dignified in his deportment—one who so much resembles an honorable Justice of the Peace, or some sanctified deacon, should so far demean himself as to be guilty of holding up the ladies for ridicule, by publishing articles in his paper, that the judicious part of the community must read with frowns of disgust, while the vulgar will receive it with smiles of approbation.

And now, Mr. Editor, we will take our leave of this noble KNIGHT, and as a friend would advise him to think seriously of repairing the injuries he has already committed, and not increase his offenses by further violating the rules of good manners.

A FRIEND TO BUTTLES.

TOWN MEETINGS.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE MARCH MEETING.
In the absence of Mr. William Scaver, Mr. George Marsh was chosen Moderator, pro tempore. The Reports of the Selectmen, concerning Guide Posts, etc., and relating to the transfer of Treasurer's Books, were accepted.

Votes for County Treasurer.

|                       |    |
|-----------------------|----|
| John Bullard received | 91 |
| Isaac More            | 38 |
| Daniel Baxter         | 1  |

The Town Treasurer was authorized to borrow money, from time to time, during the year, not exceeding ten thousand dollars.

Voted—That the Town raise ten thousand dollars the current year to defray the necessary expenses.

Voted—That the sum of ten thousand dollars be raised agreeably to the report of the Committee, unless assessed on the taxes and estates according to law; and, that one half of said sum be paid in on or before the first of September next; and the other half on or before the first of January next; and, that a discount of four per cent be allowed to all persons who shall pay their taxes on or before the first of September next.

Voted—To instruct the Collector to proceed and collect all Poll Taxes as soon as the Tax bills shall be placed in his hands.

The collection of the Taxes was then taken, at auction, by Henry C. Marsh for one cent and one mill on the dollar, and he was accordingly chosen Collector.

Peace Viewers—Alpheus Spear.
Firewards—Levi G. Fulsom, Joshua B. Packard and Benjamin Curtis.

This meeting was now dissolved.

Town House Meeting.

Mr. George Marsh was chosen Moderator. The motion to indefinitely postpone the second article in the warrant was decided in the negative.

The second article was then considered, and the Town voted to reconsider the vote passed at a previous meeting, whereby it was decided to build a Town House on the old site—years 268, nays 203.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

Voted—That the lot of land, on which the Town House lately stood, be annexed to the burying ground, and that the Committee on the Burying Ground be authorized to extend the wall in front of the same to Mr. Copeland's line, similar to that already built, and to draw from the Treasury a sum sufficient to pay for the wall and stone posts for a gate.

Voted—Not to build a Town House on the Hancock Lot.

Voted—To build a Town House on the Faxon Shop Lot, (see called.)

Voted—That the Town Treasurer be authorized to purchase forthwith the Land, called the Faxon and Willet Lot, as laid down on a plan exhibited to the Town.

Messrs. Daniel Baxter, Benjamin Page, James Newcomb, John Souther, George Venzie, were chosen a Building Committee, and directed to have said Town House built by contract or by the day as they may think most advantageous to the Town—to make such alterations in the pitch of the roof and in the lower story as they may deem advisable—and to cause said building to be completed by the first of November ensuing.

Voted—That the Town Treasurer be authorized to employ counsel, if deemed necessary, to procure a legal title to the lot designated for a Town House.

Voted—That the Selectmen procure one hundred feet of leading hose for the fire department.

Voted—That the meeting be dissolved.

JOURNEMEN STONE-CUTTERS. This class of the hardy, honest, and industrious portion of our citizens, have agreed upon a uniform scale of prices for their labor, which the employers have as yet refused to acknowledge that they will be governed in their future operations towards those whom they employ, and consequently there has been a "turn out" or refusal on the part of the journeymen to work until their conditions are accepted by the employers. We find upon examination that their scale of prices are fair and equitable, not oppressive or exorbitant; and, that in many instances, superior workmen might obtain more than they now demand, but in order to have a regular standard—one which shall be fair and just to the employer as well as the employed—they have magnanimously united in a systematic scale to avoid the loss of time and other disadvantages which frequently arise from the want of a standard system in regard to wages. The great object of the journeymen stone-cutters appears to be to procure a uniform system of prices, so that when a piece of work is given them they may know what they shall receive. This is just, right and proper. Their scale of prices show no disposition to injure, extort or oppress the employers. Such an honorable course on their part should be sustained by the public. We trust they will be united—their cause is just—and in union there is strength.

We are glad to learn that the journeymen stone-cutters of Milton, Dorchester, Braintree, Boston, Charlestown, Cambridge, etc., cordially unite with their brethren of Quincy in their just demand. Actuated by the benevolent feelings, they will in the end have the honest satisfaction of having contributed to sustain a praiseworthy effort.

We are a friend to the laboring man, and also duly regard the just rights of the employer; but, in the present case, we candidly think the journeymen stone-cutters ask nothing but what is right and just, and a little reflection will, we hope, convince their employers of the correctness of our remarks, and induce them to accede to the bill of prices and go on in future harmoniously with their old, well-tried and worthy journeymen stone-cutters.

ANOTHER STREET. By the annexed circular it appears that the mechanics of Fall River are standing out for higher wages, etc.

Whereas, the Mechanics of Fall River having formed themselves into an Association for the purpose of establishing a certain number of hours to labor in a day; and whereas a large majority of the Master Mechanics, as well as Journeymen, have pledged themselves to work TEN HOURS A DAY, and no more, believing that time to be sufficient to satisfy any reasonable person, and that the same or a greater amount of labor may be done in ten hours than will be done in thirteen, as has heretofore been the custom; and whereas, there are a few persons who are a considerable quantity of business at their disposal, who are disposed to defeat the objects of said Association by causing advertisements for help to be inserted in the papers in the different places around us.

We, therefore, deem it expedient to counteract such movement, by issuing this Circular, and we hereby conjure all Mechanics, in the name of humanity and justice, to disregard all such advertisements and calls, and be assured that by so doing they will give aid to a cause which is just and upon which the bulwarks of our country's liberty is founded. And we wish to have it distinctly understood, that there are sufficient number of Mechanics now in this place, to execute all the work that is now or is expected to be contracted for this season, and that any Mechanic who may come here in pursuit of business, before this system is fully established, will tend to retard the progress of this great and glorious cause.

COMMITTEE IN BEHALF OF THE FALL RIVER MECHANICS' ASSOCIATION.

JOSEPH P. BEVINS,
JOHN HURVEY,
ALBERT G. DUFFEE,
Fall River, March 30, 1844.

ENIGMAS. The answer to the Enigma, published in the Patriot of the 23d ult., has been correctly answered by "Quincy Point" and Miss A. who had to guess at a part of the solution from the fact of several errors in the puzzle, made, no doubt, inadvertently by the author. To avoid in future such mistakes, solutions should accompany each enigma, and the non appearance of several which we have received must be attributed to this circumstance.

Texas presents, from the best and most authentic geographical information, a superficial area of three hundred and fifty thousand square miles; that is, it is five times as large as the commonwealth of Virginia, more than twice as large as the kingdom of France, and ten times as large as England and Wales.

WELL MERITED. A walking staff,—one of the neatest things in the shape of a cane—has been manufactured at New Haven, (Conn.) and intended as a present to our beloved and venerable citizen, Hon. John Q. Adams, for his fearless advocacy of human rights. It is made of ivory, upon the head of which is a spread eagle inlaid in fine gold. In the beak of the bird is a scroll, on which is engraved the words "Right of Petition Triumphant"—in the claws, besides the usual arrows and olive branch, is another scroll, on which is the word "Petition." On the gold band is the following: "TO JOHN QUINCY ADAMS"—Jestum et tenacem propositi virum—which translated is "A man upright and firm in his position." The ferrule of the cane is silver and the point steel. The value of the gold upon this beautiful staff is, by weight, about fifteen dollars. The whole cane cost about fifty dollars.

A NOBLE DEED. Dr. W. H. Brisbane of Cincinnati, (Ohio) formerly of South Carolina, had sold his slaves previously to leaving the South—becoming convinced of the wrongs of Slavery, he has repurchased them at the expense of six thousand dollars above what he had sold them for, and comfortably settled them upon lands he purchased for their benefit in the vicinity of Cincinnati.

TEXAS QUESTION. Hon. Levi Woodbury, Senator from New Hampshire, has written a letter to a committee in Carroll county, (Ky.) on the subject of the annexation of Texas to the United States; in which he says he thinks no constitutional objection exists, and that he prefers, if Texas made an application for that purpose, her re-annexation to the United States, rather than her annexation to any other power, or the endangering of our rights and interests in that quarter.

MR. NEWHALL'S LECTURES. Within the past week, Mr. Newhall has delivered a number of Lectures in this vicinity, to great acceptance. His style of delivery is very pleasing, his matter sound, and his pictorial illustrations beautiful. He deserves a full house, wherever he goes.

ABOLITION MONUMENT. The abolitionists of Madison County, (N. Y.) have determined to erect a monument to the memory of the late Hon. Myron Holley, to cost two hundred dollars, the funds to be raised by contributions. A plan has been suggested by Gerritt Smith of procuring a large number of busts, from the original likenesses which are to be sculptured upon an obelisk of the monument, and the avails of their sale placed in the hands of the worthy family of the deceased.

ANOTHER POST OFFICE. A new Post Office has been established in South Abington, (Mass.) and Mr. William Bonney, Jr., has been appointed Post Master.

FIRE IN DORCHESTER. The stable belonging to Rev. Dr. Codman, and near to his residence, was entirely destroyed by fire on Tuesday night last, between ten and eleven o'clock. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the carelessness of the ostler.

TO READERS. Our correspondent "N" will appear next week. The favor of "M" and the request of "F" are also on file for publication.

APPOINTMENT. Henry K. Oliver of Salem, has been appointed Adjutant General of this Commonwealth, in place of John F. Boyd, removed.

DIED.

In this town, 31st ult., George T., son of Mr. Charles P. and Mrs. J. Prusha Tirtell, aged 3 years.

Seldom has disease fixed its relentless grasp so firm and unyielding, with such slow, sure and hopeless progress; the bitter and untold suffering is not often endured,—the manly forbearance but seldom called forth from one so young—upon one whose years number so few as those of this unfortunate child! For five years he has suffered from a disease which terminated his life, and from which he was not expected from month to month for the last three years to survive. Although his bodily strength was enfeebled, yet his genius was ever bright and active—ever forming some plan of use, or fanciful trifle, when strength would permit and suffering not too severe.

Towards the last of his sickness, when reason and observation taught him he could not live, that his feeble frame could not long battle with a disease so firmly seated, his reply was—"he should be willing to go, could his mother go with him." Well might he be attached to that mother with a strong and enduring affection,—one who had sacrificed worldly pleasure to make him comfortable; in her, he found every wish gratified, that could with reason be complied.

Shut out as it were from every pleasing sport of boyish rambling, from every enjoyment but those in which the affections of home, parents, brothers, and friends were garnered up, can it be thought strange a mind so gentle and sensitive to every favour bestowed, to every act of love and sympathy, that home should be thought by him almost a paradise below, and that "no one could do just right but his mother," that her kind hand and soothing voice was to him a comfort in every trying hour of sorrow.

There, consisted all his happiness, and with those trifles, which friendship bestowed from time to time, were many pleasant hours employed, and from that emaciated countenance could be seen winning and grateful smiles.

He did indeed "take a great deal of comfort" with such blessings as were afforded him; his things of amusement were kept with remarkable exactness, and when he last arranged them to his own peculiar taste, he remarked—"he wished them not to be disturbed but to be kept as he left them that he might be remembered."

Those who most deeply sympathized with him in his sufferings, can but rejoice that he has left a world of sorrow and pain, where by him its very dregs were drained and the cup of ease and enjoyment seldom quaffed.

But his sufferings are past! he is engaged in a more noble and happy employment than the brightest spirit on earth can afford in tuning the harp of Angels, and that gentle spirit has winged its way to fairer scenes and brighter skies, to mingle in union with that heavenly band where the tear of sorrow never flows.

Expectorant.

JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT, without exception, the most valuable preparation in existence for Consumption, Asthma, Croup, Hooping Cough, Bronchitis, Spitting of Blood, and other affections of the Lungs and Throat.

The following letter from Dr. Brigham of Lowell Mass. gives to the public; he but speaks the uniform language of hundreds of other Physicians who have tried, and therefore know how to appreciate Jayne's Expectorant.

Dr. David Jayne—Dear Sir—I have used your medicine (so universally known by the name of Jayne's Expectorant, in my practice for a number of years, and can most truly say, I have been more successful in the use of that as a mild, safe and thorough expectorant, than of any which I have ever used. It is the best for the following obvious reasons. It does not (if given in proper doses,) occasion a disagreeable cough. It does not weaken the lungs and prostrate the system, like most other expectorants in common use, nor does it abate the appetite of the patient, like other nauseating medicines which have been sought for by many of the faculty for ages gone by.

I remain yours, &c.

Town Meeting.

Norfolk ss. To either of the Constables of the Town of Quincy,

Greeting:

YOU are hereby required, in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to notify and warn the inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, qualified to vote in Town Affairs, to meet at the Town Hall, in said Quincy, on TUESDAY, the sixteenth day of April inst., at two o'clock in the afternoon, to act on the following articles, viz:—

1st. To choose a Moderator.

2nd. To know if the town will reconsider the vote passed on the first day of April, 1844, whereby they voted to build a Town House on the Fox Shop Lot, and also the vote by which they authorized their Treasurer to purchase said lot.

3d. To know if the Town will purchase and build a Town House, on the Cross Lot, (so called,) or on any other lot.

4th. To know if the Town will reconsider the vote passed the fifth of March last, by which they voted to build the Town House of Wood, and build a Town House of Stone.

5th. To know if the Town will provide a suitable room in the new Town House to be used as an Armory for the Quincy Light Infantry.

6th. To choose any Committee, or hear and act on the Report of any Committee the Town may think proper when assembled.

Hereof fail not and make return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, unto the Town Clerk, on or before the time appointed for said meeting.

Given under our hands and seals, at Quincy, this fifth day of April, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and forty-four.

DANIEL BAXTER, Selectmen.

BRYANT B. NEWCOMB, Quincy.

WILLIAM D. GRAY, Quincy.

Quincy, April 6th, 1844.

NORFOLK ss.—By virtue of the above Warrant, I hereby notify the inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, who are qualified as therein expressed, to meet at the place, time, and for the purposes therein named. A true copy. Attest:

FRANCIS WILLIAMS, Constable.

Expectorant.

JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT is without exception, the most valuable preparation in existence for Consumption, Asthma, Croup, Hooping Cough, Bronchitis, Spitting of Blood, and other affections of the Lungs and Throat.

The following letter from Dr. Brigham of Lowell Mass. gives to the public; he but speaks the uniform language of hundreds of other Physicians who have tried, and therefore know how to appreciate Jayne's Expectorant.

Dr. David Jayne—Dear Sir—I have used your medicine (so universally known by the name of Jayne's Expectorant, in my practice for a number of years, and can most truly say, that I have been more successful in the use of that as a mild, safe and thorough expectorant, than of any which I have ever used. It does not (if given in proper doses,) occasion a disagreeable cough. It does not weaken the lungs and prostrate the system, like most other expectorants in common use, nor does it abate the appetite of the patient, like other nauseating medicines which has been sought for by many of the faculty for ages gone by.

I remain yours, &c.

Don't Forget the Number.

NORTON'S AUCTION STORE,
No. 7 STATE STREET, BOSTON.

THE undersigned, grateful for the patronage extended him by his friends and the public generally, begs leave to inform them that he will have a regular CATALOGUE sale of DRY GOODS, FANCY ARTICLES, BOOTS, SHOES, TRUNKS, &c., &c., every WEDNESDAY during the season, commencing at half past nine o'clock, A. M.

The great advantage for persons to visit this establishment will be, that they can purchase any quantity they may wish of an article at their own price.

The undersigned will keep on hand a general assortment of BROADCLOTHS, CASSIMERES, SATINETTES, SHEETINGS, SHIRTINGS, CALICOES, HOSIERY, GLOVES, SUSPENDERS, &c. &c.

Offering a first rate opportunity for the supply of Families in any quantity.

Consignments of GOODS of every description respectfully solicited and returns promptly made.

The undersigned will act in the capacity of Auctioneer, either in or out of the city, on liberal terms.

B. H. NORTON, Auctioneer, No. 7 State Street.

Boston, April 6.

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston.

We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING, ever offered to the public.

Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season. We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all.

Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or tip top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1/2 cts., Blue and other colors 50 cts., GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1.50, Satinet Pants, Canada Gray, etc., etc.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the QUINCY HALL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, OVER THE QUINCY MARKET.

Boston, April 6.

THE EXTENSIVE WAREHOUSE

OF
HENRY PETTES & CO.

LARGE AND VALUABLE STOCK OF

FASHIONABLE AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,

Of their own importation; most of which has been selected expressly for the Boston trade, by their Resident Agents in London and Paris.

These Goods are of the most rare and beautiful descriptions, and will be sold at Retail as low as the usual Wholesale Prices.

No expense has been spared to render this Warehouse such an one as would be an ornament to the prosperous city of Boston, and the subscribers flatter themselves that their efforts have been successful.

TWO SPACIOUS HALLS ARE NOW DEVOTED TO THE SALE OF ## CARPETINGS,

and the TABERNACLE in Winter Street, erected last season, has been leased, and converted into an EXTENSIVE DEPOT for

Painted Canvass Carpets.

The assortment of RICH BRUSSELS and other CARPETS is very large, and we shall sell a better and more beautiful style of Carpets for the same money, than any other house.

The motto of "LARGE SALES AND SMALL PROFITS" was originally ours, and we adopt it again, as one to which we are well entitled, and by which we are willing to stand.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
THE SLAVE.
BY A. W. K.

Hark! a voice of supplication,
From the southern country comes—
'Tis the slave in degradation,
Urging us to plead his wrongs.

Deprived of rights that God has given,
He is crushed beneath the brute;
All his tenderest ties are riven,
Man's unholy mind to suit.

When his back is stained and gory—
When the tears of anguish flow;
Then the master triumphs o'er him
Like a demon from below.

Must the slave his feelings smother,
When oppressed with galling chains?
Must all these torments suffer,
For his master's filthy gains?

Man, for filthy lucre seeking,
Treads his brother in the dust;
Like a fiend from hell escaping,
Filled with every sinful lust.

No warm compassion fills his heart,
When he sees his kindred bound,
And placed within the horrid mart,
Where men like the brutes are found.

He disobeys the mighty God,
And defies his holy law—
He lifts on high the scourging rod,
And declares a sinful war.

Crushed beneath his power and might,
Africa's sons and daughters mourn;
From scenes of pleasure and delight,
They by cruel hands were torn.

Rouse ye Freeman! raise your banner,
High between the heavens and earth!
Let the slave's unholy master
See that you uphold the serf.

THE HORSE AND THE LOCOMOTIVE.
MR. GREEN—As the town of Quincy is about having a Rail Road, the following characteristic lines may be acceptable as appropriate.

"Ha! ha!" said the horse and he capered with gloo round the meadow that skirted the way,
There'll be very little more use now for me
To be harnessed to carriages—high.

What a curious creature they've got to that train;
What a puffing and snorting he makes!
And he said that he eats neither fodder nor grain—
Wood and water are all that he takes.

His stomach is stronger than that of a horse,
To manage such horrible stuff—
'Tis just as if I should cut fence rails, or worse,
And yet he has never enough!

And then what a spirit the fellow retains!
So tireless—his bottom is good,
And he never turns tail to the winds or the rains,
And all must get out of the road!

And the old horse laughed loudly, "He! he! he! he!"
Let them drive on as fast as they please—
A fig for the railways—the meadows for me,
To ramble or rest at my ease."

And the horse capered on in a spree of delight,
And I've nothing further to tell;
For I scarcely had time ere we were out of sight,
To bid the old fellow farewell.

FORGET-ME-NOT.
There is a flower, a lovely flower,
Tinged deep with Faith's unchanging hue;
Pure as the ether in the hour
Of loveliest and serenest blue.

The streamer's gentle side it seeks,
The silent fount, the shaded grove,
And sweetly to the heart it speaks,
Forget-me-not, forget-me-not.

Mild as the azure of thine eyes,
Soft as the halo-beam above,
Intender whispers still it sighs,
Forget me not, my life, my love!

Wherever thy last steps turned away,
Wet eyes shall watch the sacred spot,
And this sweet flower be heard to say,
Forget! ah, no! forget-me-not!

Yet deep its azure leaves within
Is seen the blighting hue of care;
And what that seared grief hath been,
The drooping stem may well declare.

The dew-drops on its leaves are tears,
That ask, "Am I so soon forgot?"
Repining still, amidst their fears,
My life, my love! forget-me-not!

ANECDOTES.

"Now, my dear husband, why don't you call me by such names as other men call their wives?" "Why, what do other men call their wives, my dear?" "Why, they call them 'my duck' and 'my dear,' and such kind of words." "Well, what is duck—my dear?" "Why, it's a fool, to be sure." "Right! Now, what's a dear, you goose?" "It's a beast, certainly." "Well, then I'll call you 'my foul beast!' Now go about your business."

A foolish fellow went to the parson of a parish with a long face, and told him that he had seen a ghost as he was passing the grave yard, moving along against the side of the wall. "In what shape did it appear?" "In the shape of an ass." "Go home and hold your tongue about it," said the parson, "you have been frightened by your own shadow."

Dr. Mend was the son of a dissenting minister, and whenever he was called out of his father's church, which was often the case, the preacher would stop in the middle of his discourse and say, "Dear brethren, let me offer up a prayer for the safe recovery of the poor patient to whom my son is going to administer relief."

Why is a certain drinking glass like a mountebank? Because it is a tumbler.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevail to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the fulsome description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,
FOR THE CURE OF
Consumption and Litter Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Disorders arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public, that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and upon his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast en-tailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which the human system is liable.

I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

MISCELLANY.

PETER CHANCERY, ESQ.

Showing the blessings that may follow the settlement of the smallest account.

'Sir, if you please, boss would like you to pay this bill to-day,' said for the tenth time a half grown boy in a dirty jacket to a lawyer in his office.

The Attorney at length turned round and stared the boy full in the face, as if he had been some newly discovered specimen of zoology.

gave a long whistle, thrust his ink finger first into one pocket and then into the other of his black cloth vest, and then gave another long whistle and completed his stare at the boy's face.

'Ho, ha, hum! that bill, eh?' and the legal young gentleman extended the tips of his fingers towards the well worn bit of paper, and daintily opening it, looked at its contents.

'Hum! for capping and heel tapping, six shillings—for foxing, ten and six pence, and other sundries, eh! So your master wants me to settle this bill, eh?' repeated the man of briefs.

'Yes, sir. This is the nineteenth time I have come for it, and I intend to knock off at twenty and call it half a day.'

'You're an impudent boy.'

'It's always impudent to lawyers, coz I can't help it—it's catchin'.'

'Your eye teeth are cut, I see!'

'That's what boss sent me for instead o' the 'prentices as was gettin' their teeth cut. I cut mine at nine months old with a hand saw.'

'Boss says if you don't pay that bill he'll sue you.'

'Sue me? I'm a lawyer.'

'It's no matter for that! Lawyer or no lawyer, boss declares he'll do it—so fork over!'

'Declares he'll sue me?'

'As true as there's another lawyer in all Philadelphia.'

'That would be bad!'

'Wouldn't it?'

'Silence, you vagabond. I suppose I must pay this,' muttered the attorney to himself. 'It's not my plan to pay these small bills! What is a lawyer's profession good for, if he can't get clear paying his own bills. He'll sue me!'

'This just five dollars! It comes hard, and he don't want the money! His boy could have earned it in the time he has been sending him to me to do for it. So your master will sue for it if I don't pay?'

'He says he will do it, and charge you a new pair o' shoes for me.'

'Hark'ee. I can't pay to-day; and so if your boss will sue, just be so kind as to ask him to employ me as his attorney.'

'You?'

'Yes; I'll issue the writ, have it served, and then you see I shall put the costs into my own pocket, instead of seeing them go into another lawyer's. So you see if I have to pay the bill I'll make the costs. Capital idea.'

The boy scratched his head awhile, as if striving to comprehend this 'capital idea', and then shook it doubtfully. 'I don't know about this; it looks tricky. I'll ask boss; though, if as how you say you won't pay it no how without being sued.'

'I'd rather be sued if he'll employ me, boy!'

'But who's to pay them costs—the boss?'

The lawyer looked at once very serious, and then gave another of those long whistles peculiar to him.

'Well, I am a sensible man, truly! My anxiety to get the costs of the suit blinded me to the fact that they had got to come out of one of my own pockets before they could be safely put into the other pocket! Ah; well, my boy, I suppose I must pay. Here is a five dollar bill. Is it receipted—it is so dirty and greasy I can't see.'

'It was nice and clean three months ago when boss gin it to me, and the writin' shined like Knapp's Blackin'—its torn so of a dunnin' so much.'

'Well, here's your money,' said the man of law, taking a solitary five dollar note from his watch fob; now tell your master, Mr. Last, that if he has any other accounts he wants sued, I will attend to them with the greatest pleasure.'

'Thank'ee,' answered the boy, pocketing five, 'but you is the only regular dunnin' customer boss has, and now you've paid up, he hasn't none but cash fobs. Good day to you.'

'Now there goes a five dollar note that will do that fellow, Last, no good. I am in great want of it but he is not. It is a five thrown away. It wouldn't have left my pocket but that I was sure his patience was worn out, and that costs would come out of it. I like to have costs, but I don't think a lawyer has any thing to do with paying them.'

As Peter Chancery, Esq. did not believe in his own mind that paying his debt to Mr. Last was to be of any benefit to him, and was of opinion that it was 'money thrown away,' let us follow the fate of this five dollar bill through the day.

'He has paid,' said the boy, placing the five dollar bill in his master's hand.

'Well, I am glad of it,' answered Mr. Last, surveying the bank note through his glasses; 'and it's a current bill, too. Now run with it and pay Mr. Furnace the five dollars I borrowed of him yesterday, and said I would return to-morrow. But I'll pay it now.'

'Ah, my lad, come just in time, said Furnace, as the boy delivered his errand and the note. 'I was just wondering where I could get five dollars to pay a bill which is due to-day. Here, John, he called to one of his apprentices, 'put on your hat and take this money to Captain O'Brien, and tell him I came within one of disappointing him, when some money came in I didn't expect.'

Captain O'Brien was on board his schooner at the next wharf, and with him was a seaman, with his hat in his hand, looking very gloomy as he spoke with him.

'I'm sorry, my man, I can't pay you—but I have just raised and scraped the last dollar I can get above water to pay my insurance money to-day, and have not a copper left in my pocket to jingle, but keys and old nails.'

'But I am very much in need sir; my wife is ailing, and my family are in want of a good many things just now, and I got several articles at the store expecting to get money of you to take 'em up as I went along home. We han't in the house no flour, no tea, nor—'

'Well, my lad, I'm sorry. You must come to-morrow. I can't help you unless I sell the coat off my back, or pawn the schooner's kedge. No body pays me.'

The sailor, who had come to get an advance of wages, turned away sorrowful, when the apprentice boy came up and said, in his hearing.

'Here, sir, is five dollars Mr. Furnace owes you. He says when he told you he couldn't pay your bill to-day, he didn't expect some money that came in after you left the shop.'

'Ah, that's my fine boy! Here Jack, take this five dollar bill and come Saturday and get the balance of your wages.'

The seaman, with a joyful bound, took the bill, and touching his hat, sprang with a light heart on shore and hastened to the store where he had already selected the comforts and necessities which his family stood so much in need of.

As he entered, a poor woman was trying to prevail on the store keeper to settle a demand for making his shirts.

'You had better take it out of the store, Mrs. Conway,' he said to her; 'really, I have not taken half the amount of your bill to day, and don't expect to. I have to charge every thing, and no money comes in.'

'I can't do without it,' answered the woman; 'my daughter is very ill, and in want of every comfort; I am out of fire-wood, and indeed I want many things which I have depended on this money to get my shirts done.'

'I'm very sorry, Mrs. Conway,' said the store keeper, looking into his money-drawer; 'I have not five shillings here, and your bill is five dollars and ninepence.'

The poor woman thought of her invalid child and wrung her hands.

'A sailor was here a while ago and selected full five dollars worth of articles, here on the counter, and went away to get his wages to pay for them; but I question if he comes back. If he does and pays for them, you shall have your money, madam.'

At this instant Jack made his appearance in the door.

'Well, ship-mate,' he cried, in a tone much more elevated than when he was discovered speaking with the captain; well, my hearty, hand over my freight. I've got the document, so give us possession! and displaying his five dollar note, he laid hold of his purchases.

The store keeper examining and seeing the note was a good one, bade him take them with him, and then sighing as he took another and last look at the bill, he handed it to the poor widow, who, with a joyful smile, received it from him and hastened to the store.

In a low and very humble tenement, near the water, was a family of poor children, whose appearance exhibited the utmost destitution. On a cot bed, near, lay a poor woman, ill and emaciated. The door opened, and a man in coarse patched garments entered with a wood saw and cross, and laid them down by the door side, and approached the bed.

'Are you any better, dear?' he asked in a rough voice, but in the kindest tones.

'No—have you found work? If you could get me a little nourishing food, I should regain my strength.'

The man gazed upon her pale face a moment, and again taking up his saw and cross, went out. He had not gone far before a woman met him, and said she wished him to follow her and saw some wood for her. His heart bounded with hope and gratitude, and he went after her to her dwelling, an abode but little better than his own for its poverty, yet wearing an air of comfort. He sawed the wood, split and piled it, and received six shillings, with which he hastened to a store for necessities for his sick wife, and then hurried home to gladden her heart with the delicacies he had provided. Till now he had had no work for four days, and his family had been starving; and from this day his wife got better and was at length restored to her family and to health, from a state of weakness which another day's continuance, would probably have proved fatal.

These six shillings, which did so much good, were paid him by the poor woman from the five dollars she had received from the store keeper, and which the sailor had paid him.—The poor woman's daughter also was revived and ultimately restored to health; and was lately married to a young man who had been three years absent and returned true to his troth. But for the five dollars which had been so instrumental in her recovery, he might have returned to be told that she, whose memory had so long been the polar star of his heart, had perished.

So much good did the five dollar bill do which Peter Chancery, Esq. so reluctantly paid to Mr. Last's apprentice boy, though little credit is due to this legal gentleman for the results that followed. It is thus that Providence often makes bad men instruments of good to others. Let this story lead those who think a 'small bill,' can stand because it is a small bill, remember how much good a five dollar bill has done in one single day—and that in paying a series of twenty bills, and dispensing good to hundreds around them.

FEMALE HEROISM.

A pedler and his wife once presented themselves at sundown at the door of a little farm house, at Brie, in France, and requested permission of the farmer to stay over night. A small room was assigned to them, as the farmer's wife was confined to her bed. The next day was Sunday, and the farmer and his servants went to church. The pedler also started to go, and there remained in the house, the wife of the farmer, a new-born infant, the pedler's wife, who feigned illness, and a child six years of age. Scarce had the people gone out, when the pedler's wife, armed with a knife, presented herself at the bed of the sick woman, and demanded her money or her life. The poor woman, sick and weak, delivered up her keys and desired the little boy to show the apartments. She rose softly, followed the pedler's wife without being heard, and having beckoned the child out of the room, locked the door.—She then told the child to run for his father, and desire him to bring assistance. The child did not lose an instant; but, by surprising fatality, met the pedler on the road, who had stolen from the church to assist his wife in the preconcerted robbery. The pedler asked the child where he was going, who incautiously said he was going to seek his father, as an attempt was made to rob them. The pedler said it was now unnecessary, as he himself would go and protect his mother; and taking the child by the hand, returned to the farm. They knocked at the door, but the farmer's wife not recognizing the voice of her husband refused to open it; the pedler made vain efforts to induce her, and finally threatened to cut the child's throat and then break it open. Furious at being unable to prevail upon her, he executed his horrible threat and killed the child.

After committing this useless crime, he tried to get into the house to save his own wife, as time pressed and the farmer might return from church. His attempts failing, he mounted the roof and descended the chimney. The farmer's wife, almost fainting, saw nothing to deliver her from certain death. The wretch was almost down the chimney and about to enter the chamber, when collecting all her strength, she by sudden inspiration drew the pail (straw bed) to the edge of the hearth, and as quickly set fire to it. The smoke in a few minutes enveloped the assassin, who, not being able to reascend, very soon fell into the fire, half suffocated. The farmer's courageous wife lost not her presence of mind, but, while in his half blinded state, struck him several severe blows on the head with the poker which put him beyond the chance of immediately recovering his senses. Exhausted with fatigue and mental agony she herself fell senseless on the carpet of her chamber, and remained in this situation till the farmer and his servants returned from church. The dead body of the child, at the gate of the farm-house, was the first horrible spectacle that struck the eyes of the unhappy father. They forced open the doors, and after having recovered the life of the farmer's wife, they seized the two culprits and delivered them over to justice. The pedler survived his wounds and burns, but both he and his partner received the punishment due to their crime.

LEGISLATIVE INVESTIGATION.

The official conduct of Justin Spear, a Justice of the Peace for the County of Norfolk, became a subject of investigation, before the Judiciary Committee of our Legislature, near the close of the late session. Two petitions, praying for his removal from office, signed in all by three hundred citizens of the County, were presented to the house, and they were referred to the committee above named. The parties were heard by counsel during three evenings, Hon. David A. Simmons for the petitioners, and H. B. Stanton for the defendant. As a result of the investigation, the committee made the following ## REPORT.

The petitioners were required to make a specification of the charges against said Spear.—These charges set forth, that the said Spear had acted corruptly in his official character; that he had urged persons to make complaints on which he had issued warrants; that in many instances, these complaints were wholly unsupported by evidence; that in the trial of criminal prosecutions, he had manifestly and wantonly decided against plain rules of law and evidence; that he had perverted his commission to trading and speculating purposes, and that he is ignorant of the laws and duties of his office, and incompetent to discharge them.

It appeared from the evidence, that since the ninth day of February last, said Spear had issued one hundred and twenty-nine warrants against three persons for violation of the license laws. Upon these complaints there were sixty-five convictions and sixty-four acquittals.

Of the whole number, sixty-five were against Minot Thayer, thirty-six against George Penman, and twenty-eight against Otis Wright. The warrants were all issued upon the complaints of three individuals, who, in a large majority of cases, had no personal knowledge on which to found a complaint. One person testified that he had instituted eighty or ninety complaints, principally upon representations made to him by others. While the violators of the license laws should, in every instance, suffer the penalty, they are entitled to the benefit of the rule, that the complaint shall not be made by a person who has no other grounds for his oath than rumor or suspicion. It did not, however, appear that these complaints were instituted at the request of Mr. Spear, or that there was any corruption in granting warrants thereon.

Your committee are of the opinion that the petitioners failed to substantiate the charges they made; yet the examination fully convinced them that the conduct of Mr. Spear tended to impair the confidence of the people in the tribunals of the Commonwealth.

While they do not consider the present a proper occasion to exercise the power of impeachment or address, they are equally satisfied that the official course of Justin Spear was injudicious, unbecoming a magistrate of the Commonwealth, and deserving of severe reprobation.

For the Committee,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL.

The Committee was constituted as follows:—Hon. Leverett Saltonstall of Salem, Joseph Bell, Esq. of Boston, J. H. W. Page of New Bedford, George S. Boutwell of Groton, Fisher A. Hildreth of Braintree, Aaron Prescott of Randolph, and Ensign H. Kellogg of Pittsfield.—Mr. Kellogg was not present during the investigation, and Mr. Hildreth, we believe, was absent at the last sitting.

In connection with that Report there are some points of facts worthy of notice. And first, to a right understanding of the case, it should be known wherever that "Report" goes, as it is known in the community where the parties reside, that the trio prosecuted not only violated the laws of the State daily, but openly proclaimed their defiance of the Government.

The rum-hole kept by Thayer at Milton Mills is, or was, the vilest sink of corruption with which we have ever come in contact in any country town in the State, and this statement we have repeatedly made before our columns. That kept by Wright, was second in villainy only to Thayer's. Penman's was a little more decent, but he like the others violated the law and defied the Government.

As to the petitioners, we have only to say, strike from that list the tipplers and rum-syn-pathizers, and it would present a sorry appearance in point of numbers. But to the Report.

'The petitioners failed to substantiate the charges they made.' So say the committee. Of what, then, was he guilty, that he deserved such severe censure? Not of 'ignorance of the laws and duties of his office;' not of 'acting corruptly in his official character;' not of 'giving decisions against plain rules of law and evidence;'—for with all these and much more he was charged by the petitioners, and the Committee say they "failed to substantiate the charges they made." What new item in the catalogue of offences did the Committee discover, that had escaped the prying eyes of the petitioners? They say, "the conduct (what conduct?) of Mr. Spear tended to impair the confidence of the people in the tribunals of the Commonwealth." We are persuaded that, with all the respect due to the "Committee," the people of the Commonwealth, when in possession of the facts, will take the liberty to think differently. Without violating "the rules of law and evidence," he has, with a degree of ingenuity, firmness and perseverance which we think entitles him to much credit, extorted from unwilling witnesses sufficient evidence to enable him to convict a majority of the numerous cases brought before him—the largest number of them against one of the vilest sinks of corruption in this Commonwealth. Please to remember, reader, that in doing this, he has not, as the Committee themselves declare, "acted corruptly in his official character," or given decisions "against the plain rules of law and evidence." For what, then, is he so severely censured? We have an intimation in the Report, in the first clause of it, which we have italicized. Please look at it again reader. There is the trouble!

The complainants had no "personal knowledge on which to found a complaint," and the "Committee" refer to a rule, "to the benefit of which," they say, "the violators of the license laws are entitled." But where, most learned Committee, do you find that rule? In a work of high authority, "Davis's Justice," intended for the instruction of magistrates, by the late Solicitor General of Massachusetts, on page 17, we find the following:—

"It is well settled, that a Justice of the Peace may receive a complaint and institute a process upon the probable suspicion of the complainant."

So says the learned author, and so says another gentleman of high authority in the State of Massachusetts—Christopher Common Sense, Esq. Are not men arraigned every day in the year for supposed theft, robbery, counterfeiting, murder, and other crimes, on the complaint of persons who have no absolute "personal knowledge" of their guilt, and yet think they have good grounds for a belief of their guilt. And did not these who made the complaints to Spear, have good grounds for belief? Loafers without number thronged those places daily.—Some went sober and came away drunk. Barrels and hogheads of rum were seen to pass from Boston to those establishments. Besides, the persons complained against declared openly their determination to sell in violation of the law. With these facts before him, to Justice Spear warranted in entertaining complaints so long as successive trials gave him evidence that those men continued to violate the laws of the Commonwealth? We say yes, whoever else may say no.

Justice Spear has been called to perform important duties under circumstances of great difficulty, and to suppose his official conduct faultless in every particular would be to suppose him exempt from the common infirmities of our nature; but we unhesitatingly declare our opinion that no error, either of judgment or intention, was brought to light by that investigation, that justly entitled him to the severe and sweeping censure he has received from the Committee. We by no means arraign their motives. Some of them we know, and believe them to be incapable of doing intentional injustice. But they are men, and therefore may err. We believe they have erred—that they have been misled by crafty and interested men, and have dealt, with a severity uncalculated, with the character of a fellow-citizen. Some of the Committee are not totalitars, if we have been correctly informed; and it is not to be expected that gentlemen should regard with much favor efforts to crush even an iniquitous traffic, while their own practice is helping to sustain it. It is a truth well understood, that a very moderate use of the intoxicating cup will sometimes prejudice the opinions and cloud the minds of good men who mean to be upright.

If we are rightly informed, friend Spear has had abundant occasion for the exercise of his patience—for while the drunkards and tipplers on the whole line from Quincy to Boston were executing him, and the Judiciary Committee at this end of it were censuring his official conduct, some contemptible villians at the other end were "shaving his horse's tail!"—Temperance Journal.

HON. DAVID HENSHAW.

"A refutation by his friends of the calumnies against David Henshaw in relation to the failure of the Commonwealth Bank and the transfer of the South Boston Lands. Published by Beals & Greene Boston."

This publication is a pamphlet of sixty pages, thirty-one of which contain a thorough and closely argued examination of the subjects indicated by the title. The appendix of thirty pages is a mass of incontrovertible evidence, proving most clearly the statements in the text. For many years, we have favourably known the Hon. David Henshaw, and we venture fearlessly to say that in all the relations of life, a more upright man and sincere friend cannot be found among us.

In early life he came into Boston a poor boy, served his time with fidelity in the druggist business, and rapidly rose to the first standing as a merchant. Aside from political prejudices, he gained and ever has retained the unbounded confidence of the mercantile community of our flourishing city. He was fortunate in business, soon became wealthy, and had the accumulation of property been his sole object, he might have long and largely enjoyed the comforts of an independent competency, the reward of honest industry, but Mr. Henshaw

"We cannot agree with the editor of the Temperance Journal as to the character of the Neponset Hotel kept by shines brightest as an intellectual man. For years he has been a profound thinker and reader, and his self-culture is thorough. He is a statesman of the first class. Mr. Henshaw twenty years since was a Senator from Suffolk County for nine years—he was the popular and efficient collector of the port of Boston, a responsible and arduous station. Politically, for fifteen years past, he has been in the minority with the merchants of Boston, but that enlightened class of our fellow-citizens, without distinction of party, have ever awarded to him the well earned reputation of an upright merchant, and an "excellent collector of the customs."

In 1840, Mr. Henshaw represented his native town of Leicester in the popular branch of our State Legislature; in 1843, after Col. Merrick was appointed to the bench, and declined the nomination for which he was then up, the democratic convention of the Worcester District, No. 3, with great unanimity, adopted Mr. Henshaw as the candidate of the democracy for congress.

As an evidence of the respect entertained for Mr. Henshaw in the private relations of life, we find him for many years a Director of the Western Rail Road, and an officer in many of our useful institutions. These show how large he has the respect and confidence of the community around him.

In July last, Mr. Henshaw was invited, unconditionally and without the slightest pledge from President Tyler, to the head of the Navy Department of our country, and under the advice of the leading democrats of Massachusetts accepted the invitation. The manner in which he discharged the duties of Secretary of the Navy is fresh in the recollection of all. He introduced or recommended reforms in the Navy, which, had they been carried out, would have been in a high degree worthy of the reforming spirit of the age and beneficial to the nation. He required every officer of the Navy to be in active service. He introduced retrenchment in its expenditures; and he strongly recommended the abolition of intoxicating drinks from the Navy. Every friend of temperance should honor Mr. Henshaw for this noble stand.

Mr. Henshaw, in common with the prominent men of our country, is not without his enemies and calumniators; some *fin*o professedly of his own political party. The charges by those against him are two-fold—first, that he knew the Commonwealth Bank was about to fail in 1839 and availed himself of this knowledge to his own advantage, while he neglected to secure the funds of the government; and especially that he published a notice to call in the specie checks he had issued in order to palm off upon the fishermen the bills of the Commonwealth Bank; and secondly, the fraudulent transfer of lands in South Boston to the United States in part payment of a debt from the Commonwealth Bank to the United States. In the Pamphlet before us these grave charges are met in gross and detail, and successfully refuted by the most incontestable proof. By this document Mr. Henshaw is exonerated in full from all the charges alleged against him, and the slanders of his enemies are successfully refuted. We recommend the perusal of this publication to every friend of justice. It can be obtained at the counting room of Messrs Beals and Green, Boston.

HENRY CLAY AND SLAVERY.

MR. EDITOR—As the editor of the Aurora so cheerfully resigns his weapons of defence and calls on me to point out when or where he has advanced the idea that Henry Clay is an abolitionist, it only remains to take a retrospective view.

Let us look at the remarks which first appeared in the Aurora. "This—would be light to judge from its classical name—to illumine the moral and political atmosphere of Quincy—first spoke of the virtuous attacks of the Emancipator upon Henry Clay as though he were the main pillar of the institution of Slavery. I have shown by his own acts and speeches that he has been and may now be so considered, unless we can have a full and unequivocal assurance that he has changed his opinions."

Secondly—The Aurora quoted certain resolutions as passed by a State Rights Party of Georgia, opposed to a protective tariff and to the election of Henry Clay to the Presidency. I took no special notice of those resolutions, because I considered them beneath notice. Any man of common sense can see through the object of them; and further if it could be shown that Henry Clay has been a firm supporter of the institutions of slavery, there could be no weight in them.

Thirdly—The Aurora quoted from a certain speech of Clay's delivered in 1827 before the Colonization Society as containing his "real sentiments." I have endeavored to show that such sentiments as contained in those extracts were not the true sentiments of his heart, for his public acts have not been in accordance thereto. It is plain, also, that the Colonization Society has no connection with the abolition of slavery, but on the contrary it serves as a barrier in protection to the system. It owes its very existence to prejudice and interest. Rid the country of free negroes and the property in slaves is enhanced. "None are obliged to follow our example," says a Southern writer, "and those who do not will find the value of their negroes increased by the departure of ours."

Thus, I repeat, Mr. Editor, that the Aurora, tho' it did not say in so many words that Henry Clay is an abolitionist, neither have I said that he did, yet he intended that his readers should infer as every man of discernment would from the tone and style of his remarks, that Henry Clay was in favor of universal freedom, and had ever been, consistent and active to accomplish that object.

Having been called to test these broad assertions, he found he could not maintain his position, and now declares he has only contended that it would be better for the "whig portion of the Liberty party to vote for Clay than any other candidate, and in proof asserts that all their favorite measures would be obtained except one. Now, Mr. Aurora, if you will definitely state, or define, (to prevent all misunderstanding,) what the "favorite measures" of the whigs are, I will accept your challenge, and will endeavor to show that it would not be wise even for a Whig abolitionist to vote the whig ticket.

The Hon. John M. Niles of Connecticut, a United States Senator, who has been detained by ill health, has so far recovered that he has gone to Washington.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1844.

John A. Green, Editor.

FIRE AT WEYMOUTH. On Thursday morning last, about two o'clock, the large double dwelling-house, owned and occupied by Capt. Peter Lane and Thomas B. Porter, Esq., Weymouth Landing, was entirely destroyed by fire with the out buildings and stables attached. The furniture was mostly saved. Mr. Porter was insured on his part of the building at the Hingham Mutual Office in the sum of fourteen hundred dollars; Capt. Lane at the Dedham Mutual Office for twelve hundred dollars on his part. Mr. Porter had also an insurance of four hundred dollars on his furniture. The fire is supposed to have resulted from carelessness on the part of a domestic.

THE JOURNEYMEN STONE-CUTTERS. This class of our citizens remain firm and united in the stand they have taken in reference to a just and fair scale of prices for their labor; and we are gratified to learn that Messrs Wright and Barker have agreed to pay their workmen in accordance with the terms set forth in the bill of prices. May other contractors follow their example.

We have received abundant manifestations that our defence of the journey men stone-cutters has been duly appreciated, notwithstanding the dastardly attacks upon us from other quarters.

UNCOMMON OCCURRENCE. On last Thursday morning, a heavy thunder clapp burst upon the ears of a number of our citizens in this vicinity, emitting at the same time some almost frightful streaks of lightning. The cloud however passed over without causing any material damage.

RAZOR ISLAND. The recent state election has resulted in the success of the anti-Dorr party in both branches of the Legislature.

CONNECTICUT. The whigs have secured a majority in both branches of the Legislature, at the late election, last year the democrats were in the ascendency. No choice of Governor by the people which was the case last year.

MAINE. Another trial has been made to elect two members of Congress, resulting in the choice of a democrat in the seventh district, and no election in the fifth district.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. There has been no election of Commissioners in this County, and another trial is to be made on the 29th inst. Martin Torrey has been elected a Special Commissioner, and there remains one more to be chosen.

NATIONAL MONUMENT TO WASHINGTON. A bill has been reported in Congress, which appropriates about fifty thousand dollars for a national monument to the memory of the "Father of his Country," at Washington, (D. C.) The measure has been introduced to the attention of the House of Representatives by the Hon. Zadock Pratt, of New York, who designed the plan. The Washington Monument Society have in their possession, forty-eight thousand seven hundred dollars; and Mr. Pratt's bill calls for an appropriation of a sum, which, in connection with the above, it is thought will be sufficient to complete the work. The design contemplates not merely a place for the dead, but an enterprise calculated to foster the fine arts. The building or monument will embrace three stories. The crypt or basement is intended to contain the statue of Washington, with niches for the busts of the Presidents of the United States. The second story to contain niches for statue of the illustrious men of the country; and the third to be a saloon or gallery, for paintings of historical or national subjects. The monument is to be one hundred and twenty feet high, and of the same dimensions as the Rotunda of the Capitol, which is one hundred feet in diameter. The whole can be completed in eighteen months for one hundred thousand dollars—the material to be of marble.

FLOATING CHAPEL. A marriage appears in the New York papers, which was solemnized in a chapel built upon the waters. This edifice is of the Gothic order of architecture, erected on a wide deck thirty-six by seventy-five feet, covering two boats of eighty tons each, placed ten feet apart to prevent careening when the congregation might happen to be unequally distributed on either side. Since it has been opened, it has been crowded to overflowing, and quite as many people are seen standing outside during divine services, on Sundays, as can find seats within. It will comfortably accommodate six thousand persons. It may be towed by a steamboat to any place on Long Island Sound, but it is the intention of the active and benevolent society of young men, who are zealously engaged in efforts for the moral and religious improvement of seamen, to keep it permanently moored at the wharf for the next five years, and a lease has been taken of a suitable location for that purpose.

Solomon says in his Proverbs—answer not a fool according to his folly. We approve of the maxim.

THE CONCERT. The natural and charming vocalists—the Misses Maccombs—are to give another concert in this place. Those, who attended their previous entertainment, need no commendation from us, to induce them to go once more. All others should now attend and listen to the rich and enchanting melody of the fair singers, and our word that they will call it a capital treat for a nippence. [See advertisement.]

SNAKES IN A GRAVE. In digging a grave in the burying place, at Griswold, (Conn.) a hole was discovered in the ground, which induced the sexton to make discoveries. He accordingly commenced searching, and to his surprise found a borough about two and a half feet below the surface, from which he extracted sixty-three black snakes, which were from three to five feet ten inches in length, and in a rather torpid state, so that he soon decapitated them all. These snakes would probably average four feet each, and were they placed in a line, would extend more than seventeen rods in length.

KILLING LICE IN HEN-HOUSES. Col Minott Thayer of Braintree said, at a late meeting of the friends of agriculture, etc., in Boston, that he had one hen house which he kept very tight and warm, and that his hens would lay there in winter as well as in summer; and that he occasionally let out his hens, put a pot of burning charcoal in and shut the house tight. In this way he destroys all the vermin that are adhering to the walls.

THE ANNEXATION OF TEXAS. The following admirable paragraph forms the conclusion of Daniel Webster's lately published letter, and is worthy of the profound judgment of the Great "Defender."

It is evident at least, that there must be some boundary, or some limits to a Republic which is to have a common centre. Free and ardent speculations may lead to the indulgence of an idea, that such a Republic may be extended over a whole hemisphere. On the other hand, minds less sanguine, or more chastened by the examples of history, may fear, that extension often produces weakness, rather than strength; and that political attraction, like other attractions, is less and less powerful, as the parts become more distant. In this difference, between ardent speculations, and cautious fears, it seems to me to be the truest wisdom to abide by the present state of things, as acknowledged on all hands, to be singularly happy, prosperous and honorable. In all points of view, therefore, in which I regard the subject, my judgment is decidedly unfavorable to the project of annexing Texas to the United States. "You have a Sparta"—such was the admonition of the ancient prudence—"embellish it!" We have Republic, gentlemen, of vast extent and unequalled natural advantages; a Republic, full of interest in its origin, its history, its present condition, and its prospects for the future. Instead of aiming to enlarge its boundaries, let us seek, rather, to strengthen its union, to draw out its resources, to maintain and improve its institutions of Religion and Liberty, and thus to push it forward in its career of prosperity and glory.

CHANGE OF NAMES. At the late session of the Legislature of this State, the following persons, residing in Norfolk County, had leave to change their names.

Martha Mary Worcester Curtis, a minor of Stoughton, may take the name of Martha Mary Crane Worcester; Joseph S. Matchmore of Braintree, may take the name of Joseph Pratt; Joseph Henry Jackson, and his wife, Susan Hatch Jackson of Braintree, may take the surname of Thayer, in addition to their present names; Sarah Adams of Quincy may take the name of Sarah Hardwick Adams; Sally Wilkinson Lewis of Walpole, may take the name of Sarah Wilkinson Lewis; William Dudley Wells of Roxbury, a minor, may take the name of George William Wells.

TRUE, EVERY WORD OF IT. In his address at the Jackson Jubilee, in New York, Gansevoort Melville said:—

"There are two leading traits in the Irish character, which should not pass unnoticed here. Their strong domestic affections, and unquenchable love of country. Follow the Irish exile, driven forth by the sad condition of things at home—for, disguise it as you may, the true source of the poverty and wretchedness of the Irish people, lies in misgovernment and oppressive laws—the exile seeks a home and country elsewhere; but wherever he may be, wander where he will, he never forgets the mother who watched over his infancy, the companions of his youth, and the land of everything that renders life desirable, impair his health, strip him of his property—a true friend and relative from his side: steep him to the very lips in the whelming slough of poverty, you may deprive him of all else, but you cannot wring from him his love of country. That pure and unselfish love will burn out with a brighter ray amid the atmosphere of penury and privation, and the death-lamps of despair."

"Weaken his body by disease, stretch him on the couch of sickness and the bed of death, his thoughts far away, the home of his childhood flits before his gazing vision, and even as the parting spirit wings its flight, still will his heart find an echo to the cry of Erin Mavourneen, Erin go bragh."

Too TRUE. The subjoined paragraph is from the new novel—Sylvester Sound the Somnambulist. The author deserves a punch under the ribs for telling so much truth in a few lines.

"Villages appear to contain no secrets. If any be suffered to exist at all, they must find it difficult matter to live. They must not ever breathe but in silence; if they do they must instantly die. Everybody knows everybody; everybody talks about everybody; everybody's business is everybody's business, and every one is fair game for the whole. And herein lie the humanities of every seek to know must know something—hence they seek to know each other; they must talk about something—hence they talk about each other; they must laugh at something—hence they laugh at each other; they must denounce something, and they hence denounce each other. This may be called 'pretty'; but then a village is a petty world, containing pretty people, whose general intelligence is therein confined."

In Switzerland the horse chestnut is used as food for sheep. It is first crushed, and about two pounds given to a sheep twice a day. It possesses fattening properties.

A farmer of Penobscot County, (Me.) took a small quantity of potatoes last spring, and divided each potato into four equal parts, planting the butt end, the seed end, and the two centre pieces separate, and the produce was from the butt ends forty pounds; from the seed end forty pounds; and from the centre pieces, both together, one hundred and sixty pounds—showing the superiority of the centre pieces by fifty-eight pounds in the quantity planted.

A shoemaker in Connecticut bought some shoe pegs made of rotten wood. Not being able to use them, he took his knife and sharpened the other end of them and then sold them for outs.

The reading of the Bible in several of the public schools in Philadelphia, has been prohibited by the committees. Reason—the Bible is a sectarian book.

John Tyler has been nominated for the Presidency, and Richard M. Johnson for the Vice Presidency, by a "Tyler State Convention" at Baltimore.

The legislature of Ohio, at the last session passed a law dispensing with militia trainings and providing for the enrolment of those liable to do military duty. The volunteer companies are still to be kept up.

The Middlesex County Commissioners, at a recent meeting in Cambridge, have resolved not to grant any licenses for the sale of ardent spirits.

It costs as much to build and equip a single frigate for sea, as it would to erect seventy large three story brick dwelling houses.

Democratic Tyler State Convention.

In accordance with a vote of the State Central Committee, declaring it expedient to issue a call for a Convention of the friends of the present National Administration, with a view to a more perfect and energetic organization for the Fall Campaign, the undersigned, members of said Committee, hereby give notice, that a State Convention will accordingly be held in FAN-EUL HALL, in Boston, on THURSDAY, the 25th of April, when there will be a general attendance of such of the democratic electors of the Old Bay State as are in favor of the nomination of JOHN TYLER for the Presidency.

As one of the objects of the Convention will be to make arrangements for choosing Delegates to the Democratic Tyler Convention, from every Congressional District in the State, it is to be hoped that a full and effective representation will be sent from all the towns in the Commonwealth. Let the voice of the free and untrammelled Democracy of Massachusetts ring forth once more in favor of Popular Rights, as advocated and sustained by JOHN TYLER—the Patriotic President—the Veto Candidate—the successful negotiator, and the honest man.

APOLLIS MUNN, Suffolk County.
JACOB AMEE, Suffolk County.
GEORGE ROBERTS, Suffolk County.
JOHN HANDY, Barnstable County.
JONATHAN BURNHAM, Jr., Essex County.
J. NAYSON, Suffolk County.
JOHN M. PECK, Middlesex County.
JOHN BOWDLIER, Suffolk County.
THOMAS M. BURNHAM, Norfolk County.
HENRY THAXTER, Plymouth County.
JAMES W. CROOKS, Chairman,
GEORGE ROBERTS, Secretary.

The annual meeting of the Norfolk County Anti-Slavery Society will be held in West Roxbury, in the Union (Mr. Parker's) Meeting-house, on Thursday, 18th of April, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to continue through the day and evening.

The friends of the slave are earnestly invited to attend in large numbers. Mr. Phillips and Mr. Garrison will be present, and a very interesting meeting may be anticipated.

JOSIAH V. MARSHALL, Rec. Secretary.

SLEEP. Nothing has such a tendency to restore the system, as sound and refreshing sleep, a popular writer beautifully remarks:—"All healing sleep soon neutralizes the corroding caustic of care, and blunts even the barbed arrows of the morbid-hearted fiend, Ingratitude;" and by a well-known poet it is described as "Nature's sweet restorer;" yet there are thousands who pass weary and sleepless nights without taking the trouble to ascertain the cause; many resort to opiate, and thus aggravate the evil. PARKS LIFE PILLS will be found to soothe the irritated state of the nerves, and will soon bring the whole system in to that cool and healthy state as will induce sound and refreshing sleep, and thus fit the mind and body for the varied duties of life, which henceforward will be performed with ease and satisfaction.

Quincy, April 13. 3w

The Quincy Point Temperance Union, will, for the present, hold meetings on SATURDAY EVENING, at Temperance Hall, over the Store of George Newcomb, Esq., at seven o'clock, for the discussion of subjects connected with temperance and the general advancement of the cause.

QUESTION FOR DISCUSSION. Do prosecutions, for the violation of the License Laws, promote the cause of Temperance?

The public are respectfully invited to attend and take part in these meetings.

NATHANIEL NASH, Secretary.

The Weymouth and Braintree Union Lyceum will meet at the A. B. Wales' Hall, on MONDAY EVENING next, at seven o'clock.

QUESTION FOR DISCUSSION. Do the Scriptures teach that the Saviour of the world has appeared the second time?

All persons interested in this question are invited to attend.

JOHN O. FOYE, Sec.

The Selectmen of Quincy, hereby give notice that they will be in session, at the Town Hall, the last SATURDAY in each month, until further notice, from two to five o'clock in the afternoon. All persons having business with the Town are requested to present it on said days.

DANIEL BAXTER,
BRYANT B. NEWCOMB,
WILLIAM D. GRAY,

Sixty couple who had been unlawfully living together for years, in London, (Eng.) were married a short time since, in one church, on one day. The warnings and admonitions of a faithful clergyman, who penetrated their vicious abodes, produced this wholesome result.

In New York, lately, an old building was sold for thirty dollars to two Irishmen, on condition that they would remove it. They went to work at it, and in tearing open some of the wainscoting, found a jug, when on examination proved to be a money jug, containing, it is said, nine thousand dollars in old coin.

A gang of coiners was discovered in the woods, some four or five miles south of Warren, (Pa.) lately, and one of their number arrested, together with their press, dies, and other implements of coining, and also a considerable quantity of finished and unfinished coin was found by some of the citizens.

A person is publicly telling his experience as a gambler to the citizens of St. Louis, (Mo.) He asserts that he can tell the faces of all playing cards by certain private marks upon their backs. These marks, he says, are made in the process of manufacturing, meaning, of course, that the card makers are in league with the gamblers. A committee has been appointed to wait on the lecturer for the purpose of testing his assertion.

It is said, splendid carriages may be compared to those ancient temples whose outside was covered with gold within was an ox or an ape.

George Washington Lafayette, son of the late General, has been chosen a member of the French Chamber of Deputies.

The town of Worcester, (Mass.) has appropriated two thousand dollars to defray the expenses of lighting and warming the Town Hall, when used for temperance meetings the present year—a worthy example.

Com. Edmund Pendleton Kennedy, of the United States Navy, lately died at Norfolk, (Va.) aged sixty-five years. He was a native of the State of Maryland, and entered the Navy in 1805; and, at the time of his death, was in command of the ship of the line Pennsylvania, the flag-ship of the Norfolk station.

DIED.

In this town, 8th inst., Mr. John Lockney, a native of Ireland, aged 40.

On the 10th inst., Ellen Frances, daughter of Mr. Caleb and Mrs. Eliza Rowell, aged 2 years.

In Northboro', (Mass.) 24th ult. Mr. John Miller, formerly of Milton, aged 75.

Moral Concert.

BY THE TWIN SISTERS.

THE MISSES MACCOMBS will give a Concert, at the Town Hall, THIS EVENING, April 13th, consisting of moral, temperance and sentimental Songs, Duets, Marches, Quicksteps, etc. Doors open at half past seven o'clock—Concert will commence at eight o'clock precisely. Tickets at admission, 12 1-2 cents.

Boston, April 6.

B. H. NORTON, Auctioneer, No. 7 State Street.

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston.

We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING, ever offered to the public.

Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season. We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all.

Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or tip top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1/2 cts. Blue and other colors 50 cts., GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1.50, Sateen Pants, Canada Gray, etc., etc.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the

Jayne's Carmine Balm.

FROM the Rev. Charles C. P. Crosby. Messrs. A. B. & D. Sands—I am glad to inform you that the medicine sold by you for bowel and summer complaints has proved singularly efficacious in my family.

My wife has for years been extremely liable to most distressing dysentery in hot weather, but by the use of JAYNE'S CARMINE BALSAM, for two seasons, the attack has been obviated in the course of two or three hours. I have known children, when attacked with a violent Diarrhoea, cured immediately by this medicine. I consider Dr. Jayne's medicine prepared with great skill, and highly beneficial to our firm human nature. Yours respectfully,

POETRY.

THE WRECKED MARINER.
BY A. W. K.

'Twas night. The heavens frowned upon the sea—
The rattling thunder echoed through the air,
While meteors flashed along the lurid sky,
Adding terror to the dreadful scene.

Alone,
The fearless sailor steered his fragile bark
Across the foaming waves, although the God
Of Nature seemed pouring forth his vengeance
On the briny flood!

Swiftly he sailed before the whirlwind's power,
And swiftly too he heeded the gates of death.
Terror entered not his soul, but Hope,
That never died within the human heart,
Buoyed his soul above the awful storm.

The skies frowned darker,
And the black array of clouds seemed gathering
Strength to give a final blow. Majestic
Were the heavens. Clothed in robes of wrath they
In triumph on the troubled sea, and mocked
His furious struggles.

The lightning blazed at last,
And lo! a thunderbolt, illumining
The sky as down from heaven it came, shattered
The trembling boat. The unscarred Mariner,
Swallowed in the ocean's wave, seized upon
A floating spar, and, beaten by the sea,
Was hurried on toward the rocky coast,
Where Death stood waiting for his care-worn soul.

A moment passed,
And lo! high up the rugged rocks, unseen
By man, the weary Mariner was thrown,
A breathless corpse!

THE LORDS OF CREATION.

The Lords of creation, men we call,
And they think they rule the whole;
But they're no more than mistaken after all,
For they're under woman's control,
As ever since the world began,
It has always been the way,
For did not Adam, the very first man,
The very first woman obey?

Ye Lords who at present hear my song,
I know you will say;
Our sizes more large, our nerves more strong,
Shall the stronger the weaker obey!
But think not tho' these words we hear,
We shall e'er mind the thing you say;
For as long as a woman's possessed of a tear
Your power will vanish away.

But should there be so strange a sight
As not to be moved by a tear,
Though much astonished at the sight,
We shall still have no cause to fear:
Then let them please themselves awhile,
Upon their fancied sway,
For as long as woman's possessed of a smile,
She will certainly have her own way.

Now ladies, since I've made it plain,
That the thing is really so,
We'll even let them hold the rein,
But we'll show them the way to go;
As ever since the world began,
It has always been the way,
And we'll manage it so that the very last man,
Shall the very last woman obey.

SPRING.

Come wreath again our leafless bowers,
And clothe once more our fields with flowers:
Spread, spread abroad thy mantle green,
And I will hail thee, young May Queen!

For winter drear now bids adieu,
With joy we turn our thoughts to you!
Then do not tarry, gentle Spring,
But round thy fairy bow-ties fling!

I'll woo thy presence with a prayer,
To deck with gems the lov'd parterre;
I'll woo thee as a gentle maid,
To spread abroad thy leafy shade.

The feather'd tribes shall send along
To thee a heartfelt, grateful song;
All nature will at once to thee
Direct its tuneful minstrelsy.

Then gentle Spring, ah, now retreat
Thy rosy path with smiling feet;
And to thine altar will we bring
Our heart's best, holiest, offering.

ANECDOTES.

A wealthy family in Philadelphia, having hired a cook who had been highly recommended to them, she was ordered one day to prepare among other things, a 'hash' for dinner. The hash came, and it was clearing—all eagerly partaking of it until the dish was scraped out. So popular after this, did the hash of the new cook become, that it was nothing but hash every day. At last the poor cook bringing in a large dish of it, the perspiration pouring down her face, which was as red as coal of fire, she set it down, and turning to her mistress and drawing herself up said, 'Madam, I strikes!' 'Strikes! why, what is the matter Betty?' 'Cause madam, my jaws are all broke down, and my teeth are all wore out, chewing it up for yours!'—The whole table laughed.

'Why, mother, almost every word in John's letter is spelt wrong. You'd not have me marry such a man, surely.' 'La, me! I suppose that is the way to spell in the town where he lives. They have different fashions from us in every thing.'

A clergyman was once catechizing a class of children belonging to his congregation, and coming to a little boy who was something of a rogue, he asked him what he knew. 'I know something,' replied theurchin with a significant look. 'Well, my son, what do you know?' asked the pastor. 'I know where there is a bird's nest,' said the boy, 'but I shan't tell you for fear you will steal the eggs,' answered the unsophisticated juvenile.

'Take care of the paint,' as the French girls say when a gentleman goes to kiss them.

DR. BUTLER,

NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposture, prevails to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the fulsome description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sex, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,
FOR THE CURE OF

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obstructed Catarrhus, Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The completion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not content that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant.

Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine. To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician.
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From Wm. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine: Sir, I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast entailing upon me the worst of all human diseases, to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of this bottle of this excellent preparation.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark: Sir, I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wm. Abercrombie, and believe that his general health is such that he is well qualified to decline to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dizziness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,
IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast en-tailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.
Quincy, April 26, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

Dear Sir—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of spitting blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times was very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and rigidity of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, &c.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think every physician of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,
IBRAHIM BARTLETT.
Quincy, May 26, 1843.

Price, $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.00.

MISCELLANY.

THE AUCTION.

It was a tempestuous night, the winds whistled fearfully, and hail stones whose size threatened to demolish the windows rattled against them with a determined pertinacity as if to test their strength. In the parlor of a fine old fashioned house, beside rather a comfortable fire on such a night, were seated the family of Mr. Sunderland, consisting of himself, wife, daughter, and a faithful maid servant. A heavy glow, more of sorrow than of anger, rested on each brow, not even excepting that of the maid servant alluded to, from whose eager glances, ever and anon cast toward the family group, the close observer would have noted the deep interest she took in the cause of their grief.

The picture was a melancholy one, for virtue in distress had no light shade to relieve it; all around and about it, is dark and sombre. The sensitive artist would have thrown aside his pencil, if the subject had been presented to his view, and we have described it, and his heart would not have been transferred to the canvass.

'To-morrow,' observed Mr. Sunderland, 'is the anniversary of the melancholy death of our dear Henry—to-morrow will be ten years since the vessel in which he sailed was lost, and all on board perished—all—all.'

'Alas!' exclaimed his wife, as the tears coursed their way down her cheeks, 'to-morrow will be a melancholy day.'

'Indeed it will, for to-morrow this house which belonged to my father—the furniture which time has made, as it were, a part of ourselves, and associated with many a pleasant event in our lives, is to be sold—torn from us by the unrelenting hands of creditors; but, thank Providence, misfortune, not crime, has reduced us to this stage of poverty.'

'Will they sell every thing,—Pa—can we secure nothing?' asked the daughter.

'No! my child, unless with what little money a friend has generously loaned me, I can secure a few articles. Ellen, my dear, take your pencil and put them down: first, the sideboards, two beds, sofa, chairs, and kitchen things. The sideboard, it is true, will be to us now a superfluous piece of furniture, but it belonged to my mother, and I cannot—will not part with it.'

'But my piano, Pa!—must go?'

The wife sighed, the father cast his eyes toward the flickering fire, and the daughter was silent. The fate of the piano was decided upon. A melancholy pause in the conversation plainly told how severe was the alternate—for the law never studies the feelings of its victims when exacting the penalty of a bond.

'Go, Mary,' said Mr. Sunderland, addressing the servant, 'go and request the Sheriff's officer, who is watching the property to walk into the parlor; he is only doing his duty—no doubt it is painful to him, as it is distressing to us. Let him have a seat at our fire, and a glass of wine, for it is a severe night.'

'It is indeed a fearful night,' observed Mrs. Sunderland, 'and we have behaved rude to this man.'

'Mother, I made a fire in the room where he is, but—'

'Speak out child—it was with the last stick.'

'Father, it was—'

Mary returned with the officer, a polite, gentlemanly man, for such should be the character of men who have to perform a part of the drama of life, not unlike that of the inquisitors of old, whose province it was to torture by the rack, with this difference, however—theirs was a physical torture—ours a mental one, administered with all the nicety and precision of legal justice! The officer politely accepted the invitation—tasted the wine, and endeavored to cheer his victims, by enumerating many cases of a similar kind, equally poignant and distress-sing. Thus the evening passed heavily and cheerlessly away.

On the morning of the contemplated sale, there was to be seen a crowd of people flocking to the house of Mr. Sunderland. Some out of sheer, heartless curiosity, friends of the family, who came with mockery on their lips—and empty purses. Others with an intent to purchase, but not one among the crowd showed the least desire to aid, assist or sympathize with the distress of the family. This is the world; we laugh at the misfortunes of our fellow creatures, and even mock their distresses, by witnessing in silence their sufferings.

The auctioneer was now making his arrangements, by flourishing his hammer, rolling his eyes, and using his tongue. The motley crowd gathered around him. The house was put up first, it was accurately described—free from all incumbrances, and subject to but a very small ground rent. It was started at five thousand dollars. There were several bidders, all of whom seemed anxious to purchase it. Seven thousand five hundred dollars was at last bid, upon which the auctioneer dwelt for a moment. Mr. Sunderland compressed his lips together, and muttered to himself, 'it cost my father fifteen thousand dollars.'

Seven thousand five hundred dollars, going—once—twice—three times—for the last time going—eight thousand—thank you, sir—going at eight thousand once—eight thousand twice—eight, three times—going—gone—what name? 'Clifford was the response, and all eyes rested on a tall, noble looking man, who had remained silent during the rapid bidding of the speculators—and who, as the whisper went round, was a total stranger.

'It is gone,' whispered Mr. Sunderland to his wife, as he pressed her hand in silent grief. 'We have no home now.'

'Now, gentlemen,' cried the auctioneer, 'we will sell this sideboard, in regard to which I am requested by the creditor to say that it is an old family piece, and it is the wish of the owner to retain it, if possible. I merely mention this, as it is known to you under what peculiar circumstances the things are sold.' This had the desired effect—no one seemed willing to bid against the unfortunate man, who started it at ten dollars. Twenty was bid by Mr. Clifford; twenty-five from Mr. Sunderland; fifty from Mr. Clifford silenced the anxious parents and the family piece of furniture was knocked down to the new owner of the house. A gentleman who stood by remarked that the act was a cold, heartless one. 'Was it,' sarcastically asked Mr. Clifford, 'then, sir, why did you not buy it for him?'

Mr. Sunderland was much affected at this little incident. 'He little knows how much he has lacerated this heart. But I will purchase the piano for my child. He stepped up to Mr. Clifford, and told him the desire he had to purchase the piano for his daughter, and hoped he would not bid against him.

'Sir,' said the stranger, 'I will not deceive you, as much as I respect your feelings, and the sympathy of this good company; I cannot, nay, will not, alter the determination made when I first entered this house.'

'And pray, sir, what may that be?'

'To purchase every thing in it, and by heaven, I'll do it, though I pay double price.'

'Strange,' muttered Mr. Sunderland, as he found his family in another part of the room.

The stranger fulfilled his promise, and actually bought every thing, from the house itself down to the very axe in the cellar!

After the sale was over, and the company had retired, Mr. Clifford requested the auctioneer to walk with him to an adjoining room. After the lapse of a few moments they both returned to the parlor where the family still remained. The auctioneer looked around, gave a knowing smile; wished them all a good day, and as he left the room was heard to say, 'I never heard of such a thing; a perfect romance, ha! ha! ha!'

'You are now,' observed Mr. Sunderland to Mr. Clifford, the owner of this house and furniture—they were once mine—let that pass.'

'I am, sir, for the time being your landlord, I understand you, sir, but will not long remain your tenant; I was going to observe however, that there are two or three articles which I am anxious to purchase, that sideboard for instance—it is a family relic—I will give you the fifty dollars the price you paid, and I feel assured under the circumstances, you will not refuse me this favor?'

'I cannot take it, sir.'

'Obdurate—ungrateful man.'

'Will you not let Pa buy my piano, sir?' humbly asked Ellen. 'He will give you the price at which it was sold.'

'It is painful for me young lady to refuse even this—I will sell nothing—not even the wood saw in the cellar.'

'Then, Mr. Clifford,' exclaimed Mr. Sunderland, 'we have no further business here; come, my dear—Ellen, get your band box—let us quit this house—we are not even free from insult. Where is Mary?'

'I am here, sir—the key of my trunk is lost, and I am fastening it with a rope.'

'Stop, my girl—but methinks I purchased that trunk?' coolly observed the stranger.

'Mr. Clifford—I am not so old, but that I can resent an insult—nay, will, if you carry this arrogant, and to me, strange conduct much further; the poor girl has been to me and mine the best, and I may say the only friend: she has remained with us in poverty, assisted us in our distresses, not only with her purse but her hands; she is to me not as a servant, but one of my family—for there is—thank heaven—no such base distinctions in poverty, that exists in a state of bloated wealth. Here—here—with nothing but we have upon our backs—the master and the servant are equal. She is part of my family, and I will protect her from insult. That trunk is hers, and who dare take it from her? Not you sir!'

Mr. Clifford cast his eyes upon Mary, who at that moment arose from the floor—for a moment they gazed upon each other in silence—'And she you say has been to you a friend.'

'Indeed she has—a kind, noble one.'

'Mr. Sunderland, stay—one moment, my good girl, put down that trunk—take a seat madam; permit me, to hand you a chair; Mr. Sunderland will you be seated?—I have yet some thing more to say. When you requested me to yield up the wish I had to purchase this sideboard I told you that it was my determination to buy it, and I tell you now, that I will not sell it.'

'This, Mr. Clifford, needs no repetition.'

'Aye, but it does, and when that young lady made the same request for her piano my answer was the same. Stop, sir—hear me out—no man would act so without a motive; no one, particularly a stranger would court the displeasure from a crowded room, and bear up against the frowns of many without an object. Now I had an object—and that was—be seated, sir—Madam, your attention—that object was, to buy this house and furniture for the sole purpose of restoring to you and yours again!'

'Sir, is this not a cruel jest?'

'Is it possible?'—exclaimed mother and daughter.

Amazement took possession of Mary, and her trunk fell to the floor with a crash, causing her small stock of clothing to roll out, which she eagerly gathered up, and thrust back, without any regard to the manner with which it was done.

'The auctioneer,' continued Mr. Clifford, 'has my instructions to have the matter arranged by the morrow. In the mean time, you are at home; Mr. Sunderland, you are in your own house—and I, the intruder.'

'Intruder, sir? Oh say not that—I will not tell you what a relief this knowledge is to me, but I am yet to learn how I am to repay you for all this, and what could have induced you, a total stranger, thus to step forward. Ah! a thought strikes me—gracious Heaven! Can it be! look on me Mr. Clifford—nay start not! The stranger actually recoiled from the glance of Sunderland's eye—look on me, sir—has that girl—that innocent girl—who stands trembling there any interest in this generous act of yours?—speak, sir, and let me know at once, that I may spurn your offer and resent the insult.'

'I will not deny, sir, but that she has.'

'Me, father, dear father! I never before saw the gentleman's face.'

'Say not so, Miss—'

'Sir—I—indeed father, I—'

'Remember, ten years back—call to mind a light haired boy, whom you called—'

'Brother—'

'Gracious heaven—Henry—my boy!'

'Is here—I am your long lost son!'

'Need we add more? Our readers can readily imagine that a more cheerful fire blazed upon the hearth, and that Mary, the faithful servant, was not forgotten in the general joy which prevailed on this occasion.

THE CASE OF JUSTIN SPEAR.

Sol et Aquilo certant uter sit fortior. Est conventum ab illis expertis viros in victorem; ut ferat palmam, qui excussit mantum. Boreas egredior viatorem horrisson nimis; at ille non desistit depicere amicum gradiendo. Sol expertus viros nimboque paulatim exiit emittit radios. Vultor incipit astutare, sudare undare: tandem nuptius protulit residet sub foudato nemore. Ha victoriora contrahi sol.

MR. EDITOR.—The above fable indicates the views and feelings of a very large majority of all virtuous, honest and disinterested moral reformers. The doctrine of love, kindness, and forbearance, practically carried out, is, per se, calculated to reform and convert the world. It must be then an admitted and well established fact, that those measures directly at variance with measures prompted by such principles have, necessarily, a retarding influence. Let me say, Mr. Editor, by way of an explanation in regard to my own personal views and feelings on the subject of temperance, that I am a sincere and devoted friend to the cause, and ardently desire the entire abolition of the sale and use of all that can possibly intoxicate; therefore, I must avow my only reason for writing this communication is the promotion of sound and consistent efforts in its behalf. I do fully believe that the success of any cause depends upon the proper, judicious, and well directed efforts of friends. What inference then can I draw from the conduct of a man who in his own estimation, one would suppose by his arrogance, stands at the head of the great and good cause of temperance—one, who by common consent has certainly made some noise in the community—a man, by common consent too, who is highly injudicious in his measures and unsparing and even libelous in his language bearing the title of Doctor? I answer my own interrogative—he is a dead weight to the cause, a moral pestilence to its friends, and destruction and death, for time and eternity, to thousands of our fellow-citizens, neighbours and friends who might be reformed and saved by truly benevolent efforts.

But, let me refer the citizens of Norfolk County and of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to the last number of the "Temperance Journal," that they may see in what manner this ex-Doctor (by the way I cannot inform the reader of this article whether the gentleman was a doctor of law, physic or divinity) comes down with the thunder bolts of his wrath upon the heads of three hundred of your citizens, who in accordance with one of their most sacred and important rights, peaceably petition the legislature to abolish a serious grievance—to interpose in behalf of the public good—to restrain or put a stop to the operations of, as is fully believed by the community, a trading, speculating and ignorant Justice of the Peace—to save the Commonwealth some thousands of dollars—to preserve law and good order in the community—to perpetuate the confidence of the people in the tribunals of the country, and secure the just and equal administration of all laws, and the rights of all the people. And what course does he pursue in relation to this measure? Why, the peaceable, virtuous and truly honest citizens of Norfolk County are not only subjected to the abuse and to the inconvenience of repelling vile attacks, but he bends his bow and twang goes his poisoned and malicious arrow at the "Judiciary Committee" in the House of the late session of the legislature, whose patient investigations, as far as time and interested testimony would allow, the proceedings of a Justice of the Peace whose moral character for honesty and truth are well known in this vicinity, and whose official character may be learned, in a measure, by the report of this learned Committee.

I ask the citizens of Norfolk County to examine the conduct of this very benevolent Doctor and enlightened and experienced jurist towards the men chosen from the peoples' representatives as the standing judges in all judiciary matters, and say if our laws are safe—if our good institutions can be perpetuated—if the interests of the glorious cause of temperance can be promoted if such men are allowed to hurl their darts not only as citizens at large, but at our most sacred institutions and organizations, and also at the peoples' law makers and the peoples' chosen rulers? The committee alluded to consisted of the Hon. Leverett Saltonstall of Salem, a thorough bred lawyer, a gentleman highly eminent in his profession, of long practice and experience, late a member of Congress, Chairman, Joseph Bell, Esq. of Boston, J. H. W. Page, Esq. of New Bedford; Fisher A. Hildreth, Esq. of Dracut, Geo. S. Boutwell, Esq. of Groton, Aaron Prescott, Esq. Randolph, and E. H. Kellogg, Esq. of Pittsfield. Here are the men who after knowing some of the facts in the case, and deliberating upon them reported to the House, which report was accepted, that "THE CONDUCT OF MR. SPEAR TENDS TO IMPAIR THE CONFIDENCE OF THE PEOPLE IN THE TRIBUNALS OF THE COMMONWEALTH."

To which the incomparable Doctor replies, "We (i. Doctor Jewett) are persuaded that with all the respect due to the committee the people of the Commonwealth, when in possession of the facts will take the liberty to think differently."

It will at once be seen, by this quotation, that this great and notable Doctor, in his own estimation, at least, far exceeds in judgment and legal knowledge this honorable and intelligent committee. As the Doctor makes intimations in regard to facts, I will in this connection present one or two. Here is a man engaged in business—gets deeply in debt—goes into chancery—obtains a Justice of the Peace Commission by a very hard struggle, as his most enlightened, judicious and influential townsmen considered him wholly unfit and unqualified for the office—(If any one doubts this fact, I will refer them to the papers on file in the Secretary's office, or to the Hon. Sam'l P. Loud, who was at the time a member of the Council,) after obtaining a discharge from his creditors—opens shop again and keeps a few articles, such as "pop beer" etc. and in the multiplicity of his many cares and business employs an agent or clerk—out of one hundred and twenty nine complaints received by the said Justice Spear, against three individuals, about ninety of them were made by the said Spear's very benevolent and vigilant Clerk; and the majority of the remainder of the complaints were made by a young man who boarded in the family of the said Spear's agent, they entering that unheard of number of complaints under oath; and both admitted at the hearing before the "Committee" that they were not personally acquainted with any facts, purporting to be embraced in those complaints. To the report on this point. "The warrants were all issued upon the complaints of three individuals, who, in a large majority of the cases had no personal knowledge on which to found a complaint." "The person" (Mr. Spear's agent) testified, that he had made eighty or ninety complaints, principally upon representations made to him by others."

I ask the people, who have been insulted and abused, and whose rights have been trampled upon, to look at these "facts" which are probably some of the "facts" to which the learned Doctor points you. But, further, the judgment, honesty and ability of the "Judiciary Committee" having been disposed of as is seen by the above quotation, this pure minded, virtuous and incomparably wise Doctor pounces upon their characters, thus, "We (i. e., I, Charles Jewett) believe they have erred—that they have been misled by crafty and interested men, and have dealt with a severity unequalled for the character of a fellow citizen. Some of the Committee are not teetotalers, if we have been correctly informed; and it is not to be expected that gentlemen should regard with much favor efforts to crush even an iniquitous traffic, while their own practice is helping to sustain it."

But, again, in order to prove the inability of the "Judiciary Committee," this legal Doctor makes a quotation from "Davis' Justice," which in his own mind, not only settles the point that the Committee "erred," but also the right, usage and justice of receiving complaints and instituting processes upon the probable suspicion of the complainant. Were those complaints entered on suspicion, thou most sapient Doctor? Complaints made upon probable suspicion, when a solemn oath was made, or purported to have been made, to the truth of the complaints! Look at the proceedings of Justice Spear in connection with this point, who did not in an individual case even summons the complainant to appear in court and testify, and the self constituted District Attorney would not allow him so to do in any of those named cases tried before him. But, to similar cases in Lowell. "A man by the name of Daniel A. Cressy, the Lowell informer, who had previously presented twenty-four liquor cases, was in attendance on the Grand Jury, and entered eight more complaints. Mr. Parker, County Attorney, had received an intimation that Cressy was about to migrate to the west, and on Wednesday he sent up Constable Leighton to Lowell after him, and as soon as he was brought into court, he had him put under twelve thousand dollars bonds to appear and testify. But here is a Justice of the Peace, who should be in all respects a conservator of the peace, and whose only duty consists in keeping the peace, receiving complaints and issuing warrants to the number of one hundred and twenty-nine in the course of a few days at the expense of the Commonwealth and perhaps of perjury! Is such a course lawful, just and right, and for the interest of the cause of temperance? I for one say no, and every true friend to the temperance cause—every good citizen in the Commonwealth will echo back in one concentrated thunder tone—no.

I would therefore call upon the judicious part of the community—upon the true friends of the Heaven born and Heaven sustained cause of temperance—to mark such men as Ex-Doctor Charles Jewett—all such pretenders—to brand them as the devil's most appropriate tool to retard, if not ultimately make ship-wreck of the glorious cause! On, then, let every judicious effort be put forth in behalf of every species of reform, and let the most untiring, mighty and concentrated efforts be made to put down all wrong, all evil, and all oppression.

QUORUM.

"PRESS ON."

This is a speech, brief, but full of inspiration, and opening the way to all victory. The mystery of Napoleon's career was this—under all difficulties and discouragements, "press on!" It solves the problem of all heroes—it is the rule by which to weigh rightly all wonderful successes and triumphal marches to fortune and genius. It should be the motto of all, old and young, high and low, fortunate and unfortunate, so called.

"Press on!" Never despair; never be discouraged, however stormy the heavens, however dark the way; however great the difficulties, and repeated the failures. "Press on!"

If fortune has played false with thee to-day, do thou play true for thyself to-morrow. If thy riches have taken wings and left thee, do not weep thy life away; but be up and doing, and retrieve the loss by new energies and action. If an unfortunate bargain has deranged thy business, do not fold thy arms, and give up all as lost; but stir thyself and work the more vigorously.

If those whom thou hast trusted have betrayed thee, do not be discouraged, do not idly weep, but "press on!" find others; or, what is better, learn to live within thyself. Let the foolishness of yesterday make thee wise to-day. If thy affections have been poured out like water in the desert, do not sit down and perish of thirst, but press on—a beautiful oasis is before thee, and thou mayest reach it if thou wilt. If another has been false to thee, do not thou increase the evil by being false to thyself. Do not say the world has lost all its poetry and beauty; 'tis not so; and even if it be so, make thine own poetry and beauty, by a brave, a true and above all, a religious life.

BEST WAY TO BE HAPPY.

Never set down and brood over trouble of any kind. If you are vexed with yourself or the world, this is no way to obtain satisfaction. Find yourself employment that will keep your mind active, and depend upon it this will force out unwelcome thoughts.

Who are the poor? Are they the industrious? Those who labor, provided their gains are small, have generally a feeling of independence with that little akin to the rich man's treasures.

Who are the unhappy? Are they not those who are inactive, and sit still and tell us, if for fortune had only thrown this and that chance in their way, they should have been far happier?

It seems to me that there is a great defect in the conduct of the unfortunate. If we are deprived of ordinary resources, instead of looking round and substituting other things, are we not prone to sit down and mourn what we have lost? This deadens the energies, kills the activity of our natures, and makes us useless drones, when we should be working like bees.

Besides this, indolence sets fancy to work, and presently we imagine ourselves to be in a condition that we are unfit for work. We get the habit of observing the change of the wind, we feel our pulses, look at our tongue, and in a short time become regular dyspeptics. Industry then preserves health as well as happiness.

EFFECTS OF PERSECUTION. Daniel O'Connell, in a late publication, says, when the religious persecutions began against the Catholics of Ireland, the Protestants in that country numbered two millions. Since then, with power, wealth, rank, honors, all on the prosecuting side, counterbalanced by degradation, suffering and despair on the other, the Protestants remain one million, and the Catholics have increased to seven millions—though millions have been driven to exile, by famine and cruelty, and scattered over the face of the earth.

NOVEL MACHINE. A curious exhibition is opened in New York, where there is a machine that hatches eggs at the rate of thirty or forty thousand a year. It consists of a square box, containing seven or eight drawers, on which the eggs are placed, and which is heated throughout at a gentle uniform temperature, by means of warm water. About one thousand eggs can be thus artificially incubated in the course of twenty-one days. The chickens produced are apparently as healthy as those brought out by the natural process. It is certainly interesting to the physiologist to observe the nascent animal, in all the stages of its embryonic development, from the first little white speck on the yolk, to the completely formed and organized body, ready to pick the shell, and run about the floor. This machine is simple in its construction, and so small that it could be conveniently used in any farm house.

HEADACHE. Food taken into the stomach of a person of weak digestion immediately before retiring to rest, lodges there during the greater part of the night very little altered; thus acting as an irritant for so many hours on an organ already too sensitive, can it be surprising that the patient should awake in the morning with a headache? But it frequently happens that the change the food has undergone during sleep, is not merely imperfect in kind, by unwholesome likewise in its nature, and the crudity generated by the morbid process usually abounds with acidity.

ADVERTISING—SPRING BUSINESS. This is the period when all persons engaged in business make known their places of residence, and stock of goods, by advertising. In New York they understand all the advantages of advertising extensively; and accordingly all kinds of business are more brisk and thriving in New York, than any other place. "The more advertising, the more business," is the New York motto; and every day fulfills it to the letter. The business of all is worth an advertisement serves at once both as a directory, and a knowledge of the goods to be obtained at the most eligible price.

I DON'T CARE. Yes you do care. You are only in a pet now, and when you are sobered down and have reflection, you will care. Certainly the world don't care about you, and would wag on as its wont, were you annihilated at this moment; but unless you care far world you are ruined at once. It is of no avail to get into a pet, and use harsh language and denounce every body around you. It is not a wise spirit that is harbored in your heart—it is the spirit of evil. While you live you will have much to perplex and torment you, but it is very unwise to spit fire, bite your thumbs, and shake your fists at all who come within your reach. Bear up and preserve a stout heart and kind look. Such a spirit will be worth possessing.

EXCELLENT SCHOOL BOOKS.

MR. EDITOR.—Swan's Primary School Readers, parts second and third, have appeared, and though the public had been expecting much from him their anticipations have been more than realized. Mr. Swan goes on the principle of teaching one thing at a time, and that thoroughly. In his books the lessons are so arranged that each succeeding one becomes harder, so that with every new lesson the pupil advances higher in the art of reading, in a clear distinct and forcible manner. We have never seen a series of books so well calculated to do away with that monotonous drawl now prevalent in many of our best schools, by which the interest in reading is destroyed while the sense barely escapes manslaughter.

Neither do our Committees do their duty in this respect. Some are ready to fine fault with the reading in our grammar schools, when the foundation was laid in the primary, and even then proceeded more from a deficiency in the books used than any remissness on the part of teacher or pupils. Let them then carefully examine the books of Mr. Swan, and they will be convinced of their superiority over those now in use, and as fast as new ones are required let these be introduced, and more will be done to correct the abusive habit of reading now in use, than the best efforts of teachers could do, aided by occasional lectures from a committee.

A TEACHER.

THE LABORER. Such is the name of a newspaper, recently started in Boston, by Leonard Cox, Jr. As its title implies, and to judge from the numbers we have seen, it advocates and sustains with candour and power the great interests of the working-men. It should be liberally patronized.

The following excellent article in reference to the strike of the journeymen stone-cutters is extracted from the columns of the "Laborer."

"The journeymen stone-cutters of Quincy, Milton, Dorchester, and vicinity, were on a strike a few days since, in consequence of the refusal on the part of employers to agree to a scale of prices which shall be at once uniform, and furnish the industrious workman a fair compensation for his toil. Nothing can be more just or equitable. The competition and shuffling among workmen, in consequence of the cupidity and competition among employers, is one of the greatest causes of the ruinous depreciation of labor, which grinds upon the mechanic, and robs him of his honest due. If employers will not voluntarily bestow a fair and living profit upon those they employ, the latter have no other resource than a combination for mutual defence, in opposition to the combinations which are formed against them.

A regular and acknowledged price for labor not merely secures a comfortable support to the hard working man, and puts an end to the ruinous competition among laborers, but secures to the employer a safer and more stable ground for investment, and a fairer and less variable profit. It is not for the interest of the laborer alone that a just compensation should be paid to industry; the master workman receives the like benefit; a more wholesome state of things exists throughout the whole community; a thousand temptations for fraud and violence are removed; and the increase of human happiness consequent is almost incalculable. These things are not sufficiently considered. The policy of the employer too often is, (thank God, not always), to secure as great an amount of labor for as low a price as possible, no matter how much misery to the individual, or evil to the community is the consequence. Let laborers assert their own rights, if they will not be allowed by others; and by justice and union they will obtain that which they desire, and is their due."

TOWN MEETING.

A meeting of the Inhabitants of this Town was held on Tuesday last, and continued by adjournment to Thursday, of which Dr. William B. Dugan was elected Moderator.

Voted.—To reconsider the vote whereby the Town agreed to purchase the Faxon Shop Lot and built thereon a Town House; and also the vote authorizing the Town Treasurer to take a Deed of said lot. Yeas 327—nays 281.

Voted.—To authorize the Town Treasurer to purchase forthwith the lot of land offered by Daniel French, Esq., upon which to build a Town House. Yeas 325—nays 220.

Voted.—To reconsider the vote of a previous meeting to build the Town House of wood and that it be built of stone. Yeas 316—nays 233.

Voted.—To provide a suitable room above ground in the new Town House for the Quincy Light Infantry.

Voted.—That Messrs. Daniel Baxter, Benjamin Page, James Newcomb, John Souther, George Veazie, chosen at a former meeting, with the addition of Messrs. Solomon Willard, Henry Wood, George W. Beale, William Torrey, Abel Wright, Thompson Baxter, Levi G. Folsom, Ebenezer Jewett, Jonathan Jameson and John A. Simpson, constitute a Building Committee on the Town House.

Voted.—To give the Building Committee discretionary power as to the plan, etc., of the Town House. Yeas 226—nays 124.

Voted.—To request the Building Committee to have the Town House completed by the first day of November ensuing.

Voted.—To dissolve the meeting.

COMMISSIONERS' ELECTION. The Board of Examiners for Norfolk County have counted the votes duly returned, and the following synopsis is the result of the election. Monday, the 25th of the present month, has been appointed for another trial.

CAN'T UNDERSTAND. What does the editor of the Worcester Sentinel mean, when he says in mentioning the triumph of his political adversaries in the election of County Commissioners—"a new look out for more of the Quincy granite."

MECHANICS' FAIR. The Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association will hold its fourth exhibition for the encouragement of Manufacturers and the Mechanic Arts, at Quincy Hall, Boston, to commence on the sixteenth of September next.

GOLD DOLLARS. A bill has been introduced into Congress to authorize the coining of one dollar gold pieces. This will be very convenient for travellers.

ASSESSMENT AND TAXATION. A case has been recently decided in Berkshire County, in this State, in which a citizen obtained damages of the Assessors of a town in that County, for neglecting to tax him. The Judge instructed the jury that in the assessment of taxes, Assessors were liable only for want of integrity and fidelity on their part—that if they knew that the plaintiff was an inhabitant, they were responsible for not taxing him, or if they were ignorant of the fact, and did not use due diligence to acquire correct information in regard to the plaintiff's residence, they were also liable—that it was the duty of Assessors to take reasonable pains to ascertain who were, and who were not, taxable in their respective towns—to tax those who were properly liable, and to omit those who were not, and their neglect or refusal in either of these respects would be a violation of integrity and fidelity.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff of one hundred dollars damages.

BOSTON TRANSCRIPT. This constant visitor at the houses of the elegant and the learned, has put on an extremely handsome new dress. It is worthy of its position among its contemporaries, truly remarks the editor of the Boston Traveller, and of the fair lady who wields with so much grace and ability the editorial pen.

TRIAL OF THE GORDONS. The trial of John Gordon and William Gordon, in Providence, accused of the murder of Amasa Sprague, which has occupied the Supreme Court for nine days, has been concluded. The jury, after an absence of about an hour and a half, returned a verdict of guilty against John Gordon, and not guilty as to William Gordon.

COMMISSIONERS. John B. Turner of Scituate, Thomas Savory of Wareham, and Joshua Smith of Hanson, are chosen commissioners in Plymouth County, and Jonathan Parker of Plympton, and Edward Southworth of North Bridgewater, Special Commissioners.

QUINCY LIGHT INFANTRY. The annual meeting of this ancient company—fifty-four years having elapsed since a charter was obtained—took place last Wednesday, at which time several vacant offices were filled, under the order of Maj. Azro B. Stiles, commanding the Battalion.

Lieut. Jabez Bigelow was unanimously chosen Captain, vice Henry Souther, resigned; Third Lieut. Albert F. Spear was chosen First Lieut., in place of Jabez Bigelow, promoted; Elisha Packard was chosen Second Lieut., in place of Perez Chubbuck, resigned; John B. Currier was chosen Third Lieut., in place of A. F. Spear, promoted.

JOURNEYMEN STONE-CUTTERS.—We are gratified to learn that Messrs. Hosea H. Flanders, Frederic & Field, and Daniel McC. Knox, have agreed to the reasonable request of the journeymen stone-cutters, as to their equitable scale of prices.

The journeymen stone-cutters are ready to resume labor when the just thing shall be done them, and the attempt to get other workmen to supply their places does not speak well for those contractors who have pretended to be real friends to the laboring men and who were anxious to abolish concord labor but now patronize it.

WONDERFUL. It has been said—"the mountain labored and brought forth a mouse"—but a greater wonder has taken place in this neighborhood, viz.—the far famed "KNIGHT OF THE BATTLE" has labored hard and brought forth "rotten eggs" which he set upon until he has hatched from them a "monkey and a cat's paw."

WEYMOUTH FAIR. The following resolution was passed at the last quarterly meeting of the Weymouth Anti-Slavery Society:

Resolved.—That our confidence in the integrity and efficiency of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society remain undiminished, and that we will aid the Anti-Slavery Sewing Circle in this place, to the utmost of our power, in their Fair to be held for its benefit in the month of September next.

HANNAH PIERCE, President.

B. H. NORTON, Auctioneer, No. 7 State Street.
Boston, April 6.

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston.

We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING, ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season.

We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all.

Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or, in other words, that we sell only what we call "fine clothing"—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1-2 cts. Blue and other colors 50 cts. GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1 50, Sattinet Pants, Canada Gray, etc., etc.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the

QUINCY HALL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, OVER THE QUINCY MARKET.

HENRY PETTES & CO.

HAS been remodelled during the past winter, in a style far more elegant and splendid than any other establishment in the United States, and is now opened for the inspection of the public, and for the sale of a

LARGE AND VALUABLE STOCK OF FASHIONABLE AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,

Of their own importation; most of which has been selected expressly for the Boston trade, by their Resident Agents in London and Paris.

These Goods are of the most rare and beautiful descriptions, and will be sold At Retail as low as the usual Wholesale Prices.

No expense has been spared to render this Warehouse such an one as would be an ornament to the prosperous city of Boston, and the subscribers flatter themselves that their efforts have been successful.

TWO SPACIOUS HALLS ARE NOW DEVOTED TO THE SALE OF CARPETINGS,

and the TABERNACLE in Winter Street, erected last season, has been leased, and converted into an EXTENSIVE DEPOT for

Painted Canvass Carpets.

The assortment of RICH BRUSSELS and other CARPETS is very large, and we shall sell a better and more beautiful style of Carpets for the same money, than any other house.

The motto of "LARGE SALES AND SMALL PROFITS" was originally ours, and we adopt it again, as one to which we are well entitled, and by which we are willing to stand.

POETRY.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Thank God, that I have lived to see the time
When the great truth began at last to find
An utterance from the deep heart of mankind,
Earnest and clear, that all REVENGE IS CRIME!
That man is holier than a creed—that all
Restraint upon him must consult his good,
Hope's sunshine lingers on his prison wall,
And love look in upon his solitude.
The beautiful lesson which our Saviour taught
Through long, dark centuries its way hath wrought
Into the common mind, the popular thought;
And words, to which by Galilee's shore
The humble fishes listened with hushed ear,
Hath found an echo in the general heart,
And of the public faith become a living part.

Who shall arrest this tendency? bring back
The cells of Venice and the bigot's rack?
Harden the softening human heart again,
To cold indifference to a brother's pain?
Ye most unhappy men!—who, turned away
From the mild sunshine of the gospel day,
Grove in the shadow of Man's twilight time;
What mean ye, that with ghoul-like zeal ye brood
O'er these foul altars streaming with warm blood,
Permitted in another age and clime?
Why cite that law with which the bigot Jew
Rebuked the Pagan's mercy when he knew
No evil in the Just One—Wherefore turn
To the dark crust past?—Can you not learn
From the pure Teacher's life, how mildly free
Is the great gospel of Humanity?
The Flamen's knife is bloodless, and no more
Nexiti's altars smoke with human gore,
No more the ghostly sacrifices smoke
Through the green arches of the Druid's oak;
And ye of milder faith, with your high claim
Of prophet utterance of the holiest name,
Will ye become the Druids of OUR time?
Set up your scaffold altars in our land,
And, consecrators of Law's darkest crime,
Urge to its loathsome work the Hangman's hand?
Beware—lest human nature, roused at last,
From its peevish shoulder your incumbrance cast,
Rank ye with those who led their victims round
The Celt's red altar and the Indian's mound, Abhorred of Earth and Heaven—a pagan brotherhood!

THE FARMER.

From golden morn, till dewy eve,
When the sky gleams bright and red,
With many a strong and sturdy stroke,
I labor for my bread.
No sickly fit nor ill I dread,
My chest is deep and broad,
And though I work the live-long day,
I rise and thank my God.

No lily hue is on my brow,
No rings on my hard hand,
I wield the axe, I drive the plough,
Or when black war shrouds the land,
I seize my fathers' well tried brand,
And that for Freedom's sod,
It is my glorious right to bleed,
I rise and thank my God.

And when my daily task is o'er,
And the sun is sinking low,
As faint with work and honest toil,
To my humble roof I go,
I see the perfumed city beau
With his evanescent glow,
And that I am not a thing like him,
I rise and thank my God.

The widow's prayer upon my ear
Unheeded never fell,
I ne'er beheld the orphan's tear
But my own heart's fount would swell.
I never heaven for gold would sell,
Nor for wealth would stoop to fraud,
A poor—but yet an honest man,
I rise and thank my God.

And when the good sun floods with light
This land of liberty,
And spreads around my happy sight,
As in prayer I bend the knee,
That I am strong, and bold, and free,
In the land my fathers trod,
With quivering lips and out-stretched arms,
I rise and thank my God.

ANECDOTES.

A young clergyman, not a hundred miles from Boston, lately took to his head to exclaim, vehemently, in one of his sermons, against the practice of young gentlemen visiting the ladies on Sabbath evenings.—The same afternoon, sacred service being over, he proposed to one of his intimate friends, a call upon a family where were three very charming, marriageable girls. His friend was shocked, as well he might be, and expressed his surprise that the reverend gentleman should in his practice, be so inconsistent with the doctrine, he had that day preaching with such apparent fervor. "Lord bless you! my dear boy," replied this promising young sprig of the divinity school—"you don't understand these things." Permit me to remark that you are slightly green. I preached that sermon for the express purpose of keeping the amorous young lads of the parish out of the way. You and I will have the best chance of the fellow! Have all the fun to ourselves. Do you take?

A merchant not remarkably conversant with geography, picked up a newspaper and sat down to read.—He had not proceeded far before he came to a passage stating that one of his vessels was in jeopardy. "Jeopardy!" jeoparded!" said the astonished merchant, who had previously heard that the vessel was lost; "let me see—that is somewhere in the Mediterranean. Well, I am glad she has gone into port, as I thought it was all over with her."

Said a temperance man to a rum-sympathiser, "suppose I should open a grog-shop, and should daily sell your son liquor, and send him home drunk, what would you do with me?" "Why—why," said the rum-seller's guard. "I should talk to you and endeavor to persuade you to quit the practice."

"But suppose I still persisted in selling him liquor?" "Why then," said the moral suasionist, "I would give you a good thrashing!"

"I never catch a cold," said a loafer. "No, you are too lazy," was said in reply.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practising as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

Sir—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent attacks of spitting blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great Debility, with a cold heart, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

MISCELLANY.

QUICK, OR YOU LOSE IT!

Some people do every thing in a hurry—despite the caution of the old Spanish proverb, to repeat which is entirely unnecessary. They are quick at getting out of a scrape, and take to themselves a great deal of credit therefor; forgetting that if they had not been quick in getting in, there would not have existed the necessity for celerity in getting out. My friend Jack Jones, Esq.—in one of these fly-aways, hair-trigger mortals, and his acts and amblings, fits and starts, are like nothing in the world but a parching pea, or the pool of a touch-me-not. He ever goes with a jerk, determines for the instant with precipitancy, and never looks an inch beyond his nose. Of some of his adventures, traits and characteristics, I purpose to speak, if the reader like—and if he don't like, I see no other way in which he can help himself, except to turn to some other part of the paper.

Jack is a gentleman. Here might be introduced a critical essay upon the essential whots, or to speak grammatically, the thats which make up a gentleman. But I can't stop to philosophize, or trace derivations. In these gentlemanly times, when all the newspapers are 'learning' that some 'gentleman has been arrested for forgery, murder, theft, or some other little indiscretion, he must be a poor devil indeed to whom the world denies the small courtesy of writing himself a 'gentleman.'—Jack is not a poor devil, therefore is Jack a gentleman. He is married, and is doubly a gentleman, being the 'gentleman of the house,' in the mouth of every mendicant who calls at his door. His maid of all-work speaks of him invariably as a gentleman—for she would not demean herself to live in the house of one less than a gentleman. Jack, I have said, is married. Farther, and more particularly, he is just three months married. Upon the manner in which this marriage happened, hangs the tale.

People prompt enough in every thing else, are often slow enough in coming to the matrimonial sticking point—the lubrication and application of the hymeneal court plaster, which, tongueed by two mouths at once, binds two mortals hard and fast—for better or worse—for richer or poorer. If Jack could have got married at a moment's notice, and just as the whim struck him, the parson would have touched his fee long before; but matrimony is one of those deeds which it is deemed essential to do with a long face, and with a show, at least, of deliberation. Now, though the poet directs 'assume a virtue though you have it not,' Jack never found time to read poetry, or candor to admit that in any case, deliberation can be a virtue. On that point he is heretical. Many a time, when he has passed a parson's door plate with his intended on his arm, he would have darted in on the impulse of the moment, and summoned the reverend gentleman to make the twain one. Women are however, fonder of form. She could not forego the invitations, the nuptial robes, the confectios, the gossips and man-tormenting consultations. He could not endure to commence any thing so long a preface, and there, for a year or two, they rested. I have heard of a couple waiting twenty years and even longer—with which Jack's two years were but a small fraction in comparison—but what people talk about in so long a courtship, it is impossible to conceive. If they pile up anticipations in all that long while, they must find themselves let down rather suddenly after the honey-moon is over—certainly.

It is harassing work to have an appointment with Jack Jones. He can't remain still long enough to keep an appointment; but the praises of punctuality are forever on his lips. Agree to meet him at his office at a certain hour, or to receive him at your own, and the chances are that he will run about a whole day in pursuit of you, to anticipate the hour, and miss the meeting after all. He would be a good Yankee specimen, but for his want of method. Yankees are often—we may almost say always—hasty, but always methodical. If a Yankee has an appointment one hour from his dining time, he will bolt his dinner quick, but will never be at the rendezvous more than five minutes before the point of time. Jack, on the contrary, in such a case, would run back and forth six times at least, and miss the moment by thirty minutes in the end.

Jack is never without a reason. He never acknowledges a blunder, and never makes a mistake. He turns as suddenly as Ellsler can wheel on her toe—and a politician could not eclipse him in sudden shifting. Let him for instance, make a purchase for a specified purpose, and by carelessness procure a commodity directly opposite, it is all one to Jack. If it were possible for him to buy ice in mistake for double-milled blankets, he would swear that it was all right—that he meant to have the ice all along; and the charter which he had taken for the north-west coast, he would change for New Orleans, and there ship his cargo. Fruitful in his expedients, he prides himself upon that fertility; though as we have said already, it is only his abundance of blunders that creates a need and provides a market for his myriads of inventions.

Like a cat, let him fall as he may, he always alights upon his feet. Like a mercury, he is ever ready for the wing. Like a stoic, (how unlike one in other particulars) he is never disconcerted. Like a lady, he walks in a bustle, eats in a bustle, rides in a bustle, and would, were it possible or convenient, sleep in a bustle. His dreams partake of his waking character. He never dreams of keeping still, but oftener wakes in fright from the fancy that he has been shot from a gun, and is traversing space with a velocity exceeding even his ideas of pleasurable locomotion. A great friend to rail roads is Jack Jones. He considers the invention as a progressive step in the march to the perfection of human skill; and whenever he thinks, he devotes more meditation to the possibility of contriving some manner of taking in passengers, without checking the speed of the train, than to any other earthly subject.

Jack likes auction. Bargains there, if not struck quick, are done with the air of haste and business, the appearance of which elevates Jack Jones into his heavens of heavens. I hope it will not be considered a profane treatment of a serious subject, if we tell the truth of Mr. Jones's appreciation of heaven. Its beatitude to him is principally the contemplation that angels are always represented with wings. Nothing so early struck his infant mind as the pictorial representation in which custom has always clothed Gabriel; and to convince him that these winged features of the celestial beings are but a poetic figure, would be to make an infidel of him past redemption.

To come back to earth. As I have said, Jack likes auctions. 'Going,' is music to his ears. He likes to see things going, and has no idea of vitality in a state quiescent. 'Going'—it would wake Jack from the deep sleep of one of the seven sleepers. 'Gone'—is the consummation—the clinching panegyric to his ears. His idea of a good one, is embraced in a 'good 'un to go.' His horse is the fastest on the avenue—his watch is always ahead of the current time. His porter is a marvel—for he has caught his master's spirit—and shoots ahead like a courier. His cook comprehends his humor. If his dinner is spoiled, or his coffee bad, she has only to say that it was prepared 'in a hurry,' and the atonement is complete and the excuse sufficient. He has even excused a misfit made by his tailor, on the presentation of the same all-sufficient plea.

But I am getting into his habits, darting hither and yonder, while the reader is shouting 'question.' Let's then come to order. Jack likes auctions—and having said it once, twice, three times, we'll drop the hammer on farther digression. On a day, three months since, he visited Thomas Bell's mart of vendue in Ann and Fulton streets. He was in a hurry—not Tom but Jack—though Tom was doing his prettiest to make people think him in the greatest haste possible.

'Going, going—
Is there a man with soul so dead
As never to himself hath said
Where shall I lay my baby's head?

I don't know what is too bad for such a fellow, gentlemen; but this truly splendid article is going—

Now had Jack just entered the door. Something was going; that it was going was proof presumptive with Jack that it was good.

'Going—'

Jack had no time to think.

'Going—'

And he would not have thought if he had.

'Ten dollars only, I'm offered—'

Jack felt for his purse.

'For this splendid article—'

Jack juggled out his pouch.

'Ten dollars—ten dollars—going—quick, or you lose it!'

'Eleven!' cried Jack.

'Gone! Who is it?'

'John Jones.'

'John Jones—a splendid mahogany cradle. Now the next article, gentlemen—'

Jack heard no more. He slipped out into the street with the dexterity of an eel; but the auctioneer had seen him, and was calling out to inquire if the gentleman didn't want a rocking horse to go with the cradle. And Jack—a bachelor!

For once in his life, Jack Jones had not moved too quick. He was beset in an instant, some dozen of his friends, among Tom's audience, had always hemmed in the unconscious bidder, but too conscious purchaser of a cradle. They taunted, and what could he say? That he had made a mistake? He had never owned to such an incident in his life. He had bought the cradle—and the cheapest way, the only way to prevent Tom's selling it 'for account of Mr. John Jones, who had no use for the article, and who sold it because he never expected to want it,' was to brazen it out, and pay the price. So Jack did, but that payment was by no means the end of all.

'What can he want of a cradle?'

'What do you want of it?' said they to Jack.

'Oh—I'm buying a various lot of furniture.'

'For what?'

'To—to—to ship to Liverpool.'

'Come, now that is a good one. Coals to Newcastle in the same ship, Jack.'

'Well then, the fact is—'

'That you didn't know what you was bidding upon.'

'That's likely!' retorted Jack—'catch me in a blind bargain! I'm going—'

'Going,' echoed Tom.

'And you want to be gone,' rejoined his tormentors—but you must own up first. We don't know what iniquity you may have been indulging in. Where does the unhappy—'

'Nonsense. The fact is—I am about to be married.'

'When Jack?'

'This day week.'

'This was a whopper. It was one of Jack's expedients to get out of a scrape however, and he had wit enough to perceive that if the story got wind he never should make a truth of it.—He hastened directly to his intended and proposed the day. As this was the first time he had ever found reasonable leisure to get married, she, like a wise woman, took the motto—

'Quick, or you lose him.'

The story of the cradle came out at the wedding party, and it was well for Jack it did not reach her ears before. Old married men and widows will say strange things on such occasions; but Mrs. Jones, having no retreat, wisely insists that the husband might have done a worse thing than to buy a good cradle at a good bargain. In the words of the venerable Ritchie—nous terrons.

A MARRIAGE FEE.

A little incident is said to have occurred to a venerable clergyman of Philadelphia city, now no more, who was called upon to officiate at the nuptials of the only child and daughter of a most wealthy retired merchant, then residing a few miles in the country.

The time which had been appointed for the wedding, proved to be a chilly, rainy day, towards the latter end of the month of September; the rain having commenced falling on the night previous, continued throughout the day. The roads were in a miserable condition, the rain falling upon them still heavy with dust, rendered them almost impassable in mud. This was any thing but a pleasant prospect for the doctor; but weddings, you know, must not be delayed, nor do clergy men generally in the least, desire it; they entertain a peculiar partiality for them; they find pleasure in uniting 'two fond hearts,' and they find profit in it. So, barring the weather, the doctor had no reason to complain, and rain or shine he was bound to go. Accordingly a horse and chaise was procured, and the doctor, fully equipped for the journey, was soon on his way to the scene of bridal festivity. At the country mansion all was in readiness against his coming, and when he reached there, sometime after night-fall, he found the bride and her lover already awaiting him. It was not necessary to lose any time, and the doctor was not long in entering upon his appropriate offices. The necessary preliminaries being speedily arranged within a spacious hall, richly ornamented, and in the presence of a gay and numerous company, the doctor uttered the nuptial ceremony.

The scene was unusually affecting, and to the doctor himself. The bride, as we have said was an only child, and aside from her education and accomplishments, upon which every care and attention had been bestowed, she possessed qualities of the heart which endeared her to all; she was amiable and affectionate; and these traits, combined with sincere and early piety, had won the reverend old gentleman's highest friendship and esteem. To one thus interested in the happiness of a bride, the joy attendant upon her nuptials is never unmingled with tender emotions, and tears of parental sympathy trickled down the pious countenance of the old gentleman, as, at the conclusion of the ceremony, he invoked the smiles of Heaven for the future happiness of the newly wedded. Nor was he alone in these feelings; a solemn stillness for a while prevailed the whole company, yet like a transient cloud in the morning, it was soon dispelled, leaving all bright and cheerful as before.

Shortly after the ceremony was over, the doctor prepared himself without delay, for home; so taking an affectionate leave of the bride and her happy partner, he ordered forth his vehicle. Not a word had yet been hinted to him concerning the marriage fee; as for himself, he was too much absorbed in reflection to have given a thought upon the matter.

The 'fee,' however, such as it was, had not been forgotten; but Mr. E., the bride's father, after accompanying and assisting him into his chaise, placed in his hands a package, containing as he said, a 'present' for himself, and a 'little notion' for his wife. The doctor, presumed of course, that it was his fee, and no doubt a rich one, which was thus modestly tendered, accompanied with some small token for his wife, thanked Mr. E., accordingly, and the courtesies of the night being exchanged, the doctor lost no time in regaining his home.

Imagine, now, the old gentleman, after two hours hard ride through mud and rain, well drenched and bespattered, sitting by his fire-side, opening with the eager assistance of his wife, the above described package; imagine also, if possible, the surprise and disappointment of both, as, contrary to the lowest expectations of either in lieu of a fifty dollar note and a rich laced cap, the package was delivered of a plain neck-cloth and an unpretending pair of gloves.

Now fortunately for our friend the doctor, of all things he knew best how to brook disappointment; it is characteristic of the profession in general; hence his share of the disappointment was soon smothered, and he contented himself with the reflection, that his services had been well repaid already, in having been rendered to one whom he felt most happy in serving.

Not so with his wife: like the most of her sex, aye and of her kind, disappointments were not in the least agreeable to her; besides, on this occasion, as she was personally interested, hers was by no means small. The marriage of Miss E., had long been in contemplation, and as long had the doctor's wife been anticipating a rich fee for her husband; which according to a good natured agreement existing between them, in relation to the above marriage, they were to divide equally, and no marvel is it, that she had magnified her share into 'something very handsome.'

For something she was speechless with vexation and disappointment: she knew not how to vent her feelings; she felt hurt as well as vexed and disappointed.

'Certainly I am greatly at a loss to account for this,' at length she exclaimed, recovering herself, 'surely I would never have expected such from Mr. E.'

'Tut! tut! my dear,' returned the doctor, 'I am sure its not worth while grieving about it.'

'Indeed, I think it is,' rejoined his wife, somewhat vexed, and tossing at the same time her gloves from her; 'I'm sure your ride thro' mud and rain was itself well worth ten times as much.'

'Well, well,' said the doctor, 'I'm very well satisfied, and I see no reason why you should be otherwise.' So, saying, he was in the act of spreading out the neck-cloth, to examine its dimensions, when lo; a hundred dollar note dropped upon the floor.

If by the touch of a magic wand the doctor had converted the cambric into a silken sash, the surprise of his wife could not have exceeded what she now felt. She knew not what first to say. No time was lost however in re-obtaining the gloves; and if her surprise was great before, it was in no degree diminished, when a ten dollar note was discovered snugly stuffed away in each thumb and finger.

'My patience! did you ever!' shouted the old lady in ecstasy.

'Ha! ha!' laughed the doctor.

But let us drop the curtain upon the happy doctor and his wife.

SHALL TEXAS BE ANNEXED TO THE UNION?

This is one of the most important questions that was ever laid before the people of the United States. It concerns every citizen that lives within the precincts of this great Confederacy.

Much has been said on this subject, and much remains to be said. It is the duty of every man, to express his honest views and candid opinions, upon anything that involves his best interests, or threatens to destroy all that is dear and lovely to him.

People of the North! are you aware that a fearful blow is aimed at your future happiness and peace? Are you aware, that, if Texas is annexed to the Union, you will be made powerless, by the unfair representation of the slaveholding portion of the country? These questions deserve the attention and careful investigation of every friend of humanity.—There are, doubtless, many who pretend to stand upon neutral ground, and seem to care little or nothing, whether Texas is annexed to the Union or not; but, if they knew the awful consequences—if they knew that all their endeavored privileges of freedom were threatened with destruction, they would not remain silent and inactive.

I call upon every inhabitant of New England, to resist this great effort of the South to secure the admission of Texas into the Union; resist it as long as the blood of the Puritans runs in your veins—as long as the sun continues to shine upon your native soil! However flattering may be their promises, or however awful their threatenings, heed them not. The God of heaven frowns upon them. You are told by the people of the South, through the mouths of their representatives on the floor of Congress, that if you do not assist in annexing Texas to the Union, they will aid Great Britain in taking possession of the Oregon. Does this alarm you? would all the arguments that could be drawn from Tartarus itself, shake your opinions of virtue and honor? methinks I hear you answer with one voice, and with one accord, no, never!

Another reason advanced by many why we should admit Texas, is, if we do not take it, England will. The weakness of this assertion is seen at once, when we look at things as they are. Texas will never cede itself to a country, under whose government the oppressed are made to go free. The people of Texas know too well, that as soon as the British laws are promulgated throughout their territory, every slave within its limits will be a free man; they know that as soon as it is pronounced a dominion of 'Her Britannic Majesty,' every yoke will be broken, and every shackle, every slave within the borders of the country, will be buried in the earth.

Besides this, England has declared through her minister, Mr. Packenham, that she has no intention or desire to obtain Texas, and make it a part of the imperial realm. And can we not trust a kingdom's honor? shall we set at naught, that, which one of the most exalted nations of the world, says and declares, before God and man? every well-minded person will respond in the negative.

Then why should the United States be so anxious to annex a country to itself, that is at enmity with all that is good and righteous, that exalts itself above all that is called good, where all manner of sin and licentiousness abounds, and where the natural lusts of man are gratified to their fullest extent? the answer is plain. It is a device invented in the great political mart of our nation, to extend and perpetuate the sin of slavery and all its attendant evils.

The southern people know that the anti-slavery cause is making great progress at the North, and they tremble, when they think that they shall soon be overpowered by the friends of Liberty and Freedom, unless their ranks are strengthened by hosts of unprincipled and ungodly men. By these considerations they have been induced to look to Texas for help; but they will be unsuccessful if every patriot is true to his country and true to the cause of virtue.

Sons of the Pilgrims, awake! and show the slaveholder that your principle is, 'to do as you would be done by,' and that you will never give your influence to annex a country to the Union, that holds a slave or deals in human flesh.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. Enron. It would seem from the tone of the articles annexed, the former published in the American and the latter in the Democrat, the organs of the two great political parties at Dedham, that political considerations are to be thrown aside and a hearty support given to the temperance ticket, at the ensuing trial to choose these important officers.

Monday, April 29th, is appointed for a second trial to elect County Commissioners; the result of the last election, indicates, that without concert, there will be no choice by the people, and the appointment will devolve on the Governor. As a friend to temperance, to me, it seems desirable that a choice should be made by the voters of the County, and of the persons on the temperance ticket, unless some better plan can be suggested to produce harmony of action, and the election of a ticket of thorough, active, devoted temperance men.

Without meaning any disparagement to the gentlemen nominated on the Whig or Democratic Tickets, I believe it is generally admitted that those on the temperance ticket have been more zealous friends of this cause, and will, if elected, exert more influence against the traffic in ardent spirits than either of the other tickets; the election of Commissioners is especially a temperance question, and it seems important that the men who decide the question of granting licenses, should be men like Governor Briggs, who are ready to testify by precept and example, at all times and places, in favor of total abstinence.

If these men are chosen at the ensuing election, it will be an emphatic declaration, that the men of Norfolk County prefer the triumph of the temperance cause, to party politics; and will exert a favorable influence on the efforts now making to deliver this County from the thrall of rum.

The real question, at the late election, was not whether the County Commissioners should eat their dinner at one place or another, or not dine at all, or because their patronage would fatten, or the loss of it starve, the Norfolk Hotel, but, because the laws of this Commonwealth empower the County Commissioners to decide on the question of legalizing the sale of liquid damnation. Their power over this subject is supreme. They grant licenses—it is the law of the land to sell. Their refusal to grant is a law against the sale; and the transgressor is liable to pains and penalties. This power is, emphatically, the reason which makes their election an important matter, and the issue is, whether mere party men shall be chosen, who, while they refuse to grant licenses, may, by their practice, throw contempt on, and encourage the open violation of the law to which their own acts have given vitality, or men whose past conduct give assurance, that if elected, they will sustain by their example the law their action has created. Believing the old board have fallen short of their duty, and that the persons nominated on the Temperance Ticket have not, I call on all who profess to support the laws of the land and the cause of temperance in this County, to weigh well this question, before casting their votes.

WASHINGTON'S CAMP CHEST.

Hon John Q. Adams presented to Congress this valuable relic of "by gone days" in the United States House of Representatives, a few days since, and made the following remarks on the occasion:—

In compliance with the desire expressed in the last will of William Sidney Winder, a distinguished citizen of the State of Maryland, now no more, I rise to present to this House, and through this House to the Congress of the United States, the Camp-chest of GEORGE WASHINGTON, which he used during the Revolutionary war.

As my warrant for presenting myself to the House in the performance of this service, I send to the Clerk's table, and request him to read, a few very brief documents.

1. Letter from John Wethered.
2. William Sidney Winder's will.
3. His letter unsigned, with that of Mary S. Winder.

At the last session of Congress it was my fortune to offer a resolution of acceptance for the Seal of our nation's great heroic Revolutionary commander and chief, presented, together with the Staff bequeathed to him by his compatriot statesman and friend, Benjamin Franklin, to the Congress, by Samuel T. Washington, of Kanawha county, Virginia. This incident was probably the inducement to the late Mr. Winder to devote upon me the welcome and honorable office of presenting this additional relic of the great champion of our country's freedom and glory.

The donor on that occasion was yet living, and, with the resolution accepting the donation, the House thought proper to subjoin a unanimous vote of thanks to the donor for the gift.

In this case the donor is no longer in the land of the living. He is beyond the reach of praise or blame from his fellow-creatures of the human race. His heart can beat no more in sympathy with those to whom the love of their country is, from the cradle to the grave, the never-ceasing impulse of the soul. But that it was so to him, this bequest, the very last act of his life—this letter, dictated by him on his dying bed, and his signature of which was suspended by the angel of death wresting the pen from his hand, are testimonials of which all comment of mine could but weaken the force.

The thanks of this House are no longer accessible to his ears; but to his bereaved and respected family a resolution of Congress, attesting the grateful sense with which they receive their bequest, may carry soothing consolation to their bosoms, and, we may humbly hope, joy even to him in the mansions of a better world.

In the presentation of the sword of George Washington to the last Congress, a profound and sublime lesson of natural and individual morality, associated with pure and lofty patriotism, was conveyed to his countrymen of this and of all after ages. It will be recollected that in bequeathing his sword to his nephews, the Christian hero had enjoined upon them never to unsheathe them for the purpose of shedding blood, except for self defence, or in defence of their country and its rights; and, in the latter case, to keep them unsheathed and fall with them in their hands rather than relinquish them.

The use and veneration of the sword is to shed blood. Far different is the use of the implements now offered to the acceptance of Congress. The sword is the instrument of destruction. These are implements useful or necessary to supply the wants of physical nature and for the preservation of human life. These are also useful in dispensing to others the good offices of humanity, the convivial pleasure of friendship, and the sacred rites of hospitality.—To all these purposes, that identical chest and its contents have contributed in times that tried the souls of men and women too. I send to the Clerk a letter, which I request him to read with a voice that all may hear.

The Clerk read as follows:

WEST POINT, August 16, 1779.

DEAR DOCTOR: I have asked Mrs. Cochran and Mrs. Livingston to dine with me to-morrow, but ought I not to apprise them of their fare? As I have deception, even where the imagination only is concerned, I will.

It is needless to premise that my table is large enough to hold the ladies, of this they had ocular proof yesterday. To say how it is usually covered is rather more essential, and this shall be the purport of my letter.

Since our arrival in this happy spot we have had a ham (sometimes a shoulder) of bacon to grace the head of the table, a piece of roast beef adorns the foot, and a small dish of greens or beans (almost imperceptible) decorates the centre. When the cook has a mind to cut a figure, (and this, I presume, he will attempt to do to-morrow,) we have two beefsteak pies, or dishes of crabs, in addition, one on each side the centre dish, dividing the space and reducing the distance between dish and dish to about six feet, which, without them, would be near twelve apart. Of late, he had the surprising luck to discover that apples will make pies, and it's a question if, amidst the violence of his efforts, we do not get one of apples instead of having both of beef.

If the ladies can put up with such entertainment, and will submit to partake of it on plates, once tin, but now iron, (not become so by the labor of scouring,) I shall be happy to see them.

I am, dear Doctor,
your most obedient servant,
GO. WASHINGTON.

Dr. CODRAN, New Windsor.

Mr. Adams then submitted the following resolutions:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the camp-chest of General George Washington, which he used during the Revolutionary war, bequeathed by the last will of the late William Sidney Winder to the Congress of the United States, be and the same is hereby accepted, and that the same be deposited as a precious relic to be preserved in the Department of State.

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives take pleasure in recognizing to the family of the late William Sidney Winder their high sense of the value of the bequest contained in his will, and in expressing their respect for the memory of the donor.

The resolution having been read a first and second time, and having been put on their third reading—

Mr. Wethered of Maryland, said: In seconding the resolutions just offered by my venerable friend from Massachusetts, I take occasion to say that the donor of this deeply interesting relic, William Sidney Winder, was alike my constituent and my intimate friend, respected and esteemed by all who knew him, and endeared to a large circle of relatives. He has, with honor to himself and his constituents, represented the State of Maryland in her Legislature.

This camp-chest was inherited from his father, Governor Winder, a contemporary and fellow officer of the Father of his Country in our Revolutionary struggle, and the descendant of a family which emigrated to this country two centuries ago, and which has ever held in this land of their choice the most respectable standing.

It was presented to Governor Winder by Colonel Maynadier, of Annapolis, himself an officer of the Revolution, who received it from the executors of General Washington.

It was Governor Winder who, on the 4th day of July, 1815, laid the cornerstone of that beautiful monument erected to the memory of Washington in the city of Baltimore, and which constitutes its chief ornament.

I can add, from my own knowledge, that for several years it had been the purpose of the late Mr. Winder to consign this relic to the care of Congress, but such was his attachment to it that the hour of parting with it never arrived, and it is unhappy, to the hand of death that we are indebted for it now.

Mr. John P. Kennedy followed in some remarks, (the report of which, if prepared, has unaccountably failed to reach this office,) which he concluded by offering the subjoined resolution.

Resolved, That the letters and papers accompanying the bequest of the camp-chest of Washington by the late William Sidney Winder, of Maryland, be entered upon the Journal of this House.

The vote being taken on each of these resolutions, they were adopted unanimously, with the exception of Mr. Hale, of New Hampshire, who, in each case, voted "No!"

OLD COLONY RAIL ROAD.

MR. EDITOR, I notice in your paper of the 6th inst., the published proceedings of the Town of Abington at a meeting held to take into consideration the subject of a rail road from Plymouth to Boston. I do not intend to complain of the citizens of Abington for convening the Town, and making all laudable efforts to awaken the public mind to the advantages that a rail road would be to them. I care not how much zeal they manifest on the subject.—Abington like every other town has the right to use its best exertions to cause the road to be laid through their own territory. But what I would complain of is that Abington has undertaken to give the public a statement of her business and population together with an array of the advantages that would be gained to the proprietors of the road by adopting the Eastern route, which is altogether an imaginary and one-sided affair. They say, it is estimated that our population is nearly four thousand. They mean to have it understood that that is the population. Now they know that their population does not exceed three thousand four hundred. Again they estimate as loosely no doubt as in the former case, that their Boot & Shoe business is over one million two hundred thousand dollars yearly, besides their other manufactures, which swells the amount to one million five hundred thousand dollars annually. And their whole manufactures and trade falls short of one million dollars. And their Boot & Shoe manufactures do not exceed seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Why, gentlemen, could you not give the matter as it really stood. Were you not afraid that other towns on the Western route would be found on examination to stand before you in point of business and population, unless you could manage to resolve yourself to be of much more importance than you really are, and make the public believe it. Do you expect such statements are to be taken for granted because you have resolved it to be so in public town meeting. Again, you have resolved that the West Randolph Meeting house is only three miles from the Stoughton Branch, and stated it as your firm belief that such is the fact.—Now, gentlemen, I ask where did you obtain your information. Do you get along with all your estimates in this way! Let me tell you that West Randolph Meeting house is at least five miles from the proposed terminus of the Stoughton Branch. And, again, you resolve that it would be a singular fact, that if the Western route should be adopted, that it would come within three miles of the Stoughton Branch. This, I confess, would be a very singular fact, considering the Western route to be one half mile east of West Randolph Meeting house, and that said Meeting house is five miles east of Stoughton Branch. Why, I ask again, are these statements made with so little regard to the real facts of the case. I think the citizens of Abington ought in justice to assemble once more and review the resolutions which passed so unanimously at their meeting in March. I have no doubt that their sober second thought, together with some facts which they can easily reach in regard to business, population, &c., will bring them to some more reasonable conclusions.

Now, Mr. Editor, will you allow me to say one word for the citizens of Randolph who have been unjustly misrepresented. A very strong feeling exists here of the importance of having the Western route adopted, which, it is well known, will pass between the two principal villages in this town. The citizens of Randolph have been put back somewhat in their exertions, owing to a misunderstanding at the 1st meeting, held by the promoters of this enterprise. The Secretary of the meeting having failed to notify the gentlemen who were selected to collect and arrange a statistical information in regard to business, population, &c., of their town. This oversight threw the town out of the meeting before the Legislative Committee.—This has been a source of deep regret to the Town. Those who think Randolph is backward in this cause, should be made acquainted with these circumstances. It has been remarked abroad that Randolph is opposed to the project. There may be a few persons, who, being large owners in turnpike stocks and stage companies who would not scruple to make such statements. The great body of our citizens have a deep feeling in favor of the project at this time. A great influx of population has taken place within the last eight or ten months, especially since business has revived. It is well known, that our town, like many others, is largely engaged in the business of shoe-making. One particular feature in our business, which differs materially from most other towns, is that we are largely engaged in the manufacture of fine boots, the labor of which is performed almost entirely by foreigners, who travel more to and from the city than any other class of citizens.

I would not say, for a certainty, that our population is four thousand, but I conceive such to be the fact; and that is the opinion of our Selectmen who keep an eye to such matters.

Then, again, look at East Stoughton, which lies only two miles south of us through which this Western route is laid, there is not a place of equal territory where more boot and shoe business is done; and no place is advancing more rapidly in population.

An estimate is now being made and carefully arranged to go before the public, and I will guarantee so far as this town is concerned it is near correct as could be given under oath. I regret that I have not the table before me, that I might give you the statement at this time, but I shall be able to do so soon.

JOURNEMEN STONE-CUTTERS.

MR. EDITOR, In a late number of the New Hampshire Patriot, there appears an advertisement for fifty stone-cutters, as being wanted at Quincy. We would say in answer, that there are now seventy-five Stone-cutters without employment in Quincy, who are ready to work as soon as the Contractors are willing to acknowledge a uniform bill of prices based on $1.75 per day.

A GREAT GATHERING. On the 30th of May next, there is to be a Grand Mass Gathering of West-ingtonians, on Boston Common, men, women and children composing the "Cold Water Army." It will be a glorious day of rejoicing, and the Common will present a spectacle never before witnessed in the city. The whole will be under the superintendence of Samuel A. Walker, Esq., who will act as Chief Marshall.

LIGHT HOUSE ON COHASSET ROCKS. The Committee on Commerce, in the United States House of Representatives, in their bill making appropriations for light houses, have introduced one item of one hundred thousand dollars, for erecting a light house on Minto's rock.

INTERESTING TO PATENTEES. The Hon. Zadoc Pratt, member of Congress from New York, and a practical mechanic, has introduced a resolution into the House of Representatives, providing for the publication and engraving of all the inventions patented in the Patent Office at Washington, which now amounts to thirteen thousand five hundred and twenty-three; and it is his intention to have copies of these works distributed, at the expense of the office, throughout every town in the United States, so that the numerous classes of our citizens, whose genius or talent may lead them to the discovery of new inventions, may know and have constantly at hand, a complete compend and view of all the models and draughts of the machines for which patents have been issued since the foundation of the Government.

A new kind of cab is used in England, called tri-uns. It is a close carriage with small windows at either side, and large ones at back and front; it affords comfortable accommodations for three persons with luggage; its outline is symmetrical, and the burden is so poised that no weight whatever comes on the back of the horse. It is two and a half hundred weight lighter than any other cab, has two wheels, and is drawn by one horse.

By a recent order in Council from the English Colonial office, all the stills in New South Wales have been suppressed, in consequence of the demoralizing effects produced by ardent spirits on the peculiar population of that colony.

SLEEP. Nothing has such a tendency to restore the system, as a refreshing sleep, a popular writer beautifully remarks:—"All healing sleep neutralizes the corroding caustic of care, and blunts even the barbed arrows of the marble-hearted fiend, Ingratitude;" and by a well-known poet it is described as "Nature's sweetest restorer;" yet there are thousands who pass weary and sleepless nights without taking the trouble to ascertain the cause; many resort to opiates, and thus aggravate the evil. PARR'S LIFE PILLS will be found to soothe the irritated state of the nerves, and will soon bring the whole system into that cool and healthy state as will induce sound and refreshing sleep, and thus fit the mind and body for the varied duties of life, which henceforward will be performed with ease and satisfaction.

QUINCY HALL, CLOTHING
ESTABLISHMENT.
OVER THE NEW MARKET
BOSTON.
JOHN SIMMONS & CO.

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patron- age, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston. We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING, ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season.

We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all. Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or tip top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1/2 cts. Blue and other colors 50 cts., GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1.50, Sattinet Pants, Canada Gray, etc.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the

QUINCY HALL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, OVER THE QUINCY MARKET.

THE EXTENSIVE WAREHOUSE OF HENRY PETTES &amp; CO.

HAS been remodelled during the past winter, in a style far more elegant and splendid than any other establishment in the United States, and is now opened for the inspection of the public, and for the sale of a

LARGE AND VALUABLE STOCK OF FASHIONABLE AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,

Of their own importation: most of which has been selected expressly for the Boston trade, by their Resident Agents in London and Paris.

These Goods are of the most rare and beautiful descriptions, and will be sold at Retail as low as the usual Wholesale Prices.

No expense has been spared to render this Warehouse such an one as would be an ornament to the prosperous city of Boston, and the subscribers flatter themselves that their efforts have been suc- cessful.

TWO SPACIOUS HALLS ARE NOW DEVOTED TO THE SALE OF CARPETINGS,

and the TABERNACLE in Winter Street, erected last season, has been leased, and converted into an EXTENSIVE DEPOT for

Painted Canvass Carpets.

The assortment of RICH BRUSSELS and other CARPETS is very large, and we shall sell a better and more beautiful style of Carpets for the same money, than any other house.

The motto of "LARGE SALES AND SMALL PROFITS" was originally ours, and we adopt it again, as one to which we are well entitled, and by which we are willing to stand.

HENRY PETTES & CO.
Corner of Washington and Summer Streets,
BOSTON.

William Frye, MASON,
RESPECTFULLY informs the inhabitants of Quincy and vicinity, that all orders for

MASON WORK,
left at the Carriage & Harness Manufactory near the Stone Temple, will meet with immediate attention.

POETRY.

"SPEAK NOT A BITTER WORD."

Would'st thou a wanderer reclaim,
A wild and restless spirit tame;
Check the warm flow of youthful blood,
And lead a fast one back to God?
Pause, if thy spirit's wrath be stirred,
Speak not to him a bitter word—
Speak not—that bitter word may be
The stamp that seals his destiny.

If widely he hath gone astray,
And dark excess has marked his way;
'Tis pitiful—but yet beware,
Reform must come from kindly care.
Forbid thy parting lips to move,
But in the gentle tones of love,
Though sadly his young heart hath err'd,
Speak not to him a bitter word.

The lowering frown he will not bear,
The venom'd chidings will not hear;
The ardent spirit will not brook,
The stinging tooth of sharp rebuke;
Thou would'st not guard the restless steed,
To calm his fire or check his speed;
Then let no angry tones be heard—
Speak not to him a bitter word.

Go kindly to him—make him feel
Your heart yearns deeply for his weal,
Tell him the dangers that lay
Around his wildly deviant way;
So shall thou win him, call him back,
From pleasure's smooth, seductive track,
And warnings thou hast mildly given,
May guide the wanderer up to Heaven.

MAY DAY.

BY WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

Up, ye slumberers, one and all!
Welcome in the smiling May!
Hear ye not her thrilling call?
Will ye waste in bed the day?
'Tis a morn for old and young,
Prodigal of joy and song.

See! the watch fires of the night,
One by one, are vanishing;
What a glorious tide of light
Issues from Morn's golden spring!
Flooding every land and clime,
Up the sun goes—slow—sublime!

Birds of every kind and hue
Airily are glancing by,
And with notes expressive, true,
Fill the air with melody;
Who would lose their joyous strain?
Who, inert, abed remain?

Maiden, with the flashing eye,
Quench its brilliance not in sleep;
Let the blushes, mountain high,
Shame Aurora's count deep;
Gather flowers to braid thy hair—
For a queenly state prepare!

Child, absorbed in sportive dream,
Be not slumber's pretty dupe;
Up, and drive the mimic team,
Fly the kite, or whirl the hoop;
Let the music of thy mirth
In a merry shout have birth!

Youth in sweetest visions lying,
Building worlds with busy thought;
Now exulting, smiling, sighing,
O'er the labors thou hast wrought:
Fairest scenes, by Fancy drawn,
Cannot match so fair a morn.

Manhood, lift thy stately head—
Stand erect, Creation's lord!
Leave the couch by dalliance spread—
O'er thy empire walk abroad;
Earth and sky were made for thee,
Dressed in royal pageantry!

All who pine in secret love,
All whose hopes are high or low,
Ugly folks, who would improve,
Handsome, who would prettier grow—
Rich and poor, gay, wise and witty,
Leave, at earliest dawn, the city.

Exercise will use his brushes
With a Painter's matchless skill,
Covering pale cheeks with blushes,
Giving eyes new power to kill:
O, then, slumber not, I pray—
Go, and welcome jocular May!

ANECDOTES.

A lady, lately, who had been scolding her lover for wearing whiskers, nevertheless gave him the usual kiss on his leaving her. "Oh, you can kiss me, then," said the swain, "for all I have those odious whiskers!" "To be sure," was the reply, "you know I set my face against such things."

A lady not better known for her wit than for her benevolence, when quite young, went out to ride on a pony which her father kept for her use, accompanied by a gentleman. The horse made a fault, "Hold up, you devil!" was the sympathetic expression to the intelligent quadruped. The lady softly remarked, "Now, sir, my pony has a much prettier name than yours—I call it Donald."

Two mosquitoes, one morning, met on a leaf in a garden. Both were filled with the blood drawn during their last nocturnal depredations. They were silent and "dumpy," cross and savage. One of them ran out his sting, and wiped it on his fore leg. The other thrust out his sting, and pointed towards the first mosquito. This was considered an insult. And so the offended mosquito steps up to the other and says: "Did you turn up your sting to me?"

"The answer was—I ran out my sting; you can apply it as you choose."
"Sir," said the first, "you are impertinent." The other replied,—"Sir, your remark savors of rascality."
"Hah!" exclaimed the other; "a down-right insult! No gentlemanly mosquito will submit to such treatment without demanding satisfaction! Draw, villain, and defend yourself!" They rushed together, and running one another through the body, died "honorable" deaths.

Boston, March 23.

Dr. Louis Kurtz,
RESPECTFULLY informs the afflicted and the public in general, that he has, on account of the great increase of business, removed his Infirmary to the spacious dwelling house

NO. 64 CAMBRIDGE STREET, BOSTON,

where he may be consulted gratis, and with the utmost confidence, in French, German or English. Thankful for the liberal patronage the public have bestowed upon him for the last three years, he solicits its continuance, assuring them that he shall do all in his power to make himself worthy of it.

Dr. K. has had during his sojourn at the hospitals of Leipzig, (Germany) Paris, (France), and for the last three years in this country, a very extensive practice, and is confident of being able to give entire satisfaction in the following complaints, viz:—

Scrofulous Humor, Sore Legs, Spine Complaint, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Cough, Consumption, Dropsy, Mercutial Affection, White Swelling on the knee, etc. etc.

In diseases of a private nature, (maladies secret), Dr. Kurtz is acknowledged to be surpassed by no physician in this country, and warrants a perfect cure in from three to ten days, according to the stage of the disease.

Dr. Louis Kurtz would respectfully call the attention of invalids to the following valuable remedies, viz:—

German Anti-Mercutial Panacea. This medicine has been pronounced by the faculty of Leipzig, (Germany), a sure and perfect cure, when that deadly poison, Mercury, has been injudiciously used. Price $1 per bottle—six bottles safely packed in a small box, $5.00.

German Tonic Mixture—an excellent remedy for dyspepsia. Price $1.00—six bottles $5.00.

German Tonic and Diuretic Pills—a sure and perfect cure for Fluor Albus, (Whites.) Price $1.00 per box—six boxes $5.00.

German Renovating Mixture or Female Monthly Pills. The above named medicines have been pronounced by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe, the only sure and safe remedies for suppression, stoppage, etc. etc., and since their introduction into this country, several thousand bottles and boxes have been used and given entire satisfaction. Price $2.00 per box or bottle.

Dr. L. Kurtz pays particular attention to all Female Complaints, in the treatment of which he has had much experience and great success.

Docteur L. Kurtz est consulte, gratis, en francais, allemand et anglais.

Dr. L. Kurtz gibt freie consultationen in deutscher, franzoesischer und englischer Sprache.

Office hours from 8 A. M. until 9 P. M. Letters promptly attended to and strict secrecy observed.

Medical aid in Boston.

DR. BUTLER,

NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery, Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevail to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the falstome description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, and in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sexes, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling.

Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

All letters must be post paid.

Boston, June 17.

Benjamin F. Reeves,
Hair Cutting, Curling and Shaving Establishment,
No. 14 Brattle Square,

(Opposite and fourth door from the Quincy Stage Office, No. 9, Elm Street.)

WILL attend to the various branches of his business with promptness and despatch.

Hair cutting, 12-1-2 cents. Hair Curling, 12-1-2 cents. Shaving, 6-1-4 cents. Razors honed, 12-1-2 cents. Razors razed, 12-1-2 cents.

N. B.—A prime assortment of OLD SHAVING SOAP, constantly for sale.

Also—Hair Oils, Hair Brushes, and Perfumery of all kinds.

Warranted RAZORS at 75 cents each.

Boston, June 17.

DR. FERNANDS'
Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obstructed Catarrhs, Empiema, Pleurisy or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being composed of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand, and sealed and signed by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

MISCELLANY.

THE OLD CLOAK.

"Pray Mr. Norton," exclaimed a lively lady to a fashionable dressed young man, who was standing beside her at an evening party, "pray do you intend to remain an old bachelor all your days? Since your return from Europe, I have been continually expecting to hear of your marriage, but here you have been two years, and you are still, to all appearances, 'in statu quo,' as the lawyers say."
"My dear Mrs. Hinton," replied the young gentleman, with a smile, "I will be frank, and tell you the real reason of my remaining a general admirer of the sex, instead of confining my attentions to any one 'bright particular star,' however much I may be dazzled by its brilliancy. I am actually afraid to marry."

"Afraid," echoed the lady, opening his dark eyes to their widest extent with astonishment. "Faint heart never won," you know. Are you afraid to propose?"
"No madam, afraid to marry. You will laugh at me, I dare say, when I tell you that my seat in church has a great deal to do with my solitary state, which seems so much to excite your surprise."

"Why, yes," replied Mrs. Hinton, "one is always surprised when a young man who—with-out meaning to flatter you—is certainly a favorite in society, (here Mr. Norton made her a polite bow,) and who has an independent fortune, still refrains from choosing one of the many fair damsels whom he meets, to superintend his establishment. But what influence your seat in church can have upon the matter, I am at a loss to imagine."

You must know then, that I sit just behind Miss La Mode, in Dr. Righthead's church, and the sight of her velvet cloak absolutely frightens me from the thought of marrying a wife who may some day say to me, 'My dear, I am dying for a new velvet cloak; please give me two or three hundred dollars, and I will go to Stewart's and buy one.' How I should shudder to hear such a request!"

Really, Mr. Norton, this is really too absurd for you, with your fortune, to talk in such a manner. I shall begin to think you a miser. Your wife might dress as extravagantly as she chose, and it would not injure you. And surely you do not object to a lady's wearing a velvet cloak?"

"I do not object to any thing that is consistent, but I cannot help thinking of splendid velvet, such as Queen Victoria herself might be satisfied with, for a coronation robe, sadly out of place when it is made into a cloak, to be worn on almost all occasions; particularly, when it is well known that Miss La Mode's father does not even pay his printer's bill. If I were one of his poor creditors, I should be tempted to take the cloak from that young lady, in the street, and sell it for what it would bring."

Mrs. Hinton sat silent at this speech. Her conscience reproached her for she knew that she had, on that day, purchased an elegant new mantle, although her husband had requested her to be as economical as possible in her expenditures, as he found it difficult, in those trying times, to meet all the demands made upon his purse. She was a woman, however, of generous feelings, as yet unhardened by resisting good impulses, and she secretly resolved to take back the mantle the next day, and prevail upon the shopman to receive it, since it was not yet paid for. All this passed through her mind with the rapidity of lightning, and she turned round with a smile to address Mr. Norton, when an over-dressed young lady, who had been sitting, an interested listener in the conversation, interposed.

"If Mr. Norton wants an economical wife," she said, "I would recommend him to offer himself to Emily Hardwood. I think she will suit him exactly, for she has worn an old cloak all winter, with no alteration—one that she has had two years, at least, to my knowledge."

Mr. Norton looked at the speaker, and the unnamable expression of her countenance sunk in his estimation forever, although he had hitherto regarded her as very pretty and interesting, and had sometimes even thought it almost possible to love Caroline Howard well enough to marry her, if he could only hope to cure her of the passion for dress which she displayed. But this remark sealed her fate, as far as he was concerned, and turning to Mrs. Hinton, he asked—

"Who is Emily Hardwood? Are you acquainted with her? I should really like to be introduced to a young lady who has moral courage enough to wear an unfashionable garment, after having already worn it two winters; she must possess more than a common character."

"I will introduce you with pleasure," said Mrs. Hinton. "She is a sweet girl and a great favorite of mine; I confess I have myself been surprised at the plainness of the dress, this winter, for her father is considered wealthy, and she is the only one of his daughters of an age to go into society. That is she, in the simple white frock, and that is her mother by her side."

Mr. Norton was charmed to perceive that it was a young lady who, by her singularly modest and unpretending appearance had attracted his attention in the early part of the evening. He had intended to inquire her name, but lost sight of her in the crowd, and supposed that she had retired. She received him with an easy, graceful air, and after a few moments passed in conversation, he thought her positively beautiful, so intelligent was the expression of her blue eyes, and so beaming the smile with which she listened to his lively remarks. He was also very much pleased with Mrs. Hardwood, who did not leave to her daughter the whole burden of the conversation, and so mothers are apt to do, contenting themselves with being mere spectators.

When Mr. Norton laid his head upon the pillow that night, it was long before he could compose his mind to sleep, being disturbed by the vision of a pair of blue eyes which danced before him, not to mention dark ringlets and old cloaks, which mingled together in strange confusion. He began to think that he had at last found the object he had been so long seeking, and resolving that he would call the next day at Mr. Hardwood's at last resigned himself to repose.

The next morning, Mrs. Hinton, in pursuance of the wise resolution she had made, retired herself to go out and was waiting in her parlor for her carriage. The beautiful mantle lay on the sofa by her side, and she was examining it, and making up her mind that, after all, she could do without it, and if she could do that she ought to. At this moment Caroline Howard, who was an intimate friend, entered.

"Are you going out so early?" she exclaimed, on seeing Mrs. Hinton readily dressed. I came in the hope of seeing you at this hour; for I wished to tell you that Stewart had some of the loveliest mantles you ever saw. I was there yesterday, and looked at them. They were just opened, and the clerk assured me that they were the only ones imported, and there are but a dozen altogether. I was afraid they would be all sold, yet I did not dare to buy one before asking my mother's permission, for father made such a fuss last week about my buying this splendid silk, without consulting him that mother forbade my doing it again. I have been all the morning, teasing her to let me have one, and have at last succeeded. So I must positively come and choose one too. But, I declare," she continued, "you have one already," as her eyes fell upon the sofa, for she had talked so volubly that she had not even paused to look around her. "But you will come with me, will you not?"

Mrs. Hinton replied gravely—"I am going to Stewart's to return this mantle, and I would advise you my dear Caroline, if you had to tease your mother for leave to buy one, to deny yourself, and gratify her by informing her that you have resolved to do without it. Fifty dollars is a great deal to spend in such an article of dress. My husband told me this morning that he was afraid he should be obliged to give up his carriage and horses, his business is so much less profitable than formerly. Now, you know it is absolutely necessary for his health that he should ride a great deal, and I resolved to spend as little as possible, that he might be able to enjoy his carriage."

Caroline sat without speaking until Mrs. Hinton had concluded, when she said, pettishly—

"But you are married, and it does not make so much difference to you how you dress; just see how becoming this is." And she turned from the glass at which she had been arranging the mantle in graceful folds over her well-shaped figure; and Mrs. Hinton could not help acknowledging that it was very becoming indeed. Nevertheless, she still attempted to persuade her young friend to forego the purchase, for she knew that Caroline's father was very much involved in debt, and it was feared every day that he would stop payment; although, as it appeared like many other gentlemen who keep the state of their affairs a secret from those most interested in the truth, his wife and daughter were utterly ignorant of the circumstances. But she found her arguments of no effect. Indeed, Caroline endeavored to persuade Mrs. Hinton herself to retain the velvet she was about to carry back. But she had too much strength of mind to be led away by her vanity, when she knew that her decision was right, although she could not repress a womanish feeling of regret at the thought of resigning so becoming an article of apparel. Mrs. Hinton was so much grieved and shocked at the selfishness of her young friend, that she thought she could never again feel towards her the same affection she had hitherto experienced. She made her confess that the fifty dollars her mother had given her, with which to purchase the wished-for mantle, was a sum that had been appropriated to a younger sister, that she might take lessons in drawing, an art of which she was passionately fond, and for which she had a decided genius. She could not forbear hinting to Caroline that a time might come when the talents of her sister would be put in requisition for more important purposes than those of mere amusement; but her persuasions were lost upon the mind of the thoughtless and selfish girl, and she saw her depart, with pain, to fulfil her intention.

Mrs. Hinton found no difficulty in returning the mantle, and after she had left the store she wondered how she could have been so foolish as to suffer a moment's uneasiness on such a trifling subject. The words of Mr. Norton had made a deep impression upon her, and as she looked at the multitude of poor, houseless wretches, who thronged Broadway, begging for charity, she felt how sinful it was to waste in extravagance that which would bring comfort and happiness to so many sorrowful hearts. When her husband returned to dinner, she, like a true-hearted wife, made a confession to him of her folly of the day before, her repentance, and the purpose for which she had just visited Stewart's. Mr. Hinton was a man of sense and intelligence. He had often deplored his wife's fondness for display, but she was so young when he married her and had been so petted from her childhood by a fond mother, and was so lovely and interesting, that he could not find it in his heart to deny her any gratification, trusting as she grew older her taste would change. He did not know that the passion for dress is one which increases with indulgence, like all other bad habits, and is the hardest to overcome in the female heart, particularly, as was the case with Mrs. Hinton, where there are no children to occupy the time and attention. So delighted was he with the ingenuousness of her confession, that he presented her with a sum of money for charitable purposes, telling her that he had that day unexpectedly recovered a bad debt which he had long since despaired of, and consequently no longer entertained the fears which he had mentioned to her in the morning.

Let us return to Mr. Norton. He could not avoid anticipating the calling hour a little, so impatient was he to meet again the object that had so much fascinated him the night before. As he entered the hall, he heard the sound of music, and being shown into the drawing-room, found the fair Emily evidently giving lessons on the piano to a little sister. Although attired in a simple morning dress, she did not appear less lovely than his memory had pictured, and the bright blush which his unexpected appearance called up, made her not less interesting in his eyes. She dismissed the little girl with a message to her mother, who soon appeared and received him kindly. As he glanced around and observed the air of elegance though not of display, that pervaded the establishment, he could not help recalling Miss Howard's words about the old cloak, and his curiosity was excited to know what could be her reason for wearing a garment unfashionable enough to attract observation. After making as long a call as he dared, upon first acquaintance, he took leave, not without being invited by Mrs. Hardwood to call again; an invitation to which he cordially responded.

Not many days after as Mr. Norton was walking in Broadway, he met Miss Hardwood, and joined her immediately. He was walking for some time by her side without all regarding her dress when Miss La Mode suddenly emerged from a shop, and passed on before them, arrayed in her superb velvet cloak, with feathers, etc. in the height of fashion. The conversation at the party instantly recurred to his thoughts, and he glanced at the cloak of his companion. It was of plain dark merino, and had evidently been much worn, though everything about her was so scrupulously neat and her simple white hat so becoming to her fresh complexion, that she was infinitely more attractive to an intelligent man, than the dazzling Miss La Mode. To test her feelings, he remarked carelessly, "That is a beautiful cloak of Miss La Mode's." No blush appeared on her cheek, as she quietly replied, "It is indeed very beautiful." Mr. Norton could not help seeing how superior was this conduct to that of some young ladies, who betray an uneasy feeling of consciousness when they hear praise of another's appearance, which they know to be more brilliant than their own. He continued to visit at Mr. Hardwood's, and was always kindly received; but he was not one to decide too hastily on a subject of such vast importance, as he felt the character of his companion for life to be.

It chanced, at length, that he had a commission from an aunt in the country, for some millinery, and although entirely unused to make such purchases, he resorted to the most fashionable establishment of the kind, for the first time, to exercise his taste in that department. The milliner took him behind a curtain which separated the two rooms, in order to show him some very recherche articles, and requesting to take a seat upon a sofa, left him, to search for the important box which contained the treasures. He was beginning to grow impatient, when a sweet, well known voice sent a thrill through his heart. It was Emily Hardwood's voice apparently conversing with another young lady, so close to the curtain that he could not avoid hearing every word. He was about to dart forward and address them when the words 'old cloak' fell upon his ear. 'Now,' he thought, 'perhaps I shall find the solution of the mystery.' 'No,' said Emily, 'I will not buy such a gay hat as this. It would not suit at all with my old cloak.' 'Do, for pity's sake, my dear Emily,' exclaimed her companion, 'tell me why you have worn that same cloak this winter. I believe it is the third winter you have had it. We have all wondered why you did not get a new one, and that spiteful Caroline Howard, has talked about it every party this season.'

"I am very sorry," replied Emily, laughing, 'that Miss Howard has been at a loss for subjects of conversation, as to find nothing more interesting than my poor cloak. However, I will tell you my motive for wearing it, and I am sure dear Helen, that you will approve of it. But first promise me that you will tell no one else. I should not think of explaining it to any one but you.'

Here Mr. Hinton almost resolved to show himself. He felt it a breach of honor to hear what was evidently a secret; but his interest in the fair Emily was so strong, that he excused himself on that plea, and remained silent. Helen made the required promise, and Emily proceeded: "You remember hearing the death of my uncle Murray, last summer. He had failed just before, so that his family were left quite destitute. Catherine the eldest daughter, has been at Mrs. Willard's school for the last year, and she was very desirous of remaining another term, after which Mrs. Willard would engage her as a teacher. She considers her one of her finest scholars. But it was not possible for her mother to continue such an expense, and my father said that he could not offer to do it unless we would make some retrenchment in our domestic affairs. Therefore I offered to wear my cloak another season, and to give little Julia music lessons, instead of her having a teacher. Now do you not think that a sufficient motive? I assure you that I have felt more pleasure, this winter, in wearing that old cloak, than I should have done in possessing one even more splendid than Miss La Mode's, for my poor cousin will be able to support herself and assist her mother in educating her brothers and sisters."

"That is just like yourself, Emily," exclaimed her friend enthusiastically. "I only wish I could tell of it. How ashamed Caroline Howard would be of her ill-natured speeches!"

It is needless to say that there was another auditor who shared in the admiration of Helen. Mr. Norton was so delighted with the simple recital of Emily, that he longed to clasp her to his heart, and tell her that his happiness depended on her alone. He saw the young ladies take their departure, and in a few moments after hastened away, forgetting his aunt and all her commissions, and leaving the milliner lost in astonishment at his abrupt departure. He reached Mr. Hardwood's almost as soon as Emily herself, and astonished her by a warm declaration of his feelings. She did not bid him despair, and it was soon after announced that Mr. Norton and Emily Hardwood were engaged, much to the astonishment of Miss La Mode and Caroline Howard, who could not understand why she was preferred to themselves.

Mrs. Hinton was delighted with Mr. Norton's choice and predicted that he would have a pattern wife. She never forgot her good resolutions, but her persuasions were lost upon her former friend, Caroline, who was, however, soon forced, by the failure of her father, to renounce her extravagant habits.

We must do Mr. Norton the justice to say that he had the candor to confess to his wife, soon after their marriage, the means by which he obtained a knowledge of her motives for wearing the old cloak, which was ever after preserved as a precious relic. I can assure my readers that she did not blame him severely, and should this tale ever meet their eyes, I trust that they will both pardon the use I have made of the incidents related to me.

WITCHCRAFT OUT DONE.

A little boy was drowned recently in Lowell, (Mass.) A citizen of that place mesmerized a lady relative for the purpose of examination in reference to a diseased person. After the examination was completed, it was suggested that she be examined in relation to the drowned boy. The operator then merely required her to go over the water, and point out what she saw. After a few moments delay, she suddenly sprang from her chair, and with a shriek exclaimed, 'There is a boy under some logs, and he's dead!'—at the same time manifesting the greatest fear, being almost in a convulsive state, and shedding tears freely. She was soon soothed, and relieved from the mesmeric influence. The next day, another young lady, who had resided only about a fortnight in the city, was put in the mesmeric state by a different operator, and with a full understanding that she was to be examined in regard to the lost body. After remaining for a time under the magnetic influence, she started and uttered nearly the same exclamation that the other lady used, but was less affected. She then described the body as lying on the bottom of the river, apparently entangled by some roots or other substance under the logs beneath the dam. She declared that the body of the boy was not bruised, that it was bare-headed, and wore light-colored pantaloons, upon one knee of which was a patch, &c.—particulars which she knew not in a waking state. The operator then willed her to remember the place she had designated, and relieved her from the condition. She then went to the river, accompanied by others, and after a short time the body of the boy was found in the exact situation and condition in which it had been described to be by her. The water was twelve feet deep under the logs, and very muddy; but by means of a suitable pole and hook, the body was drawn up with considerable exertion; it evidently having been attached to some substance on the bottom. As described, it was free from bruises, the cap was gone, and the particulars in regard to the pantaloons were precisely as stated by her.

THE WAY TO DO BUSINESS.

"Have you a large stock of goods on hand which you wish to reduce? Then nothing is easier than to do it. Only advertise liberally, (either in your own paper, or, if your feelings lead you that way, in the papers of your neighbors,) and the thing is done. Depend upon it, it is false economy to keep all knowledge of what you have on hand from the public, when the means of communicating such knowledge may be obtained so cheaply. We have always observed, that those who advertise the most liberally in the papers, and scatter their handbills the most widely among the people, are generally the most prosperous in business. The reason is plain. People like to be asked to buy, and that, too, in a polite manner. For who, if they can help it, will deal with a chuff, morose, vinegar-crust sort of a chap, who is too ill-natured or too ill-mannered to say with a bland smile, 'Madam, shall I show you this rich silk?' or 'this beautiful figured de lane?' or will you try on this pair of fine flexible gloves?' as the case may be. Nobody! Such a man never advertises. Oh no!—not he. He is as penurious of his money as he is of his smiles. It is only your affable and gentlemanly merchant, who wishes every body success in their business, and tries hard himself to make an honest calling, that advertises. People know this; and hence they look over the papers to see where they can get the best bargains, and at the same time be treated with the courtesy and politeness which nobody dislikes."

NATIVE AMERICANISM.

There never existed, it seems to us in this country a combination for political purposes, more worthy of the severest reprobation, than that recently organized in many of our large cities under the pseudo-patriotic title of 'Native Americans.' The principles which this party profess to entertain are, in the first place, utterly repugnant to those upon which our system of government is founded, and which form the basis of all our institutions; and in the second place, the manner in which these dogmas are put forth and carried out, is calculated to excite apprehensions of consequences by no means to be invited. The language in which our foreign population is addressed or spoken of is such as would rouse up the indignation of a class of people far less powerful or sensitive, and is absolutely disgraceful to the age and country in which we live. In a circular issued by the Nativists, on the eve of the late election in New York, the people were conjured to lend their suffrages to men 'whose hearts were polluted by no drop of foreign blood,' and by other appeals, couched in language equally abhorrent, where they invoked to sustain the candidates of the 'American' party. Such language as this strikes us, to say the least, as very unbecoming. Our own hearts are, in some degree, 'polluted by foreign blood.' Our ancestry were the growth of a foreign soil, and that not many centuries back, and often not many years. Besides, to speak thus of our naturalized citizens is grossly libellous and unjust. Are not these men 'whose hearts are polluted by foreign blood,' good citizens—quite as good as those of equal intelligence among our native born? Are they not true to the country of their adoption, and have they not in time past shown themselves to be so, when the emergency called? There are no people in the states more ardently attached to our free institutions than the naturalized population. It is natural that they should be so. They have felt the burthen of monarchical and aristocratic governments. The iron of oppression has been driven into their souls, and they know how to appreciate the blessings of freedom. Our policy, then, should not be to make them enemies, but friends—not to degrade them, but elevate and enlighten—not to put them under the brand of civil proscription, but to treat them as citizens, men and brethren—who have an equal interest with ourselves in preserving unimpaired the public liberties, and securing to each and all the fullest enjoyment of the blessings of good government. Any other policy than this must be suicidal, and we cannot but look upon the aristocratic exclusiveness of the 'Native Americans' as alike unjust and dangerous. Looking at human nature from that point of view which is taken even by the Nativists themselves, it is perfectly clear that the policy they propose is wrong. Carry out their doctrines, and we should have in our midst a vast population shut out from the rights of citizenship—degraded in their own es-

DR. BUTLER,

NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevails to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of most practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisers, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the fulsome description of their infallible specifics, and multitudes of compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sex, so that there can be no hesitation in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance to the Alley.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum, FOR THE CURE OF

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in asserting the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician. JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enailing upon me the worst of all diseases, I have in which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE, Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum. I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—(that he has had frequent turns of spitting blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, &c.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT, Quincy, May 2d, 1843.

Price, $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.00.

Voted—That the Town purchase three Suction Hose Engines, with all the necessary apparatus, one to be located in the South, one in the West, and one in the Quincy Point Districts, and build Houses for the same. Yeas 58—Nays 83.

Voted—That Messrs. Chit Rodgers, Gershom Clements and Justin Spear be a Committee to carry the above vote into immediate effect.

Voted—That the Committee have discretionary power relative to the building of the Engine Houses.

Voted—That the Committee be authorized to draw from the Town Treasury, a sum sufficient to pay for the Engines and Houses; and that the treasurer be authorized to borrow that amount.

Voted—To indefinitely postpone the article relative to buying a Stone Trough.

Voted—That the meeting be dissolved.

THE TEXAS TREATY.

The treaty of annexation of the Republic of Texas to the United States has been completed and signed by John C. Calhoun, Secretary of State, on the part of the United States, and two Commissioners on the part of Texas, has been sent by the President to the Senate for their ratifications, and has been published. In the Senate it has been committed, and what will be the report of that committee upon it, and what the final action of the Senate, are very prominent and interesting matters of speculation at the present time.

Art. 1. The Republic of Texas cedes to the United States all its territories, to be held in full property and sovereignty, and to be annexed to the United States as one of their territories, and subject to the same constitutional provisions.

Art. 2. The citizens to be incorporated into the Union, and admitted as soon as may be, to all rights, privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States.

Art. 3. All titles to be recognized.

Art. 4. The public lands to be on the same footing as the others.

Art. 5. The United States to assume and pay the public debt of Texas.

Art. 6. Commissioners appointed by the President of the United States to liquidate the public debt.

Art. 7. Until further provisions, the laws of Texas to be in force, and all executive and judicial officers, and the courts of justice, in all respects, as now constituted and ordered.

Art. 8. The President of the United States to appoint a commissioner to receive transfer of territory, and archives, and exercise all executive authority, till other provision is made.

Art. 9. Exchange of ratifications to be made at Washington in six months.

Such are the prominent provisions of the Treaty. The accompanying documents transmitted to the Senate are a correspondence between our Minister in England and the British Government, and between Mr. Calhoun and the British Minister in Washington.

TYLER STATE CONVENTION. A meeting of the political friends of President John Tyler was held in Faneuil Hall, Boston, on Thursday of last week.

Hon. Asa T. Newhall of Lynnfield, was elected President, and Messrs Jacob Ames of Boston, J. W. Crooks of Springfield, John Coffin of Newburyport, William B. Duggan of Quincy, and Richard Luce of Tisbury, Vice Presidents. Secretaries, Nathaniel Gale of Boston, and Washington Adams of Newburyport.

Mr. Gale addressed the meeting, and offered a series of resolutions in vindication of Mr. Tyler's administration and in favor of his election to the next presidency. He was followed by O. A. Brownson, who was succeeded by Col. Zabriske of New Jersey, and Walter J. Walsh of Boston.—Upon the conclusion of Mr. Walsh's speech the resolutions were adopted, and the proceedings of the convention concluded by the election of delegates to the Tyler National Convention, to be held at Baltimore, on the 27th inst.

ANOTHER DEATH. The decease of the Hon. Peire E. Bossier, (dem.), a member of Congress from Louisiana, is recorded in Washington papers as having taken place on Wednesday night of last week. He is the tenth member of the present Congress who has been removed by death, and several more are now dangerously ill.

If you sow coarse salt upon the ground intended for early turnips, they will not be worm-eaten.

SURVEYORS OF WOOD AND BARK. The following gentlemen have been appointed by the Selectmen, Surveyors of Wood and Bark, for the Town of Quincy, for the year ensuing; and have taken the oath prescribed by law, viz:—

Frederic Hardwick, Jr., George L. Baxter, Seth Adams, George B. Nightingale, Daniel Munroe, George H. Locke, Elihu Thayer, Samuel Higgins, George Baxter, Isaiah G. Whiton and Richard Newcomb.

Their Fees are for each load of Wood or Bark, six cents; for each range of Wood or Bark of one cord, or less, six cents, and for every additional cord, two cents per cord.

Attest:— ISRAEL W. MUNROE, Town Clerk.

THE TEXAS QUESTION. Hon. Thomas H. Benton, United States Senator from Missouri, has written a letter in answer to one addressed to him from members of the Texian Congress. He goes strongly in favor of the annexation of Texas, in pursuance of his uniform opinion upon the subject since 1819, and declares that the annexation will sooner or later take place. In respect to the treaty before the Senate, he very properly forbears to disclose the course he will take; but infer from his letter that he does not approve of the manner in which the treaty has been made. He strongly condemns the policy of making Texas a question of politics, and in the course of his remarks censures severely the cabinet of 1819, by whose agency the territory of Texas was alienated from the country.

ANTI-ANNEXATION MEETING. A very large gathering of highly respectable citizens of all parties has been held in New York City, to express the opposition of that community of the project of annexing Texas to the Union. The venerable Hon. Albert Gallatin presided, and opened the proceedings by an earnest appeal against the proposed annexation. His closing allusion to this as the last act of his long and busy public life—this protest against national perfidy and aggression, and the disasters which must result from them—is spoken of as most thrilling and effective.

The meeting was then addressed by Messrs. Theodore Sedgwick and David D. Field, and some spirited and able argumentative resolutions against the project were adopted by acclamation.

MOST DISGRACEFUL. Another most shameful row and fight occurred in the United States House of Representatives, growing out of Mr. White's speech on the Tariff. Mr. White, late speaker of the House, made some grossly offensive remarks concerning Mr. Rathbun of New York, which led to a fracas between the two, in which blows were exchanged. The belligerents were promptly separated, pacified, induced to shake hands, and they then made apologies to the House. Some disturbance occurred at the door of the House while this scene was going on, during which William S. Moore of Kentucky, not a member of the House, discharged a pistol at Mr. McConist, member from Ohio. The ball missed its mark, and took effect upon John L. Wirt, one of the messengers of the House, who was badly wounded in the thigh. The offender was arrested by the Sergeant at Arms, and the subject brought to the notice of the House.

TEMPERANCE TAVERN. Our friend Wales, remarks the editor of the Boston Trumpet, who keeps the Temperance Hotel in Weymouth, says, he does not make so much money as when he sold rum; but that he has a much more peaceful conscience; and he adds, "that he would not go back to the rum business on any account whatsoever."—Three cheers for the Weymouth Hotel.

ANOTHER NOMINATION. The President of the United States has submitted to the Senate for their confirmation, the name of Hon. Henry Crocker, late a member of the Executive Council during Gov. Morton's administration, for the office of Collector of the Customs for Boston and Charlestown. An excellent selection, and if party feelings are laid aside, the Senate will concur in the appointment.

ANNEXATION OF TEXAS. The Hon. Henry Clay has written a letter in relation to this exciting subject, which is published in the National Intelligencer, and occupies two and a half columns of that paper. The closing sentence of the letter is his eminent author on this topic in a few words:—

"I consider the annexation of Texas, at this time, without the assent of Mexico, as a measure compromising the national character, involving us certainly in war with Mexico, probably with other foreign powers, dangerous to the integrity of the Union, inexpedient in the present financial condition of the country, and not called for by any general expression of public opinion."

DENTISTRY. The most splendid set of teeth ever beheld, were lately shown us by those experienced dentists, Drs. Cummings and Eastham, of Boston. They are to be placed in the mouth of one of the Boston belles, who has been so unfortunate as to lose those necessary appendages to "the human face divine."

Our fair readers, (and those who are not fair), who are suffering from decayed teeth, should call on Drs. Cummings and Eastham, and no mistake, they will not be disappointed.

SINGULAR FACTS. Of the Governors of Massachusetts, there was not one, from John Carver, in 1620, down to the present year, who had a middle name. The present Governor, George N. Briggs, is the first exception.

Of the Lieutenant Governors, there was no one with a middle name till the year 1802, when Edward H. Robbins was elected; and there have been two since, viz: Thomas L. Winthrop, first elected in 1826, and Samuel T. Armstrong, in 1833.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, AND MARRIAGES. By the terms of the law, it is made the duty of the School Committees (!) of the cities and towns in the Commonwealth to ascertain, annually, in the month of May, all the births which have happened within such city or town during the preceding year, and make return thereof to the Town Clerk. It is also the duty of all persons before whom marriages may be legally solemnized, to return to the Town Clerk, in the month of March, in each year, a certificate of marriages solemnized before them within the year.

NO WONDER MEN FAIL. At a late ball in New York, a certain young lady, not having the fear of bankruptcy before her eyes, wore a dress which cost five hundred and sixty dollars. It was of silk velvet, royal purple, bound with gold lace, and the diamonds with which the clasp of the bracelets were studded, were estimated to be worth at least three thousand dollars.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE. A woman, who alleges herself to have been born of German parents in Germany, and who has been since the death of her parents, in infancy, held as a slave in Louisiana, has brought suits against her former and present owner, to recover her own liberty and that of her three children by an overseer.

NEWBURYPORT BANK. The receivers of this institution have given notice to all persons holding bills of said Bank, or having other claims against said corporation, to present the same for allowance, on or before the fifth day of September next, preparatory to the making of a final dividend of the assets of said Bank.

To Contractors

SEALED proposals will be received by the Building Committee, until MONDAY, the sixth day of May next, at two o'clock in the afternoon, for furnishing and delivering on the spot, all the materials for building a Stone Town House, fifty by eighty feet, and thirty-five feet four inches in height—the front end and two sides to be of fine dressed blue Quincy Granite of uniform color—the back end to be of rough ashlar, and the whole to be laid in cement, together with about one hundred and eighty perches of stone for the cellar.

Proposals will be received for furnishing the stone for the cellar, for the front, for either side, and for the back end, separate, or the whole together.

The whole of the mason work, including the cellar, must be one contract. For furnishing the lumber, etc., and the Carpenter's work, separate proposals must be made.

Said building is to be finished on or before the first day of November next, in a workmanlike manner, satisfactorily to the Committee.

Specifications and plans may be seen at the office of Mr. Solomon W. Adams.

Per order Building Committee.

Boston, April 6. 1f

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston.

We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING,

ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season.

We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all. Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or top tips, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1-2 cts.; Blue and other colors 50 cts.; GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1 50; Saturated Pants, Canada Gays, &c., &c.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the

QUINCY HALL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, OVER THE QUINCY MARKET.

Boston, April 6. 1f

POETRY.

MY FATHER'S HOUSE.

There is a place of wondrous rest,
Far, far above the skies,
Where beauty lives eternally,
And pleasure never dies—
My father's house—my heavenly home,
Where glorious mansions stand;
Prepared by God himself for all
Who seek "Immanuel's land."

When tossed upon the waves of life
With fear on every side,
When loudly howls the gathering storm,
And foams the angry tide—
Beyond the storm, beyond the waves,
Bursts forth the light of morn,
Bright beaming from my father's house,
To cheer the soul forlorn.

And even when the hour draws nigh,
With all its dreaded gloom,
When death shall burst the bands of life,
And sink us in the tomb,
The light of yonder heavenly house
Shall cheer the parting soul,
And o'er it, mounting to the skies,
A tide of rapture roll.

In that blest home of changeless joy,
Earth's parted friends shall meet,
With smiles of love that never fade,
And happiness complete;
O, there adieu are sounds unknown;
Death frowns not on that clime,
But life in glorious beauty blooms,
Eternal and sublime!

SPRING.

The pleasant spring has come again,
Its voice is in the trees,
It speaks from every sunny glen,
It rides upon the breeze!
The scattered flocks are lowing
Beneath each shady tree,
The gentle winds are blowing,
O come, rejoice with me.

The pleasant spring has come again,
I hear the river's roar,
It sparkles, foams and leaps, as when
My summer sickle bore!
Stern winter's chain is rending,
The gushing fountains are free,
And light with water blended,
Is dancing o'er the sea!

The pleasant spring has come again,
All nature's heart is glad,
The mountains rise like giant men,
And smile with beauty clad;
The pretty flowers are springing
In every greenwood shade,
Their perfumes around them flinging
As sweet as Eden made.

The pleasant spring has come again,
The ploughman's song arise,
While woodland echoes mock, and then
The thrilling cadence dies;
The merry birds are singing,
Afar the music floats,
And every vale is ringing
With soft and mellow notes.

The pleasant spring has come again,
Its voice is in the trees,
It speaks from every sunny glen,
It rides upon the breeze!
The pretty flowers are springing,
The gushing fountains are free,
The merry birds are singing,
Let all rejoice with me!

THE PHYSICIAN.

There is a body, every joint and limb
Is still, yet moves by God's all holy law;
The eye turns here and there, yet turns in him,
The ear no sound but his own words can draw;
In voice the long stopped ear obedient hears,
The withered hand outstretched its bidding owns,
And they who mourn the dead dry up their tears,
The prison walls hear not their captive's groans;
Through the wide world of living death it brings
A new-born life wherever it walks abroad;
Such as beneath the feet of May up springs
When forth she steps where Winter late has trod;
And at her coming starts the palsied year,
That slumbers on though summer months are near.

ANECDOTES.

"Father," said a sporting youth to his reverend parent, "they say trout will bite now." "Well, well," was the consolatory answer, "mind your work then, and you'll be sure they won't bite you."

"I don't know how it is," soliloquized a drunken loafer, "but it seems to me, there is the thundering hopping up of things to right, that I ever did see, even the meeting-house is dancing jigs, and the moment I let go the post, up jumps the sidewalks and hits me in the forehead. It won't do—I want to go home, but I'm afraid to start; it is as much as my life is worth."

A six foot six inches "Hoosier," was accosted by a genteel-looking scamp-gallows, with the remark, "You have dropped your wallet, sir." The Hoosier looked green, but he had not come all the way from Indiana to be "smoked" by a Yankee. He accordingly innocently replied, "Ah! yes, sir; thank you, sir. Take this for your honesty!" handing him a five dollar bill from his vest pocket. The sharper bowed, and left him, chuckling inwardly, no doubt, at the success of his trick. The Hoosier remarked: "This wallet appears to be a very good one; and, although it is doubtless filled with old lottery tickets, it is worth more than a five dollar bill on the Landstone Bank, Michigan!" He is, like a singed cat, not half as green as he looks.

"How seldom it happens," said one friend to another, "that we find editors bred to their business." "Very," replied the other, "and have you not remarked how seldom their business is bread to the editors?"

A doctor once asked a lawyer what was meant by "docking an entail?" "Why doctor," replied the attorney, "it is doing what you will not with your patient; it is suffering recovery!"

Dr. Louis Kurtz.
RESPECTFULLY informs the afflicted and the public in general, that he has, on account of the great increase of business, removed his infirmary to the spacious dwelling house

NO. 64 CAMBRIDGE STREET, BOSTON, where he may be consulted gratis, and with the utmost confidence, in French, German or English.
Thankful for the liberal patronage the public have bestowed upon him for the last three years, he solicits its continuance, assuring them that he shall do all in his power to make himself worthy of it.

Dr. K. has had during his sojourn at the hospitals of Leipzig, (Germany,) Paris, (France,) and for the last three years in this country, a very extensive practice, and is confident of being able to give entire satisfaction in the following complaints, viz:—
Scrofulous Humor, Sore Legs, Spine Complaint, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Cough, Consumption, Dropsy, Mercurial Affection, White Swelling of the knee, etc., etc.

In diseases of a private nature, (maladies secret), Dr. Kurtz is acknowledged to be surpassed by no physician in this country, and warrants a perfect cure in from three to ten days, according to the stage of the disease.

Dr. Louis Kurtz would respectfully call the attention of invalids to the following valuable remedies, viz:—
German Anti-Mercurial Panacea. This medicine has been pronounced by the faculty of Leipzig, (Germany,) a sure and perfect cure, when that deadly poison, Mercury, has been injudiciously used. Price $1 per bottle—six bottles safely packed in a small box, $5.00.
German Tonic Mixture—an excellent remedy for dyspepsia. Price $1.00 per bottle $5.00.
German Tonic and Diuretic Pills—a sure and perfect cure for Fluor Albus, (Whites.) Price $1.00 per box—six boxes $5.00.
German Tonic Mixture or Female Monthly Pills. The above named medicines have been pronounced by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe, the only sure and safe remedies for suppression, stoppage, etc., etc., and since their introduction into this country, several thousand bottles and boxes have been used and given entire satisfaction. Price $2.00 per box or bottle.

Dr. L. Kurtz pays particular attention to all Female Complaints, in the treatment of which he has had much experience and great success.

Medical aid in Boston.

DR. BUTLER,

NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevails to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of "billingsgate," in the fulsome description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sex, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

All letters must be post paid.
Dr. A. S. BUTLER.
Boston, June 17.

DR. FERNANDS'
Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

FOR THE CURE OF
Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The completion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practising as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician,
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.
From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine:
SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast en-tailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.
Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:
DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause him to be greatly weakened. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say, in your favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Testimony of an eminent Chemist in favor of FARR'S LIFE PILLS, by John Dale, Esq. Lecturer on Chemistry, and pupil of the celebrated D. Dalton, F. R. S. &c. &c.

MANCHESTER, Dec. 7, 1841.
To T. Roberts & Co. 9 Crane Court, Fleet St. London.
GENTLEMEN:—At the request of several friends who have introduced Farr's Life Pills into their families as a medicine, I have submitted them to a strict chemical analysis, in order to ascertain whether they contained any of those active medicinal preparations, now so commonly introduced into many advertised medicines. I beg to say, that I find them worthy of being recommended to the public for their efficacy and simplicity, and as stated by the proprietors, to be really Vegetable Pills, containing, as they do, nothing but what is of vegetable origin.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN DALE, Analytical Chemist.
S. W. Fowle, (late Smith & Fowle) 138 Washington street, opposite foot of School street, Agent for Farr's Life Pills for the New England States.

The Officers of the Total Abstinence and Washington Total Abstinence Societies of Quincy, will hold their next "Union Meeting" on MONDAY EVENING next, at half past seven o'clock, at the house of Seth Adams.
J. C. EDWARDS, } Secretaries.
S. F. FOWLER, }

There will be a meeting of the "Singers Union" for rehearsal, at the Town Hall, SUNDAY AFTER-NOON, (to-morrow) at five o'clock.
The Singers from the several religious Societies in Town are invited to attend.
CHARLES MARSH, Secretary.

The Selectmen of Quincy, hereby give notice that they will be in session at the Town Hall, the last SATURDAY in each month, until further notice, from five to seven o'clock in the afternoon. All persons having business with the Town are requested to present it on said days.

DANIEL BAXTER,
BRYANT B. NEWCOMB,
WILLIAM D. GRAY,

MARRIED.
In Boston, on the 2d inst., by Rev. Mr. Pierpoint, Mr. Edmund B. Taylor, eldest son of the late Gen. Thomas Taylor of this town, to Miss Abby B. Faxon of the former place.
In Brighton, 25th ult., by Rev. Mr. Whitney, Mr. Horace F. May of Boston, to Miss Charlotte Porter of the former place.

DIED.
In this town, 5th inst., Hannah Porter, daughter of Mr. Ezra and Mrs. Sophia Badger, aged 7.
This lovely child thus onward led,
Is now numbered with the dead;
No more around her parents' hearth,
Sweet joys impart and harmless mirth.
No more with playmates speed her way,
In quest of knowledge's brilliant ray;
No more her lessons well read—
The teacher's blessing on her head.
No more will sorrow's cruel dart,
Ruffle the mind—corrode the heart;
Nor sin with its poisonous sting,
The soul distract—in anguish wring;
For the spirit disrobed of time,
Dwells forth in a purer clime,
Where virtue's fruits transparent grow,
And streams of bliss in rapture flow.

To Contractors.
SEALED proposals will be received by the Building Committee, until TUESDAY, the fourteenth day of May inst., at two o'clock in the afternoon, for furnishing and delivering on the spot, all the materials for Building a Stone Town House, fifty by eighty feet, and thirty-five feet six inches in height—the front end and two sides to be finished blue granite of uniform color—the back end to be of rough ashlar, together with about one hundred and eighty perches of stone for the cellar. All the outside walls must be laid in cement—the cellar wall and footing to be laid in mortar. The stone must be furnished in season so that the building can be completed by the time specified.
Proposals will be received for furnishing the stone for the cellar, for the front, or either side, and for the back end, separate.
The whole of the stone mason work, including the cellar wall, must be one contract.
For furnishing all the materials, and doing the Carpenter's work, a separate proposal must be made.
Bonds satisfactory to the Committee will be required of contractors for the fulfillment of their contracts.
Said building is to be finished on or before the first day of November next, in a workmanlike manner, and acceptable to the Committee.
Specifications and plans may be seen at the office of Mr. Solomon Willard.
Per order of the Building Committee,
JOHN SUTHER, Chairman.
THOMAS BAXTER, Clerk.

QUINCY HALL.
CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT.
OVER THE NEW MARKET BOSTON.
JOHN SIMMONS & CO.

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston. We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of
CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING,
ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season. We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all.
Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or tip top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERSIZES, 37 1/2 cts., Blue and other colors 50 cts., GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1 50, Sateen Pants, Canada Gray, etc., etc.
All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the
QUINCY HALL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, OVER THE QUINCY MARKET.
Boston, April 6. 1f

THE EXTENSIVE WAREHOUSE

Valuable Real Estate for Sale.
THE Land and Buildings in Quincy, formerly owned by Thaddeus W. Cross, and improved by him for several years as a Carriage and Harness Manufactory, are now offered for sale.
It consists of half an acre of Land, two large and one small two story buildings, with sheds, etc. It is pleasantly situated on the main street, having two fronts in the immediate vicinity of business, schools, the Unitarian Meeting-house, Bank, Hotel, etc. It is a desirable location for almost any mechanical branch of industry, might be improved with very little expense for the business it has been occupied so many years, or the site would make a very pleasant situation for a gentleman's residence. Such a chance to obtain so central, valuable, and pleasant a location for business or site for a residence will not probably occur again in this town for many years. A good title given of the property, which will be sold for a reasonable price, and part of the money can remain on mortgage. Further information may be obtained from the subscriber, and all letters on the subject, post paid, will command his immediate attention.

MISCELLANY.

A RACE FOR A WIFE.

BY MRS. S. G. HALL.

Andrew Kennedy and Mike Barry were suitors for the hand of Peggy Magrath. The powers which Irish fathers exercise over their children, is often anything but gentle; they dispose of them in marriage frequently to those considered the best bidders; and it is no small compliment to Irish women to say that even in instances where they have loved others, they very generally succeed in withdrawing their affections, and making true and devoted wives, and affectionate mothers. In the case of Peggy Magrath, one candidate stood as well with her father as the other. Both were fine stout fellows, able to work, when they could get work to do, with a cabin and potatoe garden, waiting for furniture, and both anxious to possess the hand, heart, and little fortune of Peggy Magrath. There are two ways of winning a woman's favor—the right and the wrong.—Andrew Kennedy had chosen the right. Mike Barry the wrong. Andrew in the first instance made sure of the girl—Mike of the father. And if Andrew had been a man much worse off in the world—if his cow had not been as good—his feather bed as heavy, or his pig as weighty as those of his rival, might would have overcome right, and Andrew would have had no chance. But as it was, the father finding that one boy was as well to do as the other, and that moreover the faction of the rejected would be too strong for him, thought they would yield to the lady, declared, as he was walking home from an 'early mass,' that he would leave it 'twixt the Almighty and his daughter; let her settle it in God's name, and he'd wash his hands of it altogether; and he'd settle on one or the other that week, for he could not be having his peace of mind destroyed, with her and her sweet-hearts any longer; his house was like a fair or station with them, for boys could not let the girls alone; and sure it was well for him and his 'ould woman,' they had but one daughter: for if they had more, they'd quit the country sooner than be bothered entirely the way he had with them—for bachelors!

Now Peggy was as arrant a coquette as ever flirted a fan in a ball room; one of those who are born with intense desire to continue the 'slave trade,' who delighted in tormenting; and who, whether she cared or not for a man, would enjoy teasing him; indeed, the better she loved, the greater pleasure in tantalizing the object of her affections. As long as her father wavered between Andrew and Mike, the true affection she bore the former made her dread losing him so much, that she was far more affectionate to him than she had ever been to any one else; and once when her father said something that led her to believe he decidedly favored Mike, she burst into a flood of tears, and declared that she would sooner 'die' sooner than marry him. Now when her father accompanied by both suitors, entered the house, and he told her they were bachelors, and she must make up her mind which of the two should be her husband, for he (her father) had no mind to keep an old maid in his house, she blushed and simpered, looking thro' the long lashes of her eyes without once raising the lids, and to the utter astonishment of both her father and Andrew, accepted Mike's offer to dance the first jig with her that evening—completely turning her back on her former favorite. Mike having got her consent to the dance, eager to show himself off to the best advantage, betwixt that his brogans would look bad 'on the floor,' and, like a fool, left the field open to Andrew, while he set out to borrow his brother's 'pumps.' This opportunity was not lost upon Andrew, who renewed his suit, but became thoroughly perplexed by the waywardness of woman's nature—he could make nothing out of her.

'Indeed,' said she, 'she would as soon—as her father was so hard on her—marry one as the other. May be she showed more favor one time to Andrew than to Mike, and may be at another time she showed more favor to Mike than to Andrew; may be she'd just toss up for them, call Mike the head and Andrew the tail, and so get her luck.'

Andrew! poor fellow! was half made with vexation—and yet, what could he do? He entertained serious thoughts of abduction, but where was the good of it? 'Till she was that changeable 'craythor' she was worth the having.

He offered to fight Mike for her, but this her father negated at once; he could not but his fighting for a child of his. 'But I'll tell you what, brave boys!' exclaimed the old man; 'I'll tell you what—do as I did for my good wife, and what no Irishman was ashamed to do—run for her! Every boy in the place is free-footed—run for her, and let the fleet foot win her.'

This was agreed upon. Both the young men were remarkable for activity—both anxious to win a bride; and despite Peggy Magrath's coquetry, when she took her stand upon the rising ground that commands a view of the 'race course,' all agreed that she was worth ten times the trouble.

'I'll tell you what it is, Peggy,' said one of her companions, 'I'll bet my bran new handkerchief that never crossed my neck, baring this day, that Mike will be the hero; he's longer in the legs—and oh, my! but he's the active boy intirely.'

'Well, whoever wins, Peg's luck will be happy; that's all I say.'

'Suppose they should both win!' added another. 'What will you do then, Peggy dear? Toss up for them?'

'There they go!' exclaimed a third—while Peggy's heart beat stout reproaches at her unfaithfulness: 'there they go—it's cruel hard, so it is, to make them end such a race by coming up even this bit of a hill at the long run.—Mary Grady do you mind the day Abby Flynn, running the race for his wife, fell and cut his head, so that the grave was his wedding-bed—poor fellow.'

'I'd rather they'd give it up at once,' exclaimed Peggy, following the contending parties with her eyes, and trembling from head to foot at the advantage which Mike had evidently obtained over Andrew.—'I'd rather they'd give it up. Well, I don't care who wins or who loses—I'll marry which I like,' she continued, bursting into tears, and covering her face with her hands.

'Oh honor, Peggy,' they exclaimed; 'surely you would not be guilty of such a falsity as that?'

'Tell me,' she answered, all her coquetry forgotten in her anxiety for him she really loved, so that she dared not look upon the race; 'tell me for the love of mercy, how is't going with him?'

'With him!' repeated as arrant a coquette as herself—'which of the lins?'

'Andrew!' she breathlessly replied.

'Oh, be the dads! I don't know,' she answered, winking her merry eyes at her companion, while Peggy held her hands more tightly than ever over hers; 'I don't know at all—what do you think, Mary?'

'Oh!' said mischievous Mary, 'I can't tell; I'm sure now it was six to one, and half a dozen to the other—but now—oh my! but Mike has the legs to be sure—may be he can't use them—that! well, that last spring he gave bates all. Oh, then, it's Mike that will make the fine husband, and no mistake—take your hands from your eyes Peggy, woman—there's money bid for you!'

'Open your eyes, jewel avourment!' said another; 'here they're coming up the hill—that's right, shoot boys. Oh then, Mrs. Mike, may be I won't shake a foot at your wedding; take down your hands, and look for yourself—Mike you are a rare hero!'

The young men were, as she said, running up to where they stood, but not in the degree Mary so mischievously intimated. Peggy without the power to withdraw her hands; her feelings overcame her.

'Take her, Mike; you well deserve her,' exclaimed the tantalizing girls, as Andrew, panting and gasping, ascended considerably in advance of his rival.

But Peggy heard them not; subdued by her emotions, she had fainted on the sward. Such is the overpowering nature of woman's coquetry, that after she recovered and was well assured of Andrew's victory, she would have played the fair lady Disdain, if she dared—but her father interposed, and she is now a good wife, and the mother of five small children!

'The custom here alluded to is still common among the rude peasantry of the south of Ireland.'

ALPACCA.

Probably few ladies, who wear and admire the beautiful fabric called Alpacca, are aware of the source of its production. The Alpacca is a wool bearing animal, indigenous to South America, and is one of four varieties, which bear general points of resemblance to each other. The Llana, one of these varieties, has been long known, and often described; but it is only within a few years that the Alpacca has been considered of sufficient importance to merit particular notice.

Nine-tenths of the wool of the Alpacca is black, the remainder being partly white, red and grizzled. It is of a very long staple, often reaching twelve inches, and resembles soft, glossy hair—which character is not lost by dyeing. The Indians in the South American mountains manufacture nearly all their clothing from this wool, and are enabled to appear in black dresses, without the aid of a dyer.—Both the Llana and Alpacca are, perhaps, even more valuable to the natives as beasts of burden than as wool-bearing animals, and the obstinacy of both, when irritated, is well known. The importance of this animal has been already considered by the English, in their hat, woolen and stuff trade, and an essay on the subject has been published, from which some of these details are collected.

The wool is so remarkable, being a jet black, glossy, silk-like hair, that it is fitted for the production of textile fabrics differing from all others, occupying a medium position between wool and silk. It is now mingled with other materials in such a singular manner, that while a particular dye will affect those, it will leave the Alpacca wool with its original black color, and thus give rise to great diversity.

When the value of this commodity became appreciated in England, it became an important question whether the animal itself could be reared in the country. From the power possessed by the Alpacca of living on very scanty herbage, it has been proposed to introduce the animal in those districts of Scotland and Ireland, where the English sheep cannot flourish. A recent writer on this subject remarks: 'To the tender of an Aides flock, the snow storm is disarmed of all its terrors, and as the stranger, when naturalized among us, would feed upon herbage, left behind by the cattle and sheep which had gone over the ground before him, he would not consequently interfere with the pasturage of our present herds and flocks, nor diminish in the slightest degree the provision of food reserved for them. The income which a farmer would derive from the new breeding stock will be readily calculated when it is taken into account that the South Down fleece seldom weighs more than two pounds, whereas the Alpacca yields from six to eight, and this wool always commands a higher price, besides keeping for seven years, if the market should be low.'

The late Dutches of York introduced the Alpacca as a denizen in her pleasure grounds, as did likewise the late Countess of Liverpool.—The Earl of Derby, has a small flock of Alpaccas, some of which were born on his estate, in England; and one, a fine mae, has wool eighteen or twenty inches in length. At the Glasgow meeting of the British Association, in 1840, it was stated that the Alpacca wool is naturally free from grease, and differs materially from the sheep, attributable to its perspiring through the skin, and consequently not requiring the artificial protection of smearing with tar and other substances injurious to the wool as far as the manufacture is concerned, and in shearing the animal requires no washing preparatory to the operation.' Another point considered not less singular and valuable, is that of its peculiar coat of silky wool proving a complete protection against an atmosphere at all times excessively humid, and against the deluging rain, which (among the Andes) continues upwards of four months in a year; thus rendering them well suited to the Granpian and other mountainous districts of Scotland.' Lastly, 'the animal is not only capable of undergoing great fatigue, but lives on the mountain herbage, little better than a kind of withered grass; and in times of scarcity, has been sustained several days without water, taking only a handful of maize.' A few of these animals have been introduced into America, but at present the attempt can be regarded only as an experiment.

DANIEL WEBSTER'S SPEECH.

The annexed remarks of the Hon. Daniel Webster were made before the Young Men's National Convention, at Baltimore, which assembled to ratify the nominations of President and Vice President.

I enjoy, gentlemen, quite an unexpected, but a sincere pleasure, in finding myself in the midst of this vast assembly of the whigs of the United States. I come among you for the single purpose of adding one more humble but devoted whig to that assembly, and to join in swelling those tones of public sentiment, which, springing up from this multitude, and from the whole land, have found a voice and an echo in the proceedings of the nominating convention.

Gentlemen, we have assembled here to perform one of the most responsible and solemn duties that can devolve upon freemen, or upon the citizens of a great country in time of peace. We have assembled to take out from among us men as candidates for our highest offices, nay, the highest offices in the gift of man; and to express opinions on grave matters of government, declaratory of the course we mark out for a president and a vice president of these United States. In a period of time marked with unusual interest, in the presence of a future that seems to be full of great events, we came here to select candidates with whom we would trust our government, and who for four years in the administration of that government, can exercise the greatest influence over the interests, the happiness, and the honor of a whole country. Thus then I say, we came here to discharge a duty the most responsible and most solemn a free people can have cast upon them in a time of peace. Gentlemen of this assembly have left their homes to come here, from every walk in life—men of the highest patriotism, and the severest and most distinguished virtue—men renowned in the halls of legislation, on the highest benches of judicature, ornaments of all professions, venerable in age, and profound in learning; men, too, from all the members of this great confederation of states; and after assembling in convention, they have submitted to you the results of their deliberation, to which they have come with a unanimity almost unparalleled. They have presented to our consideration, and to the consideration of the country, a candidate for president, whose name is to form one, the sole, the single, the only rallying point of all good whigs of the United States. I address you then who are here, and with the hope that you will thus induce others to ask you, how is it, by what means, under what auspices, you intend to bring about a successful election; and with a view to impress upon you the duty of using means, let me remind you that when our fathers began to struggle to achieve the independence of the country, they told the world, as a pledge of their firmness, and as presage of their intent, 'Our cause is just, our union is perfect.' We too have a duty to perform, less dangerous and less glorious than our fathers had, it is true. We are not born to create a country, to erect a constitution, to frame a government, to start it in motion, or to spread the light of liberty over the earth, as they were; but we are born, and we must preserve, and protect, and transmit, undishonored, untouched, the heritage they left us. In the discharge of our duties to our country, therefore, we must borrow not only their patriotism and their devotion, but we may adopt their language, and let the cry go forth, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Falls of St. Anthony, from the rivers of the west to the shore of the ocean, with a tone and vigor and energy the world will hear, 'OUR CAUSE IS JUST, OUR UNION IS PERFECT.'

Gentlemen, the convention has proposed Henry Clay of Kentucky, for your suffrages. For thirty years and more, he has been prominent and eminent in the public service. He has served his country faithfully and honorably, both at home and abroad. This long career of public service, this eminence before the country, marked him out as a man most fit to be trusted with the administration of the government of the country, and to command the suffrages of his fellow countrymen. There were other indications of public sentiment that he of all the rest was the man, and the only man, upon whom they, whose principles were in unison with his, should now unite. And in these indications I, for one, with the truest sincerity, can say I heartily rejoice,—rejoice that there is not a dissenting nor a doubtful voice to break the unanimity of the nomination.

It is true, gentlemen—Mr. Webster continued—it is true, that, in a public life now so short, I have differed from Mr. Clay in regard to matters pertaining to the practical administration of the government. There have been occasions when we have taken different views of what it was our duty to do. Few men can live long together and see things alike. But whenever we have differed—I am sure on my part, as I believe on his—with equal conscientiousness and mutual respect. I know of no great constitutional question on which we differ. I know of no leading interest in the country—still less, and what is often of more importance for our peace, if not our property—still less do I know of any different views entertained of our public relations between that distinguished leader of the whig party and myself. If it were not so, under present circumstances it would become me, for the personal respect I feel for him, which is sincere and deep, from the high regard I have for his public worth and private character, to stand by him. Nay, more, he is a whig, and I too am a whig, the selected man of the whig party, of which I am a part and a parcel. And with regard to the part I am to act, gentlemen, in this contest before us, there shall be no more doubt of my disposition than of my duty.

The same convention, gentlemen, has presented, for the second office of the government, another gentleman, not with the unanimity of the first selection, for it was not to be expected that any new name would at first command that universality of assent, which the name for the first office had. Several worthy and good men were before the convention. Each had his friends. Among them all a selection has been made, in regard to which I may say, a wiser and better one could not have been made. A man of purer character, of soberer temperament, or more accomplished manners, firmer, more unflinching, more unbending, the whig party could not have found, than Theodore Frelinghuysen. I have long known him well. I have served with him in public life, and such is his purity of life and ease of manner, that he has a strong hold on the love, the affection, and personal attachment, of all who know him. The state of New Jersey, who has presented him as her son, needs no encomium from us.—Her character, her achievements, past and recent, her history, her revolutionary services, her sufferings, we all know. The patriotic dust of her dead on the soil of Princeton, Trenton and Monmouth, can never be forgotten. Some of us have heard from our father's lips, how in scenes of deepest gloom, her little army of whigs supported and stayed the hand of Washington against the array of the enemy: how her plains and hills were traversed by American soldiers, tracking their path with blood from their wounded feet; how that whole population, all whigs, administered all they had, their food, their raiment, and their blessings when all else was given. And if an occasion has now come, rendering it proper, I am sure every person present will derive a gratification in remembering New Jersey—in remembering a patriot and gallant state so as to pay her a mark of respect in offering her distinguished son the second office of the government.

Gentlemen, the duty before us, and other whigs of the country, is to restore that ascendancy of constitutional government which circumstances have taken away from us; to re-establish whig principles and whig measures; to re-affirm the sentiments acted upon in 1840; to do that work over again, and to do it, now, God willing, so that it will hold. The present circumstances of the country, its public prosperity, the general contentment and happiness of the people in their business employments, show that much good has been done by the revolution of 1840. Our duty is now to hold on to what is good, and to obtain as much more as we can—to achieve, as far forth as we can, the general prosperity of the country, and to establish, on some fixed, settled basis, the great interests of the people. Nothing is more ruinous to a country, gentlemen, than a policy always uncertain, ever vacillating. It will be our duty, I take it, to impress upon the legislation of the country, durability, strength; something upon which the hard hand and willing hand of labor can rely; something, too, that will tempt to labor, and make labor sure of what it earns; something that will stand; and thus, by the creation and consummation of whig measures and whig principles, to carry out what we once before fairly won.

There are two views I take of our position now. Mr. Clay will be our next president, if we discharge our duty, our whole duty, in addressing or arousing the people. And, if we do not, then Mr. Van Buren will be, for I take it for granted that he is to be the opponent of Mr. Clay. You observe, continued Mr. Webster, I qualify by the remark, that if we desert our duty, if we abandon the defence of our principles and our candidate. Mr. Clay we know. His general character, the general course of his measures, his policy, his manners, his habits are all pledges of what he will be. We shall understand him, at least, when he is right; we see in what he is right, and if wrong, in what his error consists. Of Mr. Van Buren I would not speak with disrespect; nay, I would speak with that respect due to him for the high office he has held, and the high estimation in which he is held by a large portion of our countrymen; and I do not think I trespass upon decorum, when I say that I have not made that proficiency in the use of the English tongue, I have not studied its shades and degrees of expression, I have not comprehended its phrases, positive, negative, or equivocal, so as to enable my poor understanding always to be sure, or ever to be sure, that I know what he means, when he holds intercourse with the public. I hope it will not be deemed disrespectful in my suggesting, that the distinguished gentleman might save himself a world of trouble, and the world, sotto voce, a world of reading, if he would adopt some short, settled formula of answering questions. When two men meet in the street, or on the road, the first question put, is, 'How do you do?' The answer is, 'Pretty well, much as usual; how are you?' If the salutation be in my country, the answer is, 'Oh, I don't know, I thank ye, pretty much as usual.' Now it strikes me, that if, in the correspondence of Mr. Van Buren, this yankee phrase was adopted, it would be a great token-phrase for him, for when new questions were put him, he could answer, 'Oh, I don't know, pretty well, I thank ye, pretty much as usual.'

I never could agree, gentlemen, to that maxim of the poet:

"For forms of government, let fools contest,
That which is best administered is best."

I know, and we all know, that under certain forms of government, men are more likely to enjoy happiness, and to be able to protect their own interests. But no form of government, however pleasing in theory, or successful in practice hitherto, can work out the good of the people governed, under a bad administration of it. Government is not a mere piece of mechanism, that needs but to be wound up tight, to go right for ever. It is not a cotton jenny, but a moral process, calling for good intentions, for honesty, for good conduct. A constitution of government is essential to guide public sentiment, as a compass, or the stars, the sun, and the moon, are essential for the navigator, or as the light-houses, extending over thousands of miles of coast; but neither compass, stars, nor light-houses will avail, unless there be a regular-bred seaman at the helm. So in political affairs, or constitutions of government, there may be prohibitions or restraints, but if we have at the helm a man who will not see the lights of heaven, who pays no regard to the compass or the chart, no matter how magnificent the vessel his power is over, she must be shipwrecked, notwithstanding. Therefore, it is a duty incumbent on every citizen to act with vigilance, nay with jealousy, for jealousy is often a virtue, in a republican form of government. It is not too much to say, then, that an imperative obligation rests on us, demanding self-sacrifices. We call ourselves whigs, and we cherish the name of whig. Who are our ancestors? I see some of them here before me, bearing the badges of 1776. They were whigs. Washington and his noble band of compatriots were whigs. Those who formed the confederacy were whigs. Those who undertook the

NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery, Empiricism, and the grossest imposition waits to a great extent in this community, that he is fully qualified in his profession; and that he has, in more practice, and really cured more patients of chronic and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the moral tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in a fulsome description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sexes, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Phoenix office, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance by the Alley.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Aracum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impotence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Disorders arising from an impudic use of Mercury. The compound is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practising as he is for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and efficient cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs selected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bottle of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician.

JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enacting upon me the worst of all the human diseases, and mortal are her to Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Aracum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 18, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy State Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Aracum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—since he has had frequent turns of spitting blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say, in word or two, in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, humors of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to good health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

Quincy, May 24, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House, Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Aracum.

SIR—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Stomach Fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Aracum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Aracum.

later administrations, secured and upheld Washington in the earlier movements, were whigs. We hear, then, a name of lofty renown—a name that never must be sullied—a name won amid wounds, and scars, and blood, denoting great and self-sacrificing patriotism, and enrolling upon its record the brightest characters that emblazon our history. Our destiny now cannot be disavowed from it. And while nothing should be done to frighten us from our propriety, nothing should lead us to give up one of the principles that belong to it. Ours is it, to preserve the constitution our whig forefathers have bequeathed us, to uphold its principles, to carry out its measures, to act upon its injunctions, to see that honest and able hands administer it, and to take care that it suffers nothing of disgrace from the way we watch over it. And let us so conduct ourselves, and so educate those who come after us, that if there be a wreck of that noble structure, the greatest work of the world, there shall be no record found to ascribe that catastrophe to whig violence, whig misrule, or whig ambition.

CORRECT CONCLUSIONS. The people have a right to investigate the conduct of rulers, and scrutinize the character of candidates for office; and as the private and moral character of a man is the truest index, it becomes them to be particular on this point. But who will speak on this subject, who will publish, when the duellist stands before him with a pistol at his breast? And what aggravates the restraint, the more unprincipled and vile the man, the greater need of speaking, the greater danger of unveiling his enormity. While lent upon promotion, and desperate in the course, he is prepared to seal in death the lip that shall publish his infamy.—What should you think of a law that forbid the people to speak of the immoralities of candidates for office—which made death the penalty of transgression? *

In our prayers we request that God would bestow upon us good rulers; just men, ruling in the fear of God. But by voting for duellists we demonstrate the insincerity of such prayers, for when by the providence of God, it is left to our choice whom we will have, we vote for murderers. Unless, therefore, we would continue to mock God by hypocritical prayers, we must cease to patronize men of blood—by elevating to important stations men whose hands are stained with blood, who do little less than reward them for their crimes.

TO BRING THE DEAD TO LIFE. Immediately, as the body is removed from the water, press the chest suddenly and forcibly, downward and backward, and instantly discontinue the pressure. Repeat this without interruption, until a pair of common bellows can be procured.—When obtained, introduce the nozzle well upon the base of the tongue, surround the mouth with a towel or handkerchief, and close it. Direct a bystander to press firmly upon the projecting part of the neck, (called Adam's apple,) and use the bellows actively. Then press upon the chest to expel the air from the lungs, to imitate natural breathing. Continue this, at least an hour, unless signs of natural breathing come on.

Wrap the body in blankets, place it near a fire, and do every thing to preserve the natural warmth, as well as to impart an artificial heat, if possible. Every thing, however, is secondary to inflating the lungs. Send for a medical man immediately.

Avoid all frictions until respiration shall be in some degree restored.

PHILADELPHIA. This city presents a novel appearance. They have large bodies of military there, and the movements connected with changing the stations of the various corps, relieving guard, etc, take place every few hours. Thousands of citizens have also been under arms every night since the 9th inst., while on the watch-boxes and the corners of the streets are posted orders by the Major General, proclamations by the Sheriff and Mayor, the Governor's proclamation, etc, all having reference to the recent riots. Strangers must feel a little surprised, to say nothing of alarm, on entering a city which presents these indications.

OLD FARMERS. There are, in Wrentham, (Mass.) twenty-seven farmers, the oldest of whom is eighty-eight, and the youngest seventy years old. They are all heads of families, and most of them swung the scythe with their sons and their grandsons last summer. The editor of the Massachusetts Ploughman boasts that he has three subscribers, all of whom are over eighty-five years of age, and who do not feel too old to learn, by reading something new about farming. Surely, the honorable occupation of a farmer tends to long life.

ROMAN FARMERS. Cincinnatus cultivated a farm of about four acres. It originally consisted of seven—the remaining three having been wrested from him in consequence of his having stood surety for a friend. The celebrated Marius, noted for his frugality, and who was three times consul at Rome, and thrice honored with a triumph returning from successful war, rejected a grant of fifty acres from the people, wisely declaring that he was a bad citizen who could not be contented with the ordinary allowance of seven.

SINGULAR BRIDAL COSTUME. Singular displays happen not unfrequently, in the efforts to appear fine at marriage. A bridegroom who had not the wherewithal himself, (it was in the country,) borrowed of a friend a huge green blanket overcoat, a dickey, and a pair of fisherman's boots, the thermometer being at ninety. Thus equipped, he joined his bride, who was arrayed in a new cotton garment, her only dress. The twain hurried to the residence of a missionary, who soon made them one. The husband restored his wedding suit to its owner, passing the honeymoon, as he had his life previous, shirtless.

CATERPILLARS. Take strong lye or soap suds strong enough to bear an egg, and with a brush or a piece of cloth, wash the infested limbs. The lye will kill the eggs, and you will see no caterpillar's beds upon them in May or June. Even without regard to caterpillars, it is an excellent plan, every spring to wash trees with strong soap suds. This will kill various kind of insects in the egg—it will cleanse and renovate the bark, and promote the healthy fruitfulness of the tree. Try it. Be not afraid of injuring the tree, even if the lye is so strong as to blister your hands. It will do no harm if applied before the buds are much swollen; but it will kill the young leaf.

MERITED COMPLIMENT. It must be gratifying to our friend, Freeman Hunt, Esq., the editor and proprietor of the Merchant's Magazine, to hear, as he undoubtedly has, ere this, that the Mercantile Library Association of Boston, the 'Literary Emporium,' at a recent meeting unanimously elected him an honorary member of that respectable institution. Similar compliments have, we believe, been conferred on that gentleman during the last two or three years by the Mercantile Associations of New York, Baltimore, and Louisville, (Ky.)—No one has done more than Mr. Hunt to elevate and dignify commerce and commercial character, by the publication of a work that we have seen pronounced by a leading review of Great Britain, an honor to this country; and we are glad to see that industry and talent devoted to a good purpose are appreciated by so intelligent a portion of our fellow-citizens.—Boston Traveller.

MUSQUETEERS. To get rid of these tormentors, take a few hot coals on a shovel or a chafing dish, and burn upon them some brown sugar in your bed-rooms and parlors, and you will effectually banish or destroy every musqueteer for the night.

SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1844.

CONGRESS. The death of the Hon. Henry Brinkhoff, member elect from the twenty-first Congressional District of Ohio, who has been prevented by illness from taking his seat at the present session, died in Washington City, last week.

The Senate, by a decisive vote, have passed a resolution of censure upon Hon. Benjamin Tappan of Ohio, for his disclosure of the Texas treaty to the editor of a New York paper—a vote irrespective of party preferences. He is fortunate in escaping a severer mark of senatorial displeasure, as many were desirous of visiting his fault with a different punishment.

The House of Representatives have passed a resolution for the adjournment of Congress on the seventeenth of June next. It is supposed the Senate will concur.

THE WAY TO DO BUSINESS. Our readers will perceive, by his advertisement, in another column, that our neighbor, E. Packard, has determined to do business on the cash principle, and that is the right way. We hope he will succeed in his experiment, as there is no reason why a person, being so short a distance from Boston, should not be able to sell goods as low as they are sold in the city, excepting that he is obliged to sell to a greater extent on credit to A, B and C, and consequently compelled to replenish his stock again on credit, which of course is not so good a method as to buy and sell for cash or its equivalent.

Mr. Packard has perseverance enough to go ahead in all he undertakes, and we believe whatever he sells to any person, will be just what he recommends it to be.

ECCLIASTICAL. Rev. S. A. Davis, late of Hingham, has taken the pastoral charge of the First Universalist Society in this town, and commenced the duties of his sacred office.

We have no doubt that his labors in the Gospel ministry will be attended with the most happy results, as he possesses those graces which distinguish an humble and devout laborer in the work of a world's redemption as well as a worthy and exemplary citizen.

SERMON ON SLAVERY. We have received a copy of a discourse, preached by the Rev. Dr. Storrs of Braintree, on the day of the annual State Fair, entitled "American Slavery, and the means of its removal," which we shall notice more at length at a future time. It is for sale at the Quincy Bookstore.

A SINGULAR INCIDENT. The only part of the interior of St. Augustine's Church, (Roman Catholic,) Philadelphia, untouched by the flames kindled by the fiends who have disgraced that city with mob violence, was a portion of an inscription over the altar. The words, 'The Lord Seth,' remain upon the burnt and blackened wall, almost as clear and legible as the day they were placed there; a fact which is well calculated to excite the religious feelings of the members of that Church, and to attract the attention of the people generally.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. There was no election, at the second trial in Norfolk County, of these important officers. The Governor and Council have appointed Samuel P. Loud of Dorchester, Joseph Hawes of Walpole, and James C. Doane of Cohasset, County Commissioners. The two first mentioned gentlemen are of the old board, and the latter in place of Seth Mann, deceased. Benjamin P. Williams of Roxbury, has also been appointed a Special Commissioner.

CHRESEA BANK. The Receivers of this institution have given notice to all bill holders to present their bills and claims to them at No. 39 Court Street, Boston, for payment, on or before the twenty-third inst., after which time they will not be allowed.

UNITED STATES SENATOR. The Legislature of Connecticut have made choice of Hon. Jabez W. Huntington, (whig) to represent Connecticut in the Senate of the United States for six years from the fourth of March, 1845, at which period his present term will expire.

FIRE. On Wednesday of last week, the dwelling-house of Mr. Hatch Tilden, situated near Union Bridge, in Marshfield, (Mass.) caught fire on the roof, and was only saved from destruction by the prompt exertions of some ten or a dozen men, who were fortunately at work in the vicinity. The roof was considerably damaged.

RATHER DOUTFUL. Hard boiled eggs are said to be a cure for love; they lie so heavy on the stomach as to make the sufferer forget the weight upon his heart. What says the junior editor of the State Sentinel. Guess they won't use for that purpose at Wright's Neponset House, in the fall of 1840.

In Baltimore, 10th inst., Mr. David Barnum, proprietor of the City Hotel, after an illness of only a few days. He was distinguished over the world as being the prince and model of landlords. He was about seventy years old.

In Hartford, (Ct.) 13th inst., the venerable George Goodwin, the oldest printer in the United States, aged 88. He has probably set more type than any other man who ever lived. At the age of nine years he entered the Courant office as an apprentice to the printing office; and from that time till he was more than eighty years of age, he attended constantly to the printing office, and at that age few men could bear him in type setting. He belonged to the firm of Hudson & Goodwin more than thirty years, was proprietor of the Courant sixty years, and worked in the office seventy-five years. He had the respect of community to a happy degree, and leaves not an individual upon earth who could be called his enemy.

The fourth order has been received from Washington, (D. C.) further respecting Babe, charged with murder and piracy on board the schooner Sarah Lavinia, till the nineteenth of July. He was to have been hung on the nineteenth instant.

A Cherokee Indian parson has been preaching, dressed in his native costume, to the people of Pennsylvania.

B. H. NORTON, Auctioneer, No. 7 State Street.
Boston, April 6. 1f

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston. We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING, ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season. We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all.

Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or tip top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1/2 cts.; Blue and other colors 50 cts.; GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1 50; Sattinets, Jeans, Canada Gray, &c., &c.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the

POETRY.

FREEDOM'S BANNER.

'If the African slave trade is piracy, the coasting slave trade cannot be innocent, nor can its aggravated turpitude be denied. In the sight of the same God who abhors the iniquity of the African slave trade, neither the American slave trade nor slavery itself can be held guiltless.'—John Q. Adams.

My country, shall thy honored name
Be as a byword through the world?
Rouse:—for (as if to blast thy fame)
This keen reproach is at thee hurled—
'The banner that above thee waves,
Is floating o'er three million slaves.'

That flag, my country, I had thought
From noble Sires was given to thee,
By the blood of Patriots bought,
To wave above the FREE!—
Yet know, while to the breeze it waves,
It floats above three million slaves!

The mighty dead that flag unrolled,
They bathed it in heaven's own blue,
They sprinkled stars upon each fold,
And gave it as a trust to you:
And now that glorious banner waves,
In shame, above three million slaves!

Oh! by the virtues of our Sires,
And by the soil on which they trod,
And by the trust their name inspires,
And by the hope we have in God,
Arouse, my country, and agree,
To set thy captive children free!

Arouse! and let each bill and gien
With prayer to the high heavens ring out,
Till all our land, with free born men,
May join in one triumphant shout,
That freedom's banner does not wave
Its folds above a single slave!

THE OLD FARM RAKE.

I love it; I love it; and who'll undertake
To chide me for loving my Old Farm Rake?
I have treasured it long, as an heirloom to me,
And e'er kept it safe, lest it injured might be.
I prize it above every thing of its kind,
So precious the implement is to my mind,
Do you ask why it is? This answer I make,
'Twas my grandfather's own; yes, this old Farm
Rake!

How often I've seen him rolling the hay,
With his wrinkled brow, and his locks all gray!
And I almost worship'd him, when he smiled,
And, patting my cheek, bless'd his little grandchild.
But years roll'd on, and his fire went out,
His energies fail'd, and he scarce went about.
Yet, oft from his reveries would he awake,
And tell of his prowess with the Old Farm Rake!

Choice, favorite tool, thou hast seen much repair,
As others are wont, for their wear and their tear.
Full many a head, ay, and state and brow
Thou hast had, all new, as the truth would show.
But then, what of that? there, sure, cannot be,
A possible doubt of thy identity.
Thou art, still the same, my horse I'll stake,
My good, good grandfather's Old Farm Rake!

'Tis past! 'tis past! and his days are done;
We all have seen his setting sun!
How often, down in yonder field,
This implement I have seen him wield!
Ah! call me a duncie, or what you will,
Yet I'm of the same opinion still,
And I love it still for grandfather's sake,
I venerate ever the Old Farm Rake!

SONG.

Sing, sing, who sings
To her who ruleth a thousand springs!
Who is this noble trump?
The Pump, boys, the Pump!
The mother of ginger-beer,
The queen of the liquid clear;
For cheaper is she than wine can be.

Drink, drink, who drinks
To her who yieldeth but never shrinks!
Where doth this conduit dwell?
'Tis the well, boys, the well!
For she's a good friend of mine,
Ne'er maketh a man repine.
If dry were she, no tea could be,
Nor any temperance company.

ANECDOTES.

'Father,' said a young lady of thirty to her parent, 'Father, what sort of a bill is this Town Court Bill that our legislature are quarrelling about? What are its provisions?' 'Well now, my daughter, as near as I can find out, it's a very fine affair, especially for girls of your age. It is calculated, I believe, to prevent our young men from going out of town to do their courting.' 'Good, good!' exclaimed the lady, 'That's the best bill I ever heard of. Ah me! why want that thought of ten years ago!'

'How beautiful he discourses!' said one lady to another, 'they are listening to a celebrated orator; whatever he lets fall from his lips is sweet and full of eloquence!' Just then the orator 'let fall' a great big tobacco cut!

A shop-keeper had, for his virtues, obtained the name of littleascal. A stranger asked him why this appellation had been given him? 'To distinguish me from the rest of my trade,' quoth he, 'who are all great rascals.'

A person having occasion to notify a doctor to visit his wife, said to him as he was about stepping into his chair—'Now, doctor, you'll drive on to kill, won't you?' 'Yes, certainly,' replied the doctor.

'Will you take my arm?' said a gallant to a young lady after the dance broke up. 'La, yes; and you too, seeing it is leap year,' was the quick reply.

A thirsty teetotaler being observed, while mixing a glass of grog, was admonished that he had signed the Pledge. 'I own it,' said he, 'but all signs fail in a dry time.'

The last and most classical name to wood-sawyers is 'sub-dividers of wood'; and for butchers' hearts.

Dr. Louis Kurtz.

RESPECTFULLY informs the afflicted and the public in general, that he has, on account of the great increase of business, removed his Infirmary to the spacious dwelling house

NO. 64 CAMBRIDGE STREET, BOSTON,

where he may be consulted gratis, and with the utmost confidence, in French, German or English.
Thankful for the liberal patronage the public have bestowed upon him for the last three years, he solicits its continuance, assuring them that he shall do all in his power to make himself worthy of it.
Dr. K. has had during his sojourn at the hospitals of Leipzig, (Germany,) Paris, (France,) and for the last three years in this country, a very extensive practice, and is confident of being able to give entire satisfaction in the following complaints; viz:—
Scurfious Humor, Sore Legs, Spine Complaint, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Cough, Consumption, Dropsy, Mercurial Affection, White Swelling on the knee, etc., etc.

In diseases of a private nature, (maladies secret,) Dr. Kurtz is acknowledged to be surpassed by no physician in this country, and warrants a perfect cure in from three to ten days, according to the stage of the disease.

Dr. Louis Kurtz would respectfully call the attention of invalids to the following valuable remedies, viz:—
German Anti-Mercurial Panacea. This medicine has been pronounced by the faculty of Leipzig, (Germany,) a sure and perfect cure, when that deadly poison, Mercury, has been injudiciously used. Price $1 per bottle—six bottles safely packed in a small box, $5.00.
German Tonic Mixture—an excellent remedy for dyspepsia. Price $1.00—six bottles $5.00.
German Tonic and Diuretic Pills—a sure and perfect cure for Fluor Albus, (Whites.) Price $1.00 per box—six boxes $5.00.
German Renovating Mixture or Female Monthly Pills. The above named medicines have been pronounced by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe, the only sure and perfect remedies for suppression, stoppage, etc., etc., and since their introduction into this country, several thousand bottles and boxes have been used and given entire satisfaction. Price $2.00 per box or bottle.

Dr. L. Kurtz pays particular attention to all Female Complaints, in the treatment of which he has had much experience and great success.

Docteur L. Kurtz est consulte, gratis, en francais, allemand et anglais.

Dr. L. Kurtz giebt freie consultationen in deutscher, franzoesischer und englischer Sprache.

MISCELLANY.

DRINKING TEA OUT.

'I wish somebody would come in,' said Susan Willing, yawning, as she threw aside her book; 'it's mighty dull here.'

'Whom do you want to see, Sue?' inquired her brother.

'Oh, no one in particular—somebody, anybody. Come, Louisa, suppose we go in and see some of our new neighbors. There is Mrs. Stanton, always begging one to be sociable and asking us to come in on an evening. Let us try her—what do you say?'

'Very well, if William will call for us at nine o'clock,' which being arranged, the young ladies put on their bonnets, and in a few minutes were standing upon Mrs. Stanton's steps. The servant who opened the door in answer to their ring, seemed somewhat embarrassed as he said Mrs. Stanton was at home, but notwithstanding hesitated a little, they thought, about admitting them. He threw open the parlor door, however, as they were ushered in, to the evident surprise of the lady of the mansion, who appeared busily occupied in cutting and arranging needle work, while, judging from the sight Susan had of it, was neither 'fancy' nor 'ornamental.' Mrs. Stanton, however, quickly whisked her basket to one side, so no second look might penetrate the mysteries thereof, and with no little constraint and embarrassment, expressed her pleasure in seeing the Misses Willing, while her husband, who had been deeply immersed in his evening's paper at the moment of their entrance, laid it down, still however with his hand upon it, as if expecting that the interruption would be transient, and only waiting their departure to resume his reading. In fact after the first few minutes of conversation there was evidently an air of expectation about both husband and wife, as if waiting to hear the object of their visit, for that they had come on business of some kind seemed to be the feeling that succeeded the first blush of surprise on their entrance. Both Susan and Louisa were lively, conversable girls, and entered as readily upon the ordinary topics of chat that could be expected under the chilling circumstances of the case? but spite of their efforts conversation languished; Mrs. Stanton's manner grew more constrained and her eyes wandered in some evident mental distress, as a rattling of tea things was heard in the adjoining pantry. This same rattling, however, inspired Susan with some hope, as she well knew that there are housekeepers who never retain their composure as long as any domestic evolution is under performance, and trusted that Mrs. Stanton would presently be relieved by the safe arrival of the tea equipage, when possibly she might warm into something like ease and animation while dispensing its hospitalities. With such encouraging ideas floating through her mind, she talked on most vigorously to Mr. Stanton, leaving Louisa to make the best she could of Mrs. Stanton, when the door partially opening gave her a glimpse of the waiter entering with a tea-tray in his hands; but he retreated immediately, having received a look accompanied by a backward wave of the head, which told the guests quite as intelligibly as it did the servant that tea would not be served until after their departure. Supposing, as ladies usually do on such occasions, that her telegraphic signal had only been seen by the person for whose benefit it was intended, Mrs. Stanton seemed considerably relieved as the door closed, and with all hopes of tea for the present. It was now Louisa's and Susan's turn to feel embarrassed as they remembered that they had not asked their brother to call until nine o'clock, and it was now but little past seven. To struggle through the next two mortal hours in such awkward and uncomfortable attempts at conversation was not to be thought of; besides the unpleasantness of depriving poor Mr. Stanton of his tea, for which they thought that there were evident symptoms of an impatience on his part that seemed once or twice upon the point of breaking forth as he began a 'my dear' to his wife, who each time hurriedly cut it short by addressing some inquiry to one of her visitors. To be sure it was late for them to return home by themselves; they had come meaning to stay, and Mrs. Stanton knew that they had come with that intention, and therefore it was awkward to stay, it was scarcely less so to go; but Louisa felt that she could endure it no longer, and growing desperate, gave Susan a look, and rising, said, 'Mama will be expecting us; it is growing dark,' and bade Mrs. Stanton good bye, who, both confused and relieved, accompanied them to the street door, and as she remarked upon its being a fine evening, said:

'Do come and see me again,' to which the first impulse was to answer, 'catch me,' politely smothered, however, in a 'thank you, with pleasure,' as they turned to hurry down the street.

'What brought those girls here?' inquired Mr. Stanton, as his wife returned to the parlor.

'They merely came to pay a sociable visit,' she replied. 'Foolish things to be running about the streets at this time of the evening,' he muttered rather crossly. 'They had better stay at home. Come, do let us have tea, I thought they never would go, and I am in a hurry to go down to the counting house again.'

'What, back so soon?' exclaimed William as his sisters entered the parlor. 'Was Mrs. Stanton out?'

'No.' 'I thought you meant to stay to tea. You certainly told me to call for you at nine. What has brought you home?'

'We are home, said Louisa, laughing, 'because if we had stayed ten minutes longer I believe Mrs. Stanton would have had a fit.'

'But surely you have not had tea?'

'Tea!' exclaimed Susan. 'By the way, Louisa, did you see the look she gave the waiter?'

'See it?' to be sure I did,' replied Louisa. Did she think that stupid black man was going to understand her expressive nods and signs and we not? I imagine it was rather lucky for her that Mr. Stanton's head was turned another way, or I believe he would have insisted on the entrance of the tea things. The good gentlemen seemed to be somewhat impatient, and I thought once or twice was upon the point of exploding. I wonder why she did not ask us. She evidently felt very uncomfortable at not doing so?'

'Oh, I suppose she had no cake, or the best cups were not out. Some nonsense of that kind, you may depend,' replied her sister.

'Comment me to the hospitality of city life,' exclaimed William, 'which will endure any mortification rather than expose the smallest deficiency in the domestic economy.'

'Susan,' said Louisa, a few days after the unfortunate visit to Mrs. Stanton, 'I met Mrs. Harrington yesterday, and apologized for not having returned her call, and she begged me to come of an evening, take tea sociably, etc.—Suppose we go to-night; only if we go let us go early enough to permit her sending for cake if she has none, that we need not throw her into the consternation that we did poor Mrs. Stanton the other evening.'

Consequently, before dark the Misses Willing called upon Mrs. Harrington, who received them with cordiality, and chatted with animation, without, however, asking them to take off their hats, or throwing out the most distant allusion to tea. They sat an hour very pleasantly, when the loud ringing of a bell would have seemed to announce the hour of tea had it not been totally unnoticed by Mrs. Harrington, who continued to talk on, although her eye wandered as Louisa thought she distinguished the sound of little feet pattering through the entry and descending the basement stairs, which soon being followed by the decided tread of Mr. Harrington himself, she was convinced the evening meal was taking place in that lower region to which no visitor is permitted to penetrate, and therefore, giving Susan a look, they rose to take their leave. Mrs. Harrington, like Mrs. Stanton, accompanied them to the street door, and as she stood upon the steps, said:

'I am so much obliged to you for this visit. I wish you would come in often in this sociable way, and the next time you come, come to tea.'

'Now is not that too much?' said Louisa, as she re-entered the house. 'The next time you come! What is this mystery of tea? Do let us see if the thing is universal. Here is Mrs. Carroll, next door to us. Let us call there. It is still quite early.' So they rang at Mrs. Carroll's. They were ushered into the parlor, which they found in total darkness but for the light of the fire, by which they could just distinguish Mr. Carroll asleep on the sofa and Mrs. Carroll in evident disabuse, buried in a profound reverie in a large armchair. Roused from her dreamy state by her visitors, who were obliged to announce themselves, Mrs. Carroll's embarrassment was extreme, and hardly knowing whether to receive them, ring for the lights, or wake her sleeping husband first, she did all three in flurry and confusion. Lights soon appearing, the lady was restored to some degree of composure, and ordered 'tea,' whereupon the servant disappeared, only to return, however, in a minute, and ask in a very audible whisper for 'the keys,' which Mrs. Carroll fumbled in vain for in her bag, hastily apologized to her guests as she left the room to search for them. She was gone several minutes, and presently her voice was heard in suppressed tones, apparently giving directions to the servant before she returned to the parlor; and now Louisa hoped all obstacles were surmounted, and that they might expect a little friendly gossip in ease and cheerfulness, undisturbed by any fears for the tea equipage. She was wrong, however, for Mrs. Carroll was called once or twice from the room and her countenance wore an expression of anxiety that did not subside until the table was duly set, with a glass dish of preserves and a shilling's worth of cake, which scarce seemed to justify the many whisperings and expressive glances exchanged between the mistress and domestic. The effort being made and the rite over, something like animation succeeded, although Louisa and Susan could not help feeling that they were an interruption to the usual family habits; that Mr. Carroll, notwithstanding he behaved like a gentleman and tried to be agreeable, was conscious the whole time of his slippers, and would gladly have been reading his paper; and that Mrs. Carroll did not forget for a moment the calico dress for which she apologized once or twice with more feeling than good taste; and so they were very glad, after a reasonable time, to bid them good evening and return to the ease and cheerfulness of their own fireside.

'Well, Sue,' said Louisa, I have had enough of sociable visiting. I am not going to carry consternation with me any further in the neighborhood. You will not get me to go anywhere else with you of an evening, for altho' people beg you to come in unceremoniously, they do not want you. It is very evident that they are not in the habit of seeing company in this way, and if you take them at their word you put them out terribly.'

'You are right, certainly, as far as our experience has gone,' replied Susan, 'but then we have only visited married people. When there are young ladies in the family, of course it must be different. So I am not discouraged yet. There are the Worths' opposite. She seems a very nice girl, and disposed to be friendly. Let us go there this evening.'

'Well,' said Louisa, hesitatingly, 'if you will not go until after tea, for that seems the bugbear of all sociability, and William will call for us.' So between eight and nine in the evening they called at Worths'.

Here all was light and cheerful; no confusion or embarrassment. Miss Worth was at the piano, with a gentleman beside her, looking over music, while her mother sat sewing and talking with a younger child at the fire.—They begged the young lady not to leave the instrument, but Louisa began soon to suspect that they had interrupted a flirtation as well as a song, for though Miss Worth tried to be cordial, there was an evident expression of gene about her that made Louisa heartily wish herself home again. An evening visit is a serious thing, for whether it prove agreeable or otherwise, you must 'bide your time,' and consequently our young ladies were obliged to remain until their brother's arrival set them once more at liberty, not however without repeated thanks from Mrs. and Miss Worth for their friendly visit, and the most pressing solicitation to repeat it soon, which met with promises in the affirmative about as sincere as the invitations given.

'Oh!' said Louisa, as she got into the open air and drew a long breath, 'what an evening! I felt as if I was in one long nightmare, and would have screamed with pleasure, if it would only have broken the spell and made me find myself at home again. Now positively, Susan, this is my last evening visit.'

The air of reproach and vexation with which this was spoken amused Susan, as she laughingly answered:

'Well, don't look such daggers at me. I am sure I have had as unrewarding a visit as you have; but it seems to me impossible, that in a large city like this, there is not some society on a more cordial and intimate footing than that which we meet in crowded parlors, and therefore I shall not give it up yet; so I mean to call at Fulton's to-morrow.' Accordingly Susan called the next evening, on the Misses Fulton, unaccompanied however by Louisa, who had been too thoroughly discomfited by her visit to Miss Worth to make any second attempt, and found what she had almost despaired of finding, one family who were not taken by surprise and thrown into confusion by the unexpected entrance of an evening guest. Miss Fulton, the eldest, being a very lively and intelligent girl, Susan soon warmed into animation and ease, and finally became so communicative that she could not resist the temptation of relating her different experiences among their new acquaintances, and the astonishment with which she found herself actually drinking tea in the neighborhood, which she did in so fresh and graphic a manner that Miss Fulton laughed heartily as she said:

'My dear Miss Willing, when you have lived as long in New York as I have, you will learn to think a neighborhood where you can find one house open of an evening, and where you can pass an hour sociably and agreeably, a remarkable sociable neighborhood.'

Never threaten without punishing; never promise without performing.

NEW METHOD OF GRAFTING APPLE TREES. Plant the seeds in rows at a suitable distance from each other, and the hills, say about five feet apart in each row. But one tree should be suffered to grow in a place. Now, when the young tree is sufficiently grown in the spring of the second or third year, any quantity of fruit may be grafted into it in the following manner: First, bend the tree over and obtain for it a firm resting place, either on a block, or a board resting on the knee, (after it has been divested of its branches,) and with a stout, sharp-pointed knife, pierce holes directly through the centre of the tree, about five inches apart, into which the scions are to be introduced—leaving above, two or three buds. A trench is then dug, in a direct line between the trees, about four inches deep, and the whole tree bent down and buried, leaving the tops of the scions above ground. In this new condition, the scions become uniformly thrifty young trees, supported and nourished from the buried tree, from which issue in due time, roots from its entire length. The second year from this operation, the whole parent tree may be dug up, the new growth saved apart, and transplanted. It will thus be seen, that if the tree is five feet in height, ten or twelve young trees, of whatever quality is chosen, may be obtained in this way, whereas, by the ordinary method of grafting, there could be but one, provided the graft lived. The young scion will bear fruit, thus transplanted, in the same time it would had it been grafted into a tree fifteen years old.

PLANTING POTATOES. In the potatoe there are two parts, one of which will produce tubers fit for the table eight or ten days earlier than the other part. The small end of the potatoe is that which produces the earliest kind, and is full of eyes. The middle, or body of the potatoe produces later, and always large ones. The butt, or nasal end is worthless, except for feeding stock, and if planted, produces very indifferent small ones, and often none at all. Cut your potatoes sometime before you plant them, and always select for seed the largest and fairest you can find. You may very much improve your table potatoes in this way.

ASHES FOR PEACH TREES. There are many modes of preventing the entrance of the peach worm into the roots of the tree, but none is more easy or more effectual than a pile of ashes about the trunk, at this season of the year. A half peck of good ashes is a terror to these worms; the eggs cannot be hatched in those that are good, and the ashes will not injure the land. They save the labor, in many cases, of digging about the tree.

CAUTION. A farmer put a quantity of salted menhaden around a number of apple and other trees for manure. In the spring he observed that his apple trees had suffered in consequence, and on investigation found that many of the roots had been killed. The other trees did not show any signs, either of injury or benefit, from the application. There is no doubt that this manure is good, but it should be well rotted and mixed before it is applied.

THE NEW TOWN HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Quincy Patriot:

Sir—We, the undersigned, having given in the lowest proposals for furnishing the Granite Stone for the Town House about to be erected in Quincy—our proposals were duly accepted by the Committee appointed by the Town—but we have been denied what we believe to be a reasonable contract; and finding that erroneous impressions have prevailed to some extent in relation to our course, we ask the liberty of your columns to make a statement of facts to the inhabitants of Quincy, in reference to the whole transaction.

In the first place, the Committee invited proposals for furnishing materials, etc., for the contemplated building, by an advertisement which ran thus:—

TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Building Committee, until Monday, the 6th of May, at two o'clock in the afternoon, for furnishing and delivering on the spot, all the materials for building a Stone Town House, fifty by eighty feet, and thirty-five feet four inches in height—the front end and two sides to be fine dressed blue Quincy Granite of uniform color—the back end to be of rough ashler, and the whole to be laid in cement, together with about one hundred and eighty perches of Stone for the cellar.

Proposals will be received for furnishing the Stone for the cellar, for the front, for either side, and for the back end, separate, or the whole together.

The whole of the mason work, including the cellar, must be one contract. For furnishing the lumber, etc., and the carpenter's work, separate proposals must be made.

Said building is to be finished on or before the first day of November next, in a workmanlike manner, satisfactory to the Committee.

Specifications and plans may be seen at the Office of Mr. Solomon Willard.

Per order Building Committee,
JOHN SOUTHER, Chairman.

We, the undersigned, took considerable pains to examine the Plans and Specifications, and to make a strict estimate of the expense of furnishing and delivering the Granite at the site, and after mature investigations, we sent in to the Committee the following Proposal.

To the Building Committee of the Quincy Town House.

QUINCY, May 6th, 1844.

GENTLEMEN—We, the undersigned, propose to furnish, cut, and deliver at the site in Quincy, all the Granite wanted for a Town House about to be erected, agreeable to Plans and Specifications, for the sum of $9,283; to be executed in a workman-like manner, front equal to Brazer's Building, State Street, Boston, sides equal to Morton Block, Milk Street, Boston. Cellar stone included in the above.

Yours, respectfully,
OCTAVIUS T. ROGERS, & Co.
Signed: RICHARDS, MUNN & Co.
CHARLES HARDWICK, Jr.

Our proposal was received by the Committee, and by them duly accepted, in attestation of which the Chairman appended the words following, viz:

"The above proposal was accepted by the Committee, this 6th day of May, 1844."

Signed: JOHN SOUTHER.

Per order of Committee."

The chairman, moreover, wrote a letter notifying us of the acceptance of our proposal, of which letter the following is an exact copy:

To Messrs. O. T. Rogers & Co.; Richards, Munn & Co.; Charles Hardwick, Jr.:

QUINCY, May 7th, 1844.

GENTLEMEN—I am directed to inform you of our acceptance of your proposal, to find and provide all the Granite to complete a Town House and Cellar agreeable to the Plans and Specifications presented; all of which is to be delivered from time to time, as the Stone Mason may want, to carry up the building to its completion, on or before the first day of September next. And shall be ready to enter into the Contract on Thursday next, at five o'clock.

Per order of the Building Committee.

JOHN SOUTHER.

At the time specified in the above letter, we found that a Contract had been written, and was ready for our signatures. We took it, by consent of the Committee, for the purpose of examination, agreeing to return it the next afternoon, which we did accordingly.

After a careful examination of its provisions, and taking advice from a legal gentleman of high respectability, we were satisfied that it was such an instrument that we could not, with any degree of safety, sign it—one clause of it being so worded, that in case of our failing to comply with any, even the most trivial of its provisions, we should have been held liable to pay the full sum of ten thousand dollars—that being the amount of the penalty imposed, as 'liquidated damages,' in case of any failure on our part.

Another objection we had to the Contract presented by the Committee was, that it contained a provision at variance with the terms of our Proposal which had already been accepted by the Committee. The Contract took the front of Brazer's Building, in State Street, Boston, as a sample for both the sides and the front of the Town House, whereas our accepted Proposal expressly stated that the front of Brazer's Building should be the sample for the front of the Town House, and Morton Block the sample for the sides.

There were other points of minor importance in the details of the Contract offered by the Committee which we considered objectionable. We, therefore, presented the whole subject before a distinguished legal gentleman, who drew up a Contract in conformity to our accepted Proposal. This was presented to the Committee by one of our number, and by a vote of the majority of said Committee was rejected.

We were then invited to meet the Committee at the room where they were in session, and were requested to state the objections we had to signing the Contract which they had prepared.

The objections urged by us—to some of which we have already alluded—were such as these:

The Contract required us to finish the delivery of the stone by the first of September, which we considered hardly a reasonable length of time in an undertaking of such magnitude; and we wished to be allowed until the first of October.

Another objection was more objectionable in the Contract drawn up by them, was, that it did not conform to the terms of our Proposal which they had already accepted. We had proposed Morton Block as a sample for the sides of the building, and they had substituted Brazer's Building.

Another objection which weighed more than all others in our estimation, as we stated, was the penalty which their instrument imposed, of ten thousand dollars in liquidation of any failure, however trifling, in our fulfillment of the Contract. This we deemed a most extraordinary provision, and contrary to all usage in transactions of this nature.

These were the objections named by us before the Committee; but the Contract presented by us, differed from theirs also in regard to the terms of payment. By the terms of their Contract we were to be paid three thousand dollars, when the stone-work should be ready for the second floor, and the remainder when the work should be completed and accepted by the inhabitants of the Town.

After hearing our objections, the chairman inquired of us whether we would yield to their wishes in regard to the time specified for completing the work, if they would alter their Contract on other points; and to this inquiry we answered, that we probably might. At his suggestion we then withdrew for a few minutes, that the Committee might consult upon the subject. Having retired to another room, we agreed to shorten the time to meet the views of the Committee; but directly the Secretary of the Committee entered, saying that the Committee had instructed him to inform us that they should not alter their Contract, and had no further communications to make. We subsequently wrote to the Committee the following letter—

To John Souther and others, Building Committee, Quincy.

QUINCY, May 13th, 1844.

GENTLEMEN—We insist upon our right to the Contract for furnishing the Stone for the Town House, in Quincy. Notice was given by the Building Committee for proposals, and we among others sent in proposals, and the Committee notified us that ours were accepted; this, we are advised, amounted to a Contract, which we are ready to fulfill, and we insist upon a fulfillment of the same on the part of the Town; and we are perfectly willing to sign a Contract drawn up in form embracing the same terms as those contained in your notice and our proposals.

Very respectfully, your obedient servants,
OCTAVIUS T. ROGERS & Co.
RICHARDS, MUNN & Co.
CHARLES HARDWICK, Jr.

Thus ended our correspondence with the Committee. We think no gentleman in Quincy, or elsewhere, will deem it strange that we did no sign the Contract which the Committee presented us—

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Croup and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Catarrhs, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Leucorrhoea, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The compound is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several nations. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, is not contented that it will cure all the diseases which human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in saying the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and radical cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs selected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without least fear as to its results upon the system. One who will convince the incredulous invalid that no medicine has been said in its favor than its virtues safely grant. Many respectable physicians have used, and prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bottle of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician.

Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Discharge of the Liver, causing great debility in my system, and evidently fast ending upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in tried many medicines which were recommended, from all of them I obtained no relief, until, about eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 2d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy

Stone Bank.

Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are out to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's

Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that a general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing symptoms that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is distressing great debility, with a cold, headache, and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, loss of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation, which has cured my friends, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

Dr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum:

Sir—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my usual business, from an attack of low fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had long happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which I much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1844.

Body Found. An inquest was held yesterday forenoon before Lewis Bass, Esq. Coroner, on the body of a man found washed ashore on Nahaman B. Holmes' Beach, (at Germantown,) in this town. The body was very much decayed, having probably been in the water some time. The person was apparently about forty years of age; dressed in blue satinett pants, thin striped frock coat, blue vest, white cotton shirt—one blue seamed stocking and one blue foot and white topped stocking—one thick white pegged shoe, half soled, and much worn.

Verdict of the Jury, that he came by his death by accidental drowning.

We believe that the Committee themselves would have considered us very unwise, if in a transaction amounting to only nine thousand two hundred and eighty-three dollars, we had put our signatures to an instrument binding us in a penalty of ten thousand dollars, in liquidation for the least possible failure on our part in its fulfillment. Even the accidental breaking of a stone on its delivery, if in replacing it we were to overrun the specified time but a single day, or a few hours, would subject us to this entire penalty.

This Contract was written in a very unusual manner. The usual kind of obligation in transactions of this nature is, that both the parties bind themselves in a certain penal sum, as security against damage in the fulfillment of their mutual contract. In this instrument only one party was to be bound, and that, as it seems to us, in a very extraordinary manner.

COMMITTEE'S STATEMENT.

To the Editor of the Quincy Patriot:

SIR—A communication appeared in the Quincy Aurora of Thursday last, signed by the different firms who had offered proposals for furnishing the Granite for the contemplated Town House.

The signers of this communication appear to think that they have not been fairly treated—that they have been denied what they believe to be a reasonable contract, etc., etc. This, however, the Committee, who act for the Town, do not admit; and it is proposed to show that they (Rogers & Co., etc.) are entirely mistaken in their conclusions, as they did not conform to the Specifications in regard to the quality of the work.

The Specifications say, that "the average quality of the dressing on the front is to equal No. 11-2 on the Journeyman's Bill of Prices,"—which was considered fifty cent work, and estimated accordingly by all except the firms who signed the communication in question. These firms estimated for inferior work, of a quality equal to thirty-three cents on the same bill of prices.

It must be obvious, therefore, that if any have cause for complaint, they are not the signers of the communication, but others who estimated for the quality of work required by the Specifications given them.

The signers of the communication lay great stress on the letter of the Chairman, notifying them of the acceptance of their proposals. This, however, was only one step towards a Contract.

The time for doing the work—the mode of payments and the security to be given—remained to be agreed on before a contract could be signed, and on these the parties disagreed.

As to the proposal made to the Building Committee by O. T. Rogers & Co.—Richards, Munn & Co., and Charles Hardwick, Jr., claiming a right to enter into a Contract for furnishing the Granite. The signers of the communication say the dressing on the front to be equal to Brazier's Building, State Street, and the dressing on the sides to be equal to the Morton Block, Milk Street, Boston, but neither of the above named buildings are mentioned at all in the Specifications as samples of the dressing, the Committee, however, voted to accept their proposal, which they would not have done if the proposal had not stated they would do it according to the specifications and plans.

Accordingly, the proposal was accepted and notice given these gentlemen, that a contract would be executed at the next meeting of the Committee if they would meet at that time and place.

At the next meeting, a contract was presented them, they demurred, and wanted a week's time to examine it, which was not allowed, but the Committee voted to give them until the next day in the afternoon until five o'clock. At that time they came forward and presented a letter, stating their objections to signing the Contract of the Committee, and presented a Contract which was made by themselves, that contained provisions the Committee could not accede to; and one of the contractors said he could not and would not sign any other than the one he had offered to the Committee. After they withdrew, the Committee came to the conclusion at once, that it was useless to endeavor to come to an agreement, and then voted not to accept their contract.

Per order Committee,
JOHN SOUTHER, Chairman.

THOMPSON BARTER, Clerk.

THE TOWN HOUSE QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Quincy Patriot:

SIR—Through the columns of your very interesting and useful paper, the writer wishes to make a few observations on the subject of the contemplated Town House.

It will be recollected that in the month of February last, the Town voted to build a Town House of wood, on the old lot—those a Committee to prepare plans and procure estimates, and report at the regular March meeting. The Committee attended to that duty and reported, but, instead of the Town's accepting that report, and going on to build the Town House, an addition was made to the Committee with instructions to report what it would cost to build a Town House on the old lot or any other site the Town might select. This Committee reported, at the April meeting, that the Faxon and Willett Lots might be obtained for certain sums, which, after appraising two lots on Canal Street as worth five hundred dollars, would cost the Town thirteen hundred dollars. The Town then voted to throw the old Town House lot into the Burying Ground, and instructed the Committee on ornamenting the same, to continue the wall similar to that part already built. The town next refused to build on the Hancock Lot, but agreed by a land vote to build on the Faxon Shop Lot, and authorized the Treasurer to purchase said Land, provided upon examination he could get a good title.

While this search was being made, a warrant was published calling another meeting on the sixteenth of April, to see if the Town would reconsider the vote by which they voted to build a Town House on the Faxon Lot, and build on the Cross Lot or any other lot, at which time the Treasurer reported that he had not bought the Faxon Lot because he could not get a clear title to it.

The Town voted to reconsider the vote by which the Town House was to be built on the Faxon Lot, and agreed to build a Stone Town House on a lot of land offered by Mr. Daniel French, and authorizing the Treasurer to buy the same, upon which to build a Town House. An addition of ten gentlemen was made to the former Committee on building a Town House of wood, and the whole subject of the Town House was left to them as to plans and size, and whether it should be of hammered or rough Stone.

This Committee of fifteen men have had several meetings, and have finally effected contracts for the building of a House fifty by eighty feet, and thirty-five feet six inches high to the eaves, of fine hammered Stone—the front to be fashioned like the Merchants' Exchange, in State Street, Boston, having four beautiful fluted pilasters and handsome capitals with architrave frieze and cornice—the sides to be finely hammered, and laid in Ashler courses of sixteen inches rise.

The hall will have four large windows on both sides, each containing over fifty square feet of glass. There will be an office or store in each front corner, and another room in the rear of them, which will take up about half of the room on the first floor—the remainder will make a commodious lecture or lyceum room, nearly twice as large as the old Town Hall, the entrance to which will be on the south side of the building. The Town Hall will be forty-six by seventy-eight feet in the clear including gallery, which is to be over the Committee rooms, and the whole will be capable of seating about twelve hundred persons.

Land bought of Mr. French $1000.00

Contract made with Rowland Owens for one side 3375.00

Contract made with Joseph B. Whicher & Co. for the front 4244.00

" " " Wright and Barker, for one side 2300.00

" " " Wright and Barker, for the Cellar Stone Ebenezer Jewett for the rear 600.00

" " " James B. Perkins for Materials and Carpenter's work 4783.00

" " " William N. Gardner, for Stone Masons Work and materials 2200.00

" " " Thomas Adams for digging Cellar and grading the gravel around about the same, at $1.35 cents per Square—about 100.00

The whole cost of the Town House $17,875.00

The work has been commenced in good earnest; the cellar is about half dug—part of the cellar stone have been delivered—some of the other stone are finished, ready to bring from the shed where they were hammered—and business has taken quite a start with a portion of our fellow-citizens who were before out of work.

Now, let me ask through your paper, why this town is called together again at this late hour, on Tuesday next, to reconsider a vote passed by years and nays, at a very full meeting, to build a Stone Town House, and to see if they will enlarge the old Town House. Why was it not done a month ago, and thereby saved much trouble and expense.

How can this committee, who have all the power to contract for the building of the Town House, annul these contracts, signed, sealed and delivered, and the contractors under bonds faithfully to perform the work.

The writer thinks they have no power to do it, and he believes every candid man in community will coincide in this opinion. Well, then, how can the Town do it. Some perhaps will say, if the Town reconsiders the vote, there is an end of the whole subject. But that is not the case, because the contracts are legally made by the Town through their Committee, and if a number more are added to the Committee, to give a majority against the building, their names cannot be added to the contract, and the present Committee's names are now inserted in the Contracts, consequently, the contractors will know no new Committee chosen after the Contracts have been executed. How then will the Town stop the building if they reconsider the vote? Why, they must buy the contractors off, but I believe some of the contractors will not be bought nor sold—they are too much of abolitionists.

In order to prevent further trouble and perhaps numberless law suits, the writer hopes to see at the meeting enough of the friends of good order and consistency, to put this attempt to reconsider down at the outset, thus, bringing this long continued excitement to an end, and by so doing, probably save a greater expense and cost to the Town than it would be to go on and build a new STONE TOWN HOUSE agreeably to the above description. Let us attend to this business and give a large majority in favor of confirming the vote passed on the eighteenth of April last, by which the Town voted to build of Stone. Let every man in favor come himself to vote and rally one more and it is done.

WASHINGTONIAN CIRCULAR.

Boston, April 26th, 1844.

At a large meeting of Washingtonians held in Boston, at which were present Delegates from nearly every County in the State, it was resolved unanimously to hold a MASS STATE CELEBRATION in the City of Boston, on the 30th of May inst.; and the undersigned were appointed a Committee of Correspondence to invite the friends of Temperance throughout the County, to honor the occasion with their presence.

Arrangements are in progress which will without doubt secure the largest assemblage of the tried friends of the cause ever called together in the New England States. The most celebrated Advocates of Temperance from all parts of the Union, will be invited to be present; and the people themselves, the hard-working temperance men of the land, will be there in their might.

Should the weather prove auspicious the gathering will take place on Boston Common. A grand procession will be formed, the order of which will be announced in the papers of the day.

Governor Briggs has accepted an invitation to be present, and will preside on the occasion.

That the friends of the cause might receive additional gratification from attending this Celebration a special invitation has already been forwarded to the founder and first signer of the Washingtonian Pledge, WILLIAM K. MITCHELL, of Baltimore, who has signified his acceptance of the same, and by his presence and testimony in behalf of the cause, will add much to the interest of the occasion.

The Washingtonians of Massachusetts propose, by this celebration, to direct the attention of their fellow citizens to the magnitude and importance of the Washingtonian Reform; and in this way to strike a blow for the cause of Temperance, which shall be felt throughout the country.

In the hope, sir, that you will not only favor us with your presence, but that you will also use your utmost exertions to induce the friends of the cause in your neighborhood to attend the Celebration.

We are, very respectfully,
Your friends in the cause,

WILLIAM R. STACY,
WILLIAM A. WHITE,
EDGAR K. WALKER,
EDWIN THOMPSON,
EDWARD CARROLL,
E. SEWELL PRICE,

The Philadelphia Times states that the bell of St. Augustine Church (Roman Catholic) which melted and fell in the flames, was the old bell which first chimed musical peals at the Declaration of American Independence.

A whale boat from New Bedford is to appear in the procession, manned by Washingtonian whalemen, at the great temperature gathering on the 30th inst., at Boston.

Four hundred thousand white fish were recently caught at one haul in New Haven harbor. The feat was accomplished by joining three seines together. The fish sell for fifty cents per thousand.

The Mormons have resolved upon holding a Convention at Baltimore, to nominate candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency.

Testimony of an eminent Chemist in favor of PARR'S LIFE PILLS, by John Dale, Esq. Lecturer on Chemistry, and pupil of the celebrated D. Dalton, F. R. S. &c. &c.

MANCHESTER, Dec. 7, 1841.

To T. Roberts & Co. 9 Crane Court, Fleet St. London. GENTLEMEN:—At the request of several friends who have introduced Parr's Life Pills into their families as a medicine, I have submitted them to a strict chemical analysis, in order to ascertain whether they contained any of those active mercurial preparations, now so commonly introduced into many advertised medicines. I beg to say, that I find them worthy of confidence and to the public, for their efficacy and simplicity, and as stated by the proprietors, to be really Vegetable Pills, containing, as they do, nothing but what is of vegetable origin.

I am, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

JOHN DALE, Analytical Chemist.

S. W. Fowle, (late Smith & Fowle,) 138 Washington street, opposite foot of School street, Agent for Parr's Life Pills for the New England States.

YOU are hereby required, in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to notify and warn the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, qualified to vote in Town Affairs, to meet at the Town Hall, in said Quincy, on TUESDAY, the twenty-eighth day of May next, at half past one o'clock in the afternoon, to act on the following articles, viz:
1st. To choose a Moderator.
2d. To know if the Town will reconsider the vote passed on the eighteenth day of April last, whereby they voted to build a Town House of Stone.
3d. To know if the Town will make an addition to the building now used for a Town House, and fit up the lower part for a School-room for the Centre School District.
4th. To choose any Committee, or hear and act on the Report of any Committee the Town may think proper when assembled.
Hereof fail not and make return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, unto the Town Clerk, on or before the time appointed for said meeting.
Given under our hands and seals, at Quincy, this twenty-first day of May, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-four.
DANIEL BAXTER, } Selectmen
BRYANT B. NEWCOMB, }
WILLIAM D. GRAY, }
Quincy, May 21st, 1844.

NORFOLK ss.—By virtue of the above Warrant, I hereby notify the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, who are qualified as therein expressed, to meet at the place, time, and for the purposes therein named. A true copy. Attest:
FRANCIS WILLIAMS, Constable.

B. H. NORTON, Auctioneer, No. 7 State Street.
Boston, April 6.

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston. We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING, ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season.

We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all. Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and rich stuffs, or tip top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1/2 cts.; Blue and other colors 50 cts.; GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1.50; Sateen Pants, Canada Gray, etc., etc.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the
QUINCY HALL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, OVER THE QUINCY MARKET.
Boston, April 6.

THE LABORER.

Stand up—erect! Thou hast the form
And likeness of thy God!—who more?
A soul as dauntless 'mid the storm
Of daily life, a heart as warm
And pure as breast e'er wore.

What then? Thou art as true a man
As moves the human mass along,
As much a part of the Great Plan
That with Creation's dawn began,
As any of the throng.

Who is thy enemy?—the high
In station, or in wealth the chief?
The great, who coldly pass thee by,
With proud step and averted eye?
Nay! nurse no such belief.

If true unto thyself thou wast,
What were the proud one's scorn to thee?
A feather, which thou mightest cast
Aside as idle as the blast,
The light leaf from the tree.

No: uncur'd passions—low desire—
Absence of noble self-respect—
Death, in the breast's consuming fires,
To that high nature which aspires
Forever, till thus checked.

These are thine enemies—thy worst;
They chain thee to thy lowly cot—
Thy labor and thy life accurst,
Oh, stand erect! and from them burst,
And longer suffer not!

Thou art thyself thine enemy!
The great!—what better thee than thou!
As theirs, is not thy will as free?
Has God with equal favors thee
Neglected to endow?

True, wealth thou hast not; 'tis but dust!
Nor place; uncertain as the wind!
But what thou hast, which, with the crust
And water, may despise the lust
Of both—a noble mind.

With this, and passions under ban,
True faith, and holy trust in God,
Thou art the peer of any man,
Look up, then—thy little span
Of life may be well trod!

THE FATHERLAND.

Where is the true man's fatherland?
Is it where he by chance is born?
Doth not the free-winded spirit scorn
In such pent borders to be spanned?
Oh, yes! his fatherland must be,
As the blue heavens, wide and free!

It is alone where freedom is,
Where God is God, and man is man?
Doth he not claim a broader span
For the soul's love of home than this?
Oh, yes! his fatherland must be,
As the blue heavens, wide and free!

Where'er a human heart doth wear
Joy's myrtle wreath, or sorrows gyes,
Where'er a human spirit strives
After a life more pure and fair,
There is the true man's birth-place grand!
He is a world-wide fatherland!

Where'er a single slave doth pine,
Where'er one man may help another,
Thank God for such a birthright, brother!
That spot on earth is thine and mine;
There is the true man's birth-place grand!
His is the world-wide fatherland!

WOMAN'S TRUTH.

Woman's truth and woman's love
Trusting ever,
Faithless never,
Blest on earth, is blest above.

Ministering oft in sorrow's hour;
Loving truly,
Fondly, duly.

Earth's richest—choicest flower.
Guarding well the hallowed flame,
Burning brightly,
Daily, nightly.

Knoweth she reproach nor shame.
Ne'er forgetting, ne'er forgot,
Richest treasures,
Joyful pleasures,
Ever be her happy lot.

ANECDOTES.

A tavern keeper had abandoned the traffic in alcohol after having been several years engaged in it—Whenever the subject of his selling liquor was referred to, he was observed to feel deep regret and sorrow. A friend one day enquired the cause. "I will tell you," said he, "and opening his account book he said, 'here are forty-four names of men who have all been my customers, most of them for years—thirty-two of these men to my certain knowledge now lie in the drunkard's grave! ten of the remaining twelve are now living comforted sots! These are the fruits of this dreadful business!'"

A farmer's wife, in speaking of the smartness, aptness, and intelligence of her son, a lad six years old, to a lady acquaintance, said: "He can read fluently in the Bible, repeat the whole catechism, and weed onions as well as his father." "Yes mother," added the young pupil, "and yesterday I licked Ned Rawsen, throw'd the cat in the well, and stole old Hunkley's gibbet!"

A lawyer was pleading before a Scotch Judge—Happening to have a client a female defender in the action of the name of Tickle, he commenced his speech in the following humorous strain—"Tickle, my client and defendant, my lord." The audience amused with the oddity of the speech were almost thrown into hysterics of laughter, by the judge replying—"Tickle her yourself, Harry, you are as well able to do it as I."

"How do you do, madam?" "O, I'm unwell—quite out of spirits." "Why, no, marm," said the maid, "there's a quart left yet." "Betty leave the room."

Dr. Louis Kurtz.

RESPECTFULLY informs the afflicted and the public in general, that he has, on account of the great increase of business, removed his Infirmary to the spacious dwelling house

NO. 64 CAMBRIDGE STREET, BOSTON,

where he may be consulted gratis, and with the utmost confidence, in French, German or English.

Thankful for the liberal patronage the public have bestowed upon him for the last three years, he solicits its continuance, assuring them that he shall do all in his power to make himself worthy of it.

Dr. K. has had during his sojourn at the hospitals of Germany, France, and Prussia, and for the last three years in this country, a very extensive practice, and is confident of being able to give entire satisfaction in the following complaints, viz:—

Scrofulous Humor, Sore Legs, Spine Complaint, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Cough, Consumption, Dropsy, Mercurial Affection, White Swelling on the knee, etc, etc.

In diseases of a private nature, (maladies secret,) Dr. Kurtz is acknowledged to be surpassed by no physician in this country, and warrants a perfect cure in from three to ten days, according to the stage of the disease.

Dr. Louis Kurtz would respectfully call the attention of invalids to the following valuable remedies, viz:—German Anti-Mercurial Panacea. This medicine has been pronounced by the faculty of Leipsic, (Germany) a sure and perfect cure, when that deadly poison, Mercury, has been injudiciously used. Price $1 per bottle—six bottles safely packed in a small box, $5 00.

German Tonic Mixture—an excellent remedy for dyspepsia. Price $1 00—six bottles $5 00.

German Renovating Mixture or Female Monthly Pills. The above named medicines have been pronounced by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe, the only safe and safe remedies for suppression, stoppage, etc, etc, and since their introduction into this country, several thousand bottles and boxes have been used and given entire satisfaction. Price $2 00 per box or bottle.

Dr. L. Kurtz pays particular attention to all Female Complaints, in the treatment of which he has had much experience and great success.

Docteur L. Kurtz est consulte, gratis, en francais, allemand et anglais.

Dr. L. Kurtz gives free consultations in German, French, and English, from 8 A. M. until 9 P. M. Letters promptly attended to and strict secrecy observed. Agents wanted for the above valuable remedies on reasonable terms. Apply by letter (post paid) or personally as above.

DR. BUTLER,

NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.
DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevail to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the false description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sex, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling.

DR. FERNANDS'
Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

FOR THE CURE OF
Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obstructive Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impropriety in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The completion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure.

This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine:

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are here to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief.

About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times was very distressing, great astheny, with coldness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum:—
SIR:—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Slow Fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been long cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to the public that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

THE THUNDER STORM.

The storm is up—along the sky
Swiftly the cloud rack is driven;
And look! yon curling cloud flocks nigh,
Charged with the panoply of heaven:
It rends! and gathering to a heap
Of angry billows takes the form;
How troubled is that upper deep—
God! thou art awful in thy storm.

If there be one mortal feeling free from the impurities of earthly frailty, that tells us of his slightest breathing of its celestial origin, it is that of maternal love—a mother's chaste, overwhelming and everlasting love of her children. The name of a mother is our childhood's talisman, our refuge and our shield in all our mimic miseries; 'tis the first half-formed word that falls from the babbling tongue; the first, the fondest and the most lasting tie in which affection can bind the heart.

It is not the feeling of yesterday or to-day; it is from the beginning the same and unchangeable—it owes not its being to this world, but is independent and self-existing, enduring while our pulse of life animates the breast that fosters it; and if there be any thing of mortality which survives the grave, surely its best and noblest passion will never perish. Oh! it is a pure and holy emanation from heaven's mercy, implanted in the breast of woman, for the dearest and wisest purposes, to be at once her truest and most sacred pleasure, and the safety and blessing of her offspring.

It is not selfish passion, depending for its permanency on the reciprocation of its advantages; but in its sincerity it casts out itself, and when the welfare of that object is at stake, it puts away fear, and knows not weariness. It is not excited by form nor feature, but rather by a happy perversion of perception, imbues all things with imaginary beauty. It watches over our helpless infancy with the ceaseless benignity of a guardian angel, anticipates every childish wish, humors every childish fancy, soothes every transient sorrow, sings our sweet lullaby to rest, and cradles us in its warm and throbbing breast, and when pain and sickness prey upon the fragile form, what medicine is there like a mother's kiss? What healing pillow like a mother's bosom? What affectionate pressure like a mother's hand?

When launched upon the wide ocean of a tempestuous world, what eye gazes on our adventurous voyage with half the eagerness of maternal fondness, amid the sad yet not unpleasing contest of hopes, fears and deep anxieties? When the rugged path of life has been bravely, patiently, and nobly trodden,—when prosperity has smiled upon us,—when virtue has upheld us amid the temptations of a wicked world,—[virtue which she alone planted in us], and when fame has bound its laurels round us, is there a heart that throbs with a more lively or greater pleasure?

Yet it is not prosperity with her smiles and beauty, that tries the purity and fervor of a mother's love, it is in the dark and dreary precincts of adversity, amid the cold frown of an unfeeling world, in poverty and distress, in sickness and in sorrow, that it shines with a brightness beyond mortality, and stifling the secret agonies of its own bosom strives but to pour balm and consolation on the wounded sufferer; and the cup of misery filled to overflowing, serves but to bind them more firmly and dearly to each other, as the storms of winter bid the sheltering ivy twine itself more closely round the withering oak.

Absence cannot chill a mother's love, nor can even vice itself destroy a mother's kindness. The lowest degradations of human frailty cannot wholly blot out the remembrance of the first fond yearnings of a child's affections; or the faint memorial of primal purity; nay, it seems as if the very consciousness of the abject state of her erring child, more fully ly developed the mighty force of that mysterious passion, which cannot forget and forgive all things; and though the youth of her fairest hopes may be at once cast off from God and man, yet will she not forsake him, but participate in all things, save his wickedness!

How different the love on the part of the father, who may be as deep and sincere, yet it is calmer and perhaps more calculating, and more fully directed in the great periods and ends of life; it cannot descend to those minutiae of affection, those watchful cares of the minor comforts and gratifications of existence which a mother from the finer sensibilities of her nature, can more readily appreciate.

The reliance which the heart places in childhood upon a mother's love, can only be surpassed by that trust which piety, in after years, reposes upon its God. There is no apprehension that cannot be lulled in the refuge afforded by a mother's arms, nor is there any anguish that cannot be mitigated when the heart reposes upon her bosom.

Upon this topic much has been said, and that too by some of the most forcible and elegant writers; yet it is a subject, in the elucidation of which no eulogy can transcend. Neither the poet nor orator can give to their delineations the brilliancy of the diamond, so a mother's love in the consequent trust of her child, are among those strong features of nature which no panegyric can perfectly portray. It is in allusion to a mother's love that God commends to us a mindfulness of his own indissoluble affection. How deeply wretched, then, must that child be, who in an hour of suffering turns in vain to the refuge which nature ordinarily renders the stronger, because of the feebleness of the one who needs the succor.

These reflections were strongly forced upon my mind some time since, upon my being requested by an afflicted father and friend to accompany him to his dwelling, for the purpose of seeing a child of his, for whom I stood as sponsor at the baptismal font. When I entered the room, I found the mother weeping over the child, who was six years old. He had a full fair face, and a beautiful black eye. He was in every respect a fine boy. I soon perceived that his eyes were fixed, and he was entirely regardless of every thing around him, while death could not be distant. Never had I seen a child in suffering, for whom I had so strong a sympathy. He had been a very healthy and active child, until he was five years of age; but since that time he had scarcely grown any, nor had ever spoken.

'Be comforted, afflicted madam,' said I, 'remember that the Lord gives and takes away, according to his holy will. It does not become a Christian mother to grieve, and present the agonizing appearance that I now behold. The pious precept of your heaven-created religion should inspire you with thoughts of an humble resignation.'

She made no reply, but kept her tearful eyes fixed on the suffering boy.

'What cause of sorrow can thus change your appearance? Has the boy been unruly, and hence on that account been careless? Or is this a visitation from Heaven? Ah, madam, whatever God sends we must not murmur at.'

'I have always,' replied the mother, whose feelings were now much calmed, 'from my earliest years, been filled with horror upon hearing thunder. Often have I gone through the house, in the greatest dismay, seeking to hide myself where I could not see the lightning, nor hear the thunder. I knew it was all foolishness in me, but I yielded to my fears. One afternoon, some months ago, I was alone with my little boy, when a heavy storm arose, and I was affrighted at the sound of the thunder.—Taking the child by the hand, I ran trembling and weeping, from one corner of the room to another, until almost frantic, I sat down and pressed my child to my shuddering bosom. A dreadful clap of thunder pealed above us, and I gave a fearful shriek. I felt the convulsive pressure of his face to my bosom, and while the lightning was still gleaming through the room I turned up his face.—His eyes were fixed, and from that day he has never spoken, while he has only lived to wander through our house like a maniac, nor has he ever known me since he was distracted by his mother's fear.'

She paused. I did not remain long, as my feelings were quickly gaining the mastery, and when hurrying home, I found relief in a copious flow of tears. For weeks I was a daily visitor, but alas! all hopes were given up for his recovery. Medical attendance had been called to the aid of the dying boy; it was of no avail. A physician famed for his skill was sent for, but he could not arrest the arm of death. The boy died, —And may blessings eternal,

Be his to inherit above;
And may pleasures be his unending and vernal,
In God's holy kingdom of glory and love.

AN 'ATTACHMENT.'

A good story is told of which an Alabama Sheriff was the hero. Court was in session, and amid the multiplicity of business which crowded upon him at the term time, he stopped at the door of a beautiful widow, on the sunny side of thirty, who, by the way had often bestowed melting glances upon the Sheriff afore said. He was admitted, and the widow appeared; the confusion and delight which the arrival of her visitor occasioned, set off to a greater advantage than usual the captivating charms of the widow. Her cheeks bore the beautiful blended tints of the apple blossom—her lips resembled rosebuds upon which the morning dew yet lingered, and her eyes were like the quivers of Cupid, and glances of love and tenderness with which they were filled, resembled arrows that only awaited a leu, (pardon the pen) to do full execution. After a few common-place remarks:—

'Madam,' said the matter-of-fact Sheriff, 'I have an attachment for you.'

A deeper blush than usual mantled the cheeks of the fair widow—the downcast eyes, whose glances were centered upon her beautiful foot, which, half concealed by her flowing drapery gently patted the floor; she, with equal candor replied:

'Sir the attachment is reciprocal.'

For some time the Sheriff maintained an astonished silence, at length he said:

'Madam, will you proceed to Court?'

'Proceed to Court?' replied the lady with a merry laugh, then shaking her head, she added:

'No sir! though this is leap year, I will not take the advantage of the license therein granted to my sex, and therefore greatly prefer that you should proceed to court.'

'But, madam, the Justice is waiting.'

'Let him wait, I am not disposed to hurry matters in such an unbecoming manner, and besides, sir, when the ceremony is performed, I wish you to understand that I prefer a minister to a Justice of the Peace.'

A light dawned upon the Sheriff's brain.

'Madam,' said he, rising from his chair with solemn dignity, 'there is a great mistake here, my language has been misunderstood; the attachment of which I speak was issued from the office of a Squire, and commands me to bring you instantly before him, to answer a contempt of Court, in disobeying a subpoena.'

The curtain is dropped on the future proceedings of the parties.

LET EVERY PARENT READ.

The mother of a fine family, with her two first children, acted upon the commonly received idea, that it was sometimes necessary to slap them when they were naughty. She observed however, that this never failed to excite some degree of resentment, and more or less diverted their attention from the wrong they had done, to the injury they suffered. With her younger children she discontinued whipping, and substituted milder forms of punishment, such as shutting them up in a room by themselves, making them go to bed supperless, etc. This excited their evil feelings less; but in some degree, this likewise turned their attention from their own fault to the punishment inflicted. The accusation, which should have fallen with its whole weight on themselves, was partially bestowed on the parent. Something of resistance and rebellion was always roused, though its outward manifestation might be restrained by the fear of additional punishment. My friend was a wise woman, and she knew that it was far better to avoid contests with her children, than to come off victorious in them. The less the combative principle is roused into activity, before reason and conscience are mature enough to regulate it, the better. Habits of mind, whether good or bad, are strengthened in this way, as the muscles of a goldbeater's arm grow stout by constant use. If a child is of an obstinate temper, it is therefore better to treat any little matter of difference lightly, than to arouse his besetting sin by compulsory efforts to subdue him. It is better to keep his obstinacy as quiescent as possible, till he is old enough to be reasoned with, and thus taught to employ his perseverance for worthy and noble ends.

Acting upon this principle, of not arousing evil feelings, if possible to avoid it, she resolved to try, with her youngest girl, the effect of sorrow instead of penalty. She was very volatile, and her mother had many doubts whether the experiment would prove successful. The first time she tried it, was on the occasion of visiting a relative. The child was extremely desirous to accompany her parents, but was told that it was unsuitable for her to be out so late as they intended to stay. Habitual firmness had taught her that teasing was of no avail; and she soon gave up the effort. At parting, her mother told her to be a good girl, and go quietly to bed at eight o'clock, and in the morning she should hear all about the visit. At ten o'clock, her parents returned, and seated themselves at the parlor fire, chatting over the events of the evening. Presently they heard a timid, half-suppressed giggle; and, looking round, they saw little Mary peeping from under the table. 'My daughter, how is it that you are not in bed?' said her mother, calmly. 'The little rogue stole forth from her hiding-place, and looked very sheepish, as she answered, 'Why, mother, I wanted to sit up till you come back.' 'But I told you to go to bed at eight. My little daughter knows she has done very wrong.'

The culprit stood awhile in perplexity. She expected to be ordered instantly to bed, or at least to be reproved. But her parents went on talking with each other, as if she were not in the room; and at last, she hesitatingly drew up her little stool, and seated herself at her mother's side. After a while, she plucked up courage to ask about the visit. Who was there? Did anybody say anything about me? etc. Her mother answered all her questions, very kindly, though somewhat sadly. At length she said, 'Mother, I think it is time for me to go to bed.' 'Well, Mary, let me unpin your clothes. It is bright moonlight, and you will need no lamp. Do not waken Elizabeth.' The child lingered, and hesitated, and at last said, 'May I kiss you and father? They drew her toward them, imprinted a kiss on her lips, and bade her an affectionate good night.

After she had gone, they queried with each other, whether this mode of treatment would make her think lightly of her fault, and more prone to be disobedient in future. She was such a frolicsome, thoughtless child, that they were not without fears, that it might be so.—They were even doubtful whether she noticed the sadness of their tones, when they kissed her and bade her good night; for she went away smiling, and tripped lightly up stairs. But when her mother retired for the night, she had scarcely placed her head on the pillow, before she heard little bare feet padding across the entry floor; and a moment after, a little curly head was on her bosom, sobbing out, 'Oh, mother, dear, I can't go to sleep. Forgive me. I know I did very wrong.'

Sweet moments of reconciliation passed between parents and child, in the still moonlight; and then the little one went to her pillow, and slept as the lambs sleep.

The perfect kindness with which she had been treated, while she felt that her parents had been grieved by her conduct, left no work for the heart to do, but to accuse herself; and only by confession and repentance could she be at peace.

PLATE GLASS.

Mr. Joseph Hinds of London, recently visited Boston, to superintend the setting of the splendid specimens of British Plate Glass in the windows of Henry Pettes & Co's Warehouse, on Washington Street.

These are the first from this celebrated manufactory which have been used in this country. Each plate contains forty-eight square feet of glass, which is much larger than any other that has been used for windows in the United States. In short, you must go to Everington's India Shawl Warehouse, on Ludgate Hill, (London,) before you can see any glass to compare with that placed in Pettes' windows. The following information has been obtained from this gentleman respecting the manufacture of this brilliant and beautiful article, which may be interesting to our readers.

'There are four manufactories in France, where polished plates for looking glasses are made, the oldest of which is the Saint Gobin; and there are the like number in England, the oldest of which is the British. Besides these, there is a manufactory at St. Petersburg, and another at Brussels, and a number of small establishments in Germany, for the manufacture of small plates.'

No two manufactories produce exactly the same colored glass. When viewed edge-wise some of the German plates are of a grass green, some of a straw color, and some of a light purple, and some have a tinge of blue. The grass green, like the light purple glass, is nearly or quite as soft as the common flint glass, and has a misty or steamy appearance, and finally becomes frusted when exposed to the action of the atmosphere. The straw colored glass changes to a pink, when exposed, as can be seen in many of the windows in New York and Boston.

The French plate glass, when viewed edge-wise, is of two colors, one tends to a light purple and the other to a grass green; they possess the characters of both these shades of glass. The Russian glass is of a straw color, and the Belgian like the French purple.

Some of the English glass is of a straw color, and some of a grass green. That denominated British is nearly or quite white, and is the only glass that presents a beautiful emerald green, when viewed edge-wise. This glass is sought after by opticians for their best instruments. The English universally use it for optical purposes? and the French go to this manufactory to obtain it. No other glass equals this in color, brilliancy, reflection, hardness of metal, or fineness of polish, and it is believed to be the only plate glass in the world, that will not change its color or become misty. It has been but little known in the United States, but in England it is preferred to any other glass, and is so extensively used as to leave a small stock only for exportation.'

THE BLACKSMITH.

It was in full tide of retreat, that a follower of the American camp, who had at least shouldered a cart-whip in his country's services, was driving a baggage wagon from the battle field of Brandywine, while, some short distance behind, a body of Continentals were rushing forward, with a troop of Britishers in close pursuit.

The wagon had arrived at a narrow point of the bye road leading to the south, where two high banks of rock and crag arising on either side, afforded just space sufficient for the passage of his wagon, and not an inch more.

His eye was arrested by the sight of a stout muscular man, some forty years of age, extended at the foot of the tree at the very opening of this pass. He was clad in the coarse attire of a mechanic. His coat had been flung aside, and, with the shirt sleeves rolled up from his muscular arms, he lay extended on the turf, with his right hand in his grasp, while the blood streamed in a torrent from his right leg, broken at the knee by a cannon ball.

The wagoner's sympathies were arrested by the sight—he would have paused in the very instant of his flight, and placed the wounded blacksmith in his wagon, but the stout hearted mechanic refused.

'I'll not get into your wagon,' he exclaimed in his rough way, 'but I'll tell you what I will do. You see yonder cherry tree on the top of that rock that hangs over the road? Do you think you could lift a man of my build up there? For you see neighbor,' he continued, while the blood flowed from his wound, 'I never meddled with the Britishers until they came trampling over this valley and burned my house down. And now am all riddled to pieces, and haint got more than fifteen minutes of life in me! But I have got three good rifle balls in my cartridge box, and jist prop me up against that cherry tree, and then I'll give 'em the whole three shots, and then,' he exclaimed 'and then I'll die!'

The wagoner started his horses ahead, and then with a sudden effort of strength, dragged the blacksmith along the sod to the foot of the cherry tree surmounting the rock by the road side.

In a moment his back was propped against the tree, his face was to the advancing troops, and while his shattered leg hung over the bank, the wagoner rushed on his way, while the blacksmith very coolly proceeded to load his rifle.

It was not long before a body of American soldiers rushed by, with the British in pursuit. The blacksmith greeted them with a shout and then raising his rifle to his shoulder, he picked the foremost from his steed, with the exclamation, 'that's for Gen. Washington.' In a moment the rifle was loaded, again it was fired, and the pursuing British rode over the body of another fallen officer. 'That's for my self,' cried the blacksmith. And then with a hand strong with the feeling of coming death, the sturdy freeman again loaded, again raised his rifle. He fired his last shot, and as another officer kissed the sod, the tear quivered in the eye of the dying blacksmith. 'And that,' he cried with a husky voice which strengthened into a shout, 'And that's for mad Anthony Wayne.'

Long after the battle was past, the body was discovered, propped against the tree, with the features frozen in death, smiling grimly, while the right hand grasped the never failing rifle.

And thus died one of the ten thousand brave mechanic heroes of the revolution, brave in the hour of battle; undaunted in the hour of retreat; undismayed in the hour of death.

THE NETTLE. By the generality of farmers, the nettle is proscribed as a noxious and worthless weed. Yet in Holland, it is far from being regarded as valueless—the economical Dutchman using it as a pot-herb in its young state, and its roots for dyeing yellow.—The seed is also economized, and possesses the reputation of imparting superior spirit and activity to horses, as well as a fine, lustrous gloss to their coat or skin. It is sometimes sown and cut as green feed for cows—from four to six acres being appropriated to its production on a single farm, and affording from five to six crops a year. In the papers of the Bavarian Society, it is said to possess many important properties:—Eaten in salad it relieves consumption; it fattens horned cattle, whether eaten green or dry; it not only fattens calves, but improves their flesh; it is antidote to most maladies; sheep which eat it bring forth healthy, vigorous lambs; it promotes the laying of eggs in hens; it improves the fat of pigs; the seeds mixed with oats, are excellent for horses; it grows all the year round, even in the coldest weather, and the fibres of the stem make an excellent hemp.

THE UNPRINCIPLED MAN. The unprincipled man trifles with the feelings of others, and abuses the confidence of a friend.

The unprincipled man spends his days in idleness, and lives upon the industry of his neighbors. Of this class, according to calculation, is every eighth man in our country.

The unprincipled man deserts his home for the tipping shop, and expends for intoxicating drinks the money that would have kept his family from rags and hunger.

The unprincipled man takes advantage of another's ignorance, and drives a bargain that would shame a Shylock. He incurs liabilities which he never intends to cancel. He robs the widow, 'comes it' over the unsuspecting laborer, borrows of one, obtains the name of another for a 'bank accommodation,' does a 'dashing business,' stops payment, goes into chancery, pays nineteeen on a dollar, and lives like a prince the residue of his life! Truly says the poet, 'an honest man's the noblest work of God.'—Salem Observer.

FREEDOM OF CONSCIENCE. The New York Tribune remarks of the Bible, that 'no version has any exclusive claim to be considered 'the Bible,' or even 'the Protestant Bible,' there being several excellent and highly esteemed Protestant versions, and whoever insists that children of all persuasions shall be taught in our common schools from any one version, while their own church prescribes another, does in truth outrage the clearest dictates of religion, liberty and equal rights.'

BAD AIR IN WELLS. Never go down into a well which has been any time out of use; or if it be deep without trying the air in it. This may be done by lowering a lighted candle—if it burns there is no danger; but if it goes out the air is bad, and death would be the consequences of venturing into it. It is said that the air may be speedily corrected, by putting into the well—say from half a bushel to a bushel of quick lime, which will absorb the carbonic acid gas—the agent alike deleterious to comfort and respiration.

THE LEPROSY. This loathsome disease is said to exist, and to be rapidly spreading in New Brunswick. According to a St. John's paper, the disease is contagious, and no one who has been infected by it has recovered. It is found in the cleanest dwellings, and among the most respectable families. The medical commissioners say it is the leprosy of the middle ages, which the French term tubercular, and which raged all over Europe between the tenth and sixteenth centuries. The Quebec Mercury states that vessels from the Bay of Chaleurs are permitted to pass the quarantine station without stopping, and calls upon the government to adopt measures to prevent the introduction into Canada of the horrible disease now spreading on the shores of the Bay and in the adjoining portions of New Brunswick.

THE BLACKBIRD. This bird is one of the species against which the efforts not only of idle boys, but of farmers, are directed on account of its habit of attacking the Indian corn at the time of its sprouting from the ground. It is somewhat vexatious, to be sure, to have this injury done to corn crops; but before the farmer engages in the warfare against these birds, he should take into consideration the fact that they save ten times the amount of corn they destroy. They pick up thousands of insects that would do far greater damage.

There are only two short periods while the blackbirds remain, that they eat vegetable food; in the spring, when the corn is sprouting from the ground, and in autumn when it is mature. The remainder of their summer's sojourn is spent in rendering the most essential aid. On opening the stomachs of these and many others, worms, bugs, small reptiles, sometimes as many as fifty or sixty of these may be discovered in the stomachs of one individual.

AN AWEWARD MISTAKE. A mistake of rather an awkward description occurred to a youthful couple of lovers, in England.

The unfortunate swain had incurred the displeasure of his mistress's father, who had forbidden him to enter the house, and laid strict injunctions on his daughter not to pass the threshold without leave. This she obeyed to the letter, but hit upon an expedient to gratify her lover also, by breaking a square of glass in the pantry window, through which many had been given. Three times had the square been replaced, and four times had it been broken. Miss, attributing it to the cats, her father concealed himself in the place, in order to watch; about ten o'clock, the lover approached with "slow and cautious steps," which the master hearing, put his face to the aperture to ascertain who was coming at that "unhallowed hour," and the swain, mistaking it for his "soul's softest treasure," saluted it with the "heart's token." The whiskered face made him start—"By heavens!" thought he, "it is not you, it is somebody else," and soon the direful truth flashed upon him, in shape of the sturdy farmer and an old musket. A parry ensued, and the mistaken swain agreeing to pay the glazier's bill, was allowed to depart.

RAISING POTATOES. A farmer of Penobscot County, (Me.) took a small quantity of potatoes last spring, and divided each potato into four equal parts, planting the butt end, the seed end, and the two centre pieces, each separate, and the produce was from the butt ends forty pounds; from the seed ends, sixty-two pounds; and from the centre pieces both together, one hundred and sixty pounds—showing the superiority of the centre pieces by fifty-eight pounds, in the quantity planted.

SCARE-CROWS. The best protection from crows that has ever been found, is a sheet of bright tin suspended from a pole from a wire, sufficiently to be seen all over the field. Four such scare crows will protect a fifty acre field, if placed judiciously. The lightest breeze causes a reflection as fearful to a crow as the flash of a gun, and never fails to make the sable enemy take to his wings and fly away: with care, one set will last a life time.

SAVE YOUR SOAP SUDS. There is scarcely a plant that is not benefited by watering with soap suds. It furnishes nutritive matter as well as moisture—keeps off insects, and promotes a rapid growth. The Gardiner's Chronicle states, that while there has been a great failure in the cabbage and cauliflower gardens generally, those watered with soap suds have produced plants of the finest quality, and entirely escaped the injuries inflicted by insects upon others.

TO MAKE YEAST. To two middling sized boiled potatoes, add a pint of boiling water, and two table-spoonfuls of brown sugar. One pint of hot water should be applied to every half pint of the compound. Hot water is better in warm weather. This yeast, being made without flour, will keep longer, and is said to be much better than any previously in use.

SKATING IN 1191. It was customary in the winter, when the ice would bear them, for the young citizens of London to fasten the leg bones of animals under the soles of their feet by tying them round their ankles, and then taking a pole shod with iron into their hands, they pushed themselves forward by striking it against the ice, and moved with celerity equal to a bird flying through the air, or an arrow from a cross bow.

LOVE. Somebody says no boy passes his nineteenth year without having experienced at least one tender passion, and that very few girls get fairly through their sixteenth year seatless of a romantic love. The tender sentiment is peculiar to the teens, and is something like the mumps and measles—it comes only once in a lifetime.

REFLECTIONS.

The sudden and lamented death of Harriet Newell, eldest daughter of Mr. William and Mrs. Harriet Pratt, gives the occasion for the following lines as a tribute to her memory. They were written by a member of the Sabbath School with which the dear departed one was connected, and of which she was a bright and lovely ornament.

She was an uncommonly interesting child—a lovely example to all her young companions. For one of her years, she manifested an unusual degree of interest in the Sabbath School. She took uncommon pains to commit her Sabbath School lessons to memory, and acquaint herself with all the passages of Scripture to which they referred, and indeed she seemed to love the study of God's word. She was peculiarly fond of singing; her sweet and gentle voice would often unite with the family and others in a sacred song. The writer has often enjoyed with her this privilege.

As one who has long been acquainted and interested in the family with which she was connected, she seemed peculiarly dear to me. I had entwined my affections around her young heart. She has often affectionately stood leaning by my side, to catch as it were the strains as they would fall from my lips, while singing some of her favorite sacred songs.

I cannot soon forget the last Sabbath morning that I was permitted to behold her mild and pleasant countenance, (little did I think it was the last,) as she turned around from the pew before me, at the closing exercises of the school, as she was of ten wont to do, and with a smile looked so wishfully in my face, as if she would say, come let us sing one of the songs of Zion. That last—that lingering look—did I think it was for the last time!—The next Sabbath she was absent from the school. Disease had begun to prey upon her! that fearful disease—the scarlet fever! The next Sabbath her place was still vacant. Oh! it is painful to record that on this day her friends around her expected her last moments were drawing near—Alas! it was so. She died the next morning, Monday April 23d, after suffering much in the agonies of death. So faded this lovely flower, too fair to adorn our earthly bowers; she was cut down amid her spring bloom to flourish with celestial flowers in the paradise of God.

She was the eldest child of the family. In her removal her dear parents are called to drink deeply of the cup of affliction; but they have this consolation—that they sorrow not as others which have no hope.

The dear children and youth of the Sabbath School must be aware that she was for them a lovely example. Will they not make a wise improvement of this mysterious dispensation of Divine Providence. Will they not consider that it is a loud call to them to be "also ready," for they know not how soon they may be called away. Will they not become more interested in their Sabbath School lessons, and the study of the Scriptures which maketh wise unto salvation; and thus be prepared for a mansion in our Heavenly Father's kingdom.

We miss one of our youthful band:
One of our rosy blooming train,
She's gone, we trust, to Canaan's land,
And there may we meet her again.

A flower that blooms at early day,
Will often fade before 'tis noon;
So this lov'd one has pass'd away,
While yet amid her youthful bloom.

She was a bright, a lovely flower,
She withered—died—Alas! how soon
Remov'd, to the celestial bowers,
To flourish in immortal bloom.

While yet upon her cheeks did blend,
The rose and lily's fairest hue,
God did for her a message send,
To enter scenes more fair to view.

We trust her voice is heard among
The shining band, in blissful strains,
Ever to sing that noble song,
Which echoes through the heavenly plains.

Then children learn to fear the Lord,
E'er health and life, with you is o'er,
And you will find a sure reward,
And dwell on Zion's happier shore.

THE TOWN HOUSE QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Quincy Patriot:
MR. EDITOR—The statement made by the Town House Committee, in answer to our last week's communication, leads, in our opinion, to very erroneous conclusions on several material points; and as our only object has been to exhibit the facts in their true light, we cannot in justice to ourselves refrain from offering further a few words of comment.

They say that we "did not conform to the Specifications in regard to the quality of the work," because the Specifications required "the dressing on the front to equal No. 1-1-2 on the Journeyman's Bill of Prices." When we examined the Specifications, previous to giving in our proposals, we took pains to inquire, in order to ascertain what kind of dressing was intended by this "No. 1-1-2." No one was able to inform us. No such denomination had ever been used in connection with stone business before, and no definite meaning, so far as we could learn, had been affixed to the expression. It appeared to be only a cabalistic sign assumed by certain journeyman stone cutters, which they might interpret to mean whatever they pleased. We were told, moreover, by the member of the Committee who had the Plans and Specifications in his keeping, that no regard would be paid to these numbers in giving out the work, but that some building would be named as a sample. In writing our proposals, therefore, in order to fix upon something definite and intelligible, we named the front of Brazer's Building as a sample for the front of the Town House, and as the Specifications made a difference between the front and the sides, we named Morton Block as a sample for the sides.

If the majority of the Committee intended that the work should be open to fair and honorable competition, why were expressions used in the Specifications unheard of in any former transactions—expressions having no established significance, and of which no explanation was made? If the majority of that Committee were determined to secure the work for certain favorites of their own, they might have done so directly by virtue of the discretionary power allowed them by the Town. To make a show of fairness by advertising for proposals, and then to introduce into the Specifications terms that but few, if any, could understand, cannot be made to appear to us in any other light than a deliberate design to get rid of competition in a covert manner.

We are further surprised that any member of the Committee undertakes to complain of us for not conforming to the Specifications, when the very Contract which they presented to us deviated from those Specifications on the same point. Instead of conforming to the Specifications, and inserting No. 1-1-2 in the Contract which they offered for our signatures, they named the front of Brazer's Building as a sample. The Committee did so, no doubt, for a very good reason, to have something definite and tangible; and it will become any of their number now to object to us for doing the same thing.

We are now told, that No. 1-1-2 was considered fifty-cent work; and that we estimated for inferior work, of a quality equal to thirty-three cents. Those to whom the work is now let out, several of them being members of the Committee, can estimate the work at whatever nominal value they please. No such standard as they have now set up was ever known before among men doing granite work, and how is the quality to be determined? By the very men who are doing the work. The sample that we named was evidently as good as the work that they have adopted the same in their Contract. The Specifications made a distinction between the front and the sides, and in making our proposals we named a similar distinction, which the Committee formally accepted.

But we are told that the Committee accepted our proposal only because it stated the work should be done "according to the Specifications and Plans." We are astonished that any members of the Committee should resort to such a quibble of words. After naming, as we did expressly, the quality of the hammering, of course the phrase—"according to the Specifications and Plans"—could only have reference to other particulars. But if the Committee accepted of our proposal for this reason, why did they not for the same reason accept of the Contract which we offered to sign? That Contract conformed precisely to the terms of our proposal. It is alleged in reference to our Contract, that "one of the contractors said he could not and would not sign any other than the one he had offered to the Committee." This allegation we pronounce to be without a shadow of foundation. No individual of our number ever made such a statement.

We have presented the subject before the public, not for the purpose of retarding or embarrassing the work; but we cannot submit to be trifled with, as we have been by those who constitute a majority of the Committee, without exposing their proceedings and uttering an indignant protest. Had the work been given directly to those for whom the majority of the Committee seem to have determined to secure it from the first, we could have raised no objection whatever. But after having been invited in common with all others to offer proposals, we had a right to expect, at least, honorable treatment.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1844.

John A. Green, Editor.

Town House. The Town meeting held last Tuesday afternoon, at which William B. Duggan was chosen Moderator, having received two hundred and thirty-one votes to one hundred and thirty-nine cast for George Marsh, was dissolved after a decided vote was passed to indefinitely postpone the consideration of the several articles in the warrant, the principal one related to re-considering the vote to build a Stone Town House.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION. Last Thursday, on the ninth ballot, Hon. James K. Polk of Tennessee was unanimously nominated for the Presidency—Hon. Silas Wright, Jr. of New York was selected for the Vice Presidency with great unanimity.

DROWNED. On Wednesday last, a party of the young people of Braintree went out on a fishing excursion in a sloop, and as they were shifting the sail, the boom struck Sargent Faxon, a son of Mr. Charles Faxon, twenty-two years of age, and knocked him overboard; he sunk instantly and never rose. The company continued their search for his body sometime without success, and then returned with heavy hearts to bear the mournful intelligence to his friends.

TEMPERANCE CELEBRATION. The gathering of the Washingtonians on Thursday last, on Boston Common, was a grand affair.

Most of the principal streets of Boston, were hung with streamers, and otherwise decorated, in a manner worthy of the occasion.

Delegations were present from four of the New England States—Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

One of the marshals of Middlesex County rode a horse, belonging to a gentleman in West Cambridge, whose tail had been shorn, bearing a flag inscribed—"shaved in the cause; beware of my heels next time."

The well of the South Boston society was perfect in its kind—was filled with iced water, and furnished drink to hundreds.

The New Bedford whale-boat attracted much attention. It was a perfect model, twenty-eight feet long—and manned by six hearty tars.

It is estimated that not less than twenty-thousand persons marched in the procession. The Common and streets were literally alive with people besides. There could not have been less than forty to fifty thousand on the Common at one time during the day. This was after the procession had returned, and the speaking from the stands commenced.

In the evening, at the Tremont Temple, addresses were delivered by Gov. Briggs, Anderson and Mitchell of Baltimore, and other distinguished speakers.

The day was fine throughout, and every thing passed off in the happiest manner.

The Legislature of New York have passed the bill providing for the election of Canal Commissioners by the people of that State.

TYLER NATIONAL CONVENTION. The friends of President Tyler have held a National Convention at Baltimore, and nominated him for re-election.—There were large delegations present, and harmony and wisdom marked their proceedings. No nomination of a Vice President was made.

FIRE AT NEW ORLEANS. A tremendous conflagration took place in New Orleans on the 18th inst. Several whole squares were reduced to ashes—and nearly three hundred houses destroyed!—Families fled from their dwellings by hundreds, leaving all their effects behind them; indeed, many deemed themselves singularly fortunate in having escaped with their lives. This is by far the greatest conflagration that has ever taken place in New Orleans. The loss of property is immense.

The "Native Americans" in Philadelphia, are forming military companies. There are now three, one in Spring Garden, one in Southwark, and the other in West Philadelphia. This movement is decidedly impolitic, and should be prevented by public sentiment.

One hundred and fifty tons of cattle bones were lately exported to England in one vessel.

As one of the fruits of oppression, it is stated that a slaveholder of Farmersville, (La.) while seated by the side of his daughter, was shot dead by one of his own slaves.

The Midnight Cry, the organ of the Millerites, has ceased to be published.

A lap-streak boat came ashore on Gardiner's beach, Hingham, some time during Sunday last, with one man in her dead. No papers were found on his person by which his name or residence could be ascertained.

A heated discussion has been going on in the General Conference of the Methodist Church on the subject of slavery, and a rupture between the northern and southern branches of the church is looked to as quite probable.

As a substitute for cream in coffee, beat the white of an egg to a froth—put to it a small lump of butter, and turn the coffee to it gradually, so that it may not curdle. It is difficult to distinguish the taste from fresh cream.

The journeymen shoemakers of Lynn and Woburn have struck for higher wages.

The editors of the Advent Herald, a Millerite paper, frankly acknowledge the expiration of their reckoning of the time when they expected their Lord!

In the rum bottle, discontent seeks for comfort, cowardice for courage, and modesty for impudence.

The Duke of Wellington, who continues in the enjoyment of excellent health, completed his seventy-fifth year the first of last month.

In the city of New Orleans, there are in operation every night, as near as can be ascertained, one hundred roulette tables, each one which clears its owner, at least fifty dollars per night.

During the last session of the Supreme Court of this State, in Barnstable County, the only business before it was the consideration of three petitions for divorce, which were granted.

The Eastern Railroad Company propose to build a large Hotel, on the most approved plan, during the present season, to be located in the immediate vicinity of their depot, near Commercial Street, Boston.

Thirteen cases of black tongue, a dangerous sickness, have recently occurred at Grand Gulf, (Miss.)

At the May term of the Supreme Court of New York, forty-nine persons were admitted as counsellors and eighty-three as attorneys.

Andrew Stevenson of Virginia, late Minister to England, has published a long letter in favor of the annexation of Texas.

A great fruit tree mania has been prevalent for two or three years past, and if the trees are well taken care of, fruit will be abundant and cheap in a few years. The proprietor of the Nursery, at Newton, (Mass.) has sold upwards of thirty-two thousand apple trees the present season. Nurseries have multiplied astonishingly in all the northern and middle States, and they have all done a large business.

Forty years since, the then humble Robert Fulton requested of Congress the use of the Hall of the House of Representatives, to deliver an address on the use of steam for propelling boats, but was refused—the "assembled wisdom of the nation" deeming the idea too absurd for the consideration of reasonable men.

To destroy worms on cabbage, the following easy and simple method is said to be effectual. "At night (about sun-down) strip off one of the lower leaves and lay it on the top of the cabbage, back side down. In the morning very early take it off, and the whole, or a large proportion of the worms of that cabbage will be on it, and can be disposed of as one sees fit. Two or three trials will effectually free the cabbage from all worms."

DIED.

In this town, 25th ult., Mrs. Elizabeth Hunt, aged 67 years.
In Braintree, 26th ult., Samuel Glover, son of Mr. Horatio N. and Mrs. Phebe Faxon, aged 5 years.
In Plymouth, 23d. ult., the venerable Dr. James Thatcher, aged 90. He was born in Barnstable, and entered the revolutionary army at Cambridge, at the commencement of the war, as a surgeon's mate. He was soon promoted to be a surgeon, and in that capacity served during the war. He was present at many of the principal battles of the revolution, and terminated his services at Yorktown. He then settled at Plymouth, where he was eminent in his profession, and during a large portion of his life was actively engaged in a successful and extensive practice, enjoying the affection and esteem of a wide circle of friends.

The bark Ohio lately arrived at Philadelphia from Bordeaux, (France), with a full cargo of brandy, the duties upon which amounted to forty thousand dollars!

Testimony of an eminent Chemist in favor of FARR'S LIFE PILLS, by John Dale, Esq. Lecturer on Chemistry, and pupil of the celebrated D. Dalton, F. R. S. &c. &c.

MANCHESTER, Dec 7 1841.

To T. Roberts & Co. 9 Crane Court, Fleet St. London.

GENTLEMEN:—At the request of several friends who have introduced Farr's Life Pills into their families as a medicine, I have submitted them to a strict chemical analysis, in order to ascertain whether they contained any of those active mercurial preparations, now so commonly introduced into many advertised medicines. I beg to say, that I find them worthy of being recommended to the public, for their efficacy and simplicity, and, as stated by the proprietors, to be really Vegetable Pills, containing, as they do, nothing but what is of vegetable origin.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN DALE, Analytical Chemist.

Jayne's Carminative Balsam.

IS a certain, safe and effectual remedy for Dysentery, Diarrhoea, or Looseness, Cholera Morbus, Summer Complaint, Colic, Gripping Pains, Sour Stomachs, Sick and Nervous Headache, Heartburn, Waterbrash, Pain or Sickness of the Stomach, Vomiting, Spitting up of Food after eating, and also where it passes through the body unchanged, want of Appetite, restlessness and inability to Sleep, wind in the Stomach and Bowels, Hysteria, Cramp, Nervous Tremors and Twitchings, Sea Sickness, Faintings, Melancholy and Lowness of Spirit, Fretting and Crying of Infants, and for all Bowel Affections and Nervous Diseases.
This is one of the most efficient, pleasant, and safe compositions ever offered to the public for the cure of the various derangements of the stomach and bowels, and the only article worthy of the least confidence for curing Cholera Infantum, or Summer Complaint; and in all the above diseases it really acts like a charm.
All persons are requested to try it, for without exception it is the most valuable family medicine ever yet discovered. Hundreds, nay, thousands, of certificates have been received from Physicians, Clergymen, and families of the first respectability, bearing the strongest testimony in its favour, too numerous to publish.

Boston, April 6. 3w

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston. We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING, ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season. We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all.

Some have the impression that we keep nothing but fancy goods and rich stuffs, or tip top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1/2 cts.; Blue and other colors 50 cts.; GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1.50; Sattinet Pants, Canada Gray, etc.

All our custom work shall be in the superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call before purchasing, at the QUINCY HALL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, OVER THE QUINCY MARKET.
Boston, April 6. 3w

POETRY.

TO A GOOD WIFE.

Companion of my calmest, happiest hours,
Dear partner of my home felt joys and cares,
For thee, in silent thought, my spirit pours
Its glad thanksgivings and incessant prayers.
Thou art my world! What once to me were snares,
Wealth, emulation, fame,—are now disarm'd;
But love's light load my heart contented bears;
By pleasing conjugal enchantment charm'd;
And only by the fear of future loss alarm'd.

When travelling far, in sickness or in grief,
Of strangers weary, lonely and depress'd,
The thought of thee administers relief,
The progress homeward soothes my heart to rest;
Arriving, I'm unutterably bless'd;
Thy tender welcome banishes all care;
Pain, sickness, sorrow, leave my lighten'd breast;
Peace, confidence and joy re-enter there;
All things appear transform'd, all good, serene, and fair.

While conquerors climb the summits of renown,
O'er mounds of dead, through slaughter, blood, and flame,
And from their stormy eminences, frown
On half the wasted world; while others aim
At wealth, or office, or a titled name;
Our choice be love, and meek, domestic peace,
Obedient faith, and conscience void of blame;
Joys that may grow as health and strength decrease;
And in full vigor last when selfish pleasures cease.

Of bows my soul before a Father's throne;
Its prayer—Me from idolatry defend,
And keep, O jealous God, my heart thy own;
Yet still thy dearest, dangerous boon, O lend;
Spare her thou gav'st me till my journey end;
Instruct our babe thy saving truth to know;
Let thy pure influence on our hearts descend;
Our spirits purge of love of things below;
Our strength in weakness be, our bliss in worldly woe.

While God upholds us in this dying world,
The cares of love be still our sweet employ;
When death's approach with shadowing wings unfurled,
Shall warn us to resign terrestrial joy,
Despair shall not our parting hour annoy;
Hope, strong, exultant, shall the mourner cheer,
Through Him who died that He might death destroy.
Our mingled dust th' archangel's call shall hear,
And live, in love and joy, through heaven's eternal year!

THE FISHERMAN.

A lonely man is in that skiff—
A storm is on the sea;
The night is dark, and drear that cliff—
For breakers are a-lee!
The wild sea gull, with cowering crest,
Swoops o'er the swelling wave;
The wizard petrel leaves his nest
In yonder coral cave.
Thunder and hail with power assail,
The absent fisher's cot;
Hark! how his trembling children wait
Their toiling father's lot.
The sail bark like a spirit car,
Springs on its arrowy way;
Nor sun, nor moon, nor guiding star
Shines on the trackless bay.

The tempest thickens—foaming white,
The waves rush round him now;
The torn sail like a water sprite
Streams o'er the plunging bow.

His hand has left the useless oar—
His head sinks in despair—
Alas! his home will be no more
With wife or children share.

But look—what ray breaks o'er the path
That wandering bark should steer!
What voice is heard, above the wrath
Of storm so wild and drear!

A woman's angel form stands there
Upon the sounding shore;
And, answering to his whispered prayer
She guides him home once more.

THE DYING WISH.

'Mamma, a little maiden said,
Almost with her expiring sigh,
'Put no sweet roses round my head,
When in my coffin-dress I lie.'
'Why not, my dear,' the mother cried—
'What flower so well a corpse adorns?'
'Mamma, the innocent replied,
'They crown'd our Savior's head with thorns.'

ANECDOTES.

A young buck, of the soap-lock order, who wore an unshaven face, because, as he said, it looked 'foreign,' lately accosted a Yankee as follows:—'I say, fellow, some individuals think I am a Frenchman, and some take me for Etiyann—now what do you think I am?' 'I think you are a damned fool,' replied Jonathan.

'You should not quarrel with your wife,' said a friend to his neighbor, 'consider that you and your wife are one.' 'Yes, but if you were by sometimes when we are at it, you would think there were twenty of us,' said the man.

'Willy,' said a doting parent at the breakfast-table, to an abridged edition of himself, who had just entered the grammar-class at the High School; 'Willy, my dear, will you pass the butter?'
'Therintin this—it takes me to partne any thing. Better this a common, thobstantive neuter gender, a-greeth with hot buckwheat cakes, and it governed by thougar houth molasses understood.'

A young gentleman, who was in the act of popping the question to a young lady, when, just at the 'witching time,' her father entered the room, and inquired what they were about? 'O!' promptly replied the fair one, 'He was just explaining the question of annexation to me, and is for immediate annexation.' 'Well,' said papa, 'if you can agree on a treaty, I'll ratify it.'

Dr. Louis Kurtz,

RESPECTFULLY informs the afflicted and the public in general, that he has, on account of the great increase of business, removed his Infirmary to the spacious dwelling house

NO. 64 CAMBRIDGE STREET, BOSTON, where he may be consulted gratis, and with the utmost confidence, in French, German or English.

Thankful for the liberal patronage the public have bestowed upon him for the last three years, he solicits its continuance, assuring them that he shall do all in his power to make himself worthy of it.

Dr. K. has had during his sojourn at the hospitals of Leipzig, (Germany,) Paris, (France,) and for the last three years in this country, a very extensive practice, and is confident of being able to give entire satisfaction in the following complaints, viz:—

Scrofulous Humor, Sore Legs, Spine Complaint, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Cough, Consumption, Dropsy, Mercurial Affection, White Swelling on the knee, etc., etc.

In diseases of a private nature, (maladies secret,) Dr. Kurtz is acknowledged to be surpassed by no physician in this country, and warrants a perfect cure in from three to ten days, according to the stage of the disease.

Dr. Louis Kurtz would respectfully call the attention of invalids to the following valuable remedies, viz:—
German Anti-Mercurial Panacea. This medicine has been pronounced by the faculty of Leipzig, (Germany,) a sure and perfect cure, when that deadly poison, Mercury, has been injudiciously used. Price $1 per bottle—six bottles safely packed in a small box, $5.00.

German Tonic Mixture—an excellent remedy for dyspepsia. Price $1.00—six bottles $5.00.
German Tonic and Diuretic Pills—a sure and perfect cure for Fluor Albis, (Whites.) Price $1.00 per box—six boxes $5.00.

The above named medicines have been pronounced by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe, the only sure and safe remedies for suppression, stoppage, etc., etc., and since their introduction into this country, several thousand bottles and boxes have been used and given entire satisfaction. Price $2.00 per box or bottle.

Dr. L. Kurtz pays particular attention to all Female Complaints, in the treatment of which he has had much experience, and great success.

Docteur L. Kurtz est consulte, gratis, en francais, allemand et anglais.

Dr. L. Kurtz giebt freie consultationen in deutscher, franzoesischer und englischer Sprache.

Office hours from 8 A. M. until 9 P. M. Letters promptly attended to and strict secrecy observed. Agents wanted for the above valuable remedies on reasonable terms. Apply by letter (post paid) or personally as above.

DR. BUTLER,

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevail to a great extent in this country, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the fulsome description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impediment in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he is for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and then prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician.
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant

Tradesman.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for nearly four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fastening upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

From Abraham Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy

Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

Sir—I am gratified to learn that you are about to publish a plan for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health has been restored, and that he has been enabled to pursue his business, from an attack of this fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernands' Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for health from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, state to you that I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle which I so much desired, and in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

MISCELLANY.

THE SMITH OF AUGSBURG.

Three hundred years ago there lived at Augsburg a lad named Willibald, apprentice to a smith, whose diligence and industry obtained him the approval and regard of his master, while his good nature and obliging disposition caused him to be a favorite with all who knew him.

His master, in truth, so highly esteemed his skillfulness and excellent workmanship, that, when the boy grew into a man, he offered to make him his partner, and moreover hinted that he was not displeased at the young man's friendship with his daughter.

Now, this alarmed Willibald, who, though certainly much favored by the young lady, was quite free from any feeling of love for her. He replied to all her advances with distant though profound respect; and the reason of his coldness was apparent.

In the small house opposite lived Dame Martha, a respectable widow, with a grand-daughter of uncommon loveliness, about sixteen years of age. The sweet face of the young Ellen had quite captivated the heart of Willibald; and when he saw her through the window, or the open door, neatly dressed, sitting at the spinning wheel, or heard her clear voice warbling hymns, he thought there could be no happiness so great as that of calling her his own.

Ellen was her grandam's darling, and the delight of her eyes, and the old woman seldom suffered her to stir from her sight. So that there was no opportunity for the youth to declare the passion with which the fair girl had inspired him.

For a long while did Willibald wish in vain for some pretence for a visit to their dwelling, but fortune at length favored him. One day when the snow and ice made the ground so slippery as to be dangerous to an infirm person, he saw Dame Martha coming out of the church alone. He hastened to offer her the assistance of his arm, and conducted her home.

She invited him to enter, for she thought to herself that only a very worthy young man would be so courteously attentive to an aged dame. She offered him also a cup of beer, which the pretty Ellen presented with her own hands.

Who was now happier than Willibald? From this day he was one of Dame Martha's most frequent visitors, and was always received with a welcome. In process of time, he made bold to lay open his heart to the old woman, and asked permission to make love to her grand-daughter. 'My dear young friend,' was her reply, 'I have the highest esteem for you, and, indeed, could never wish for Ellen a better husband than yourself. I believe she loves you, too, as much as becomes a damsel; but you have not yet sufficient for the support of a wife. I can give my little girl nothing except a good stock of clothes as her portion, and it is not the part of prudence to commence life by falling into debt. Save from your wages a decent sum, say thirty gold pieces; that will be enough, as I know, for a beginning, then come and receive your bride with my blessing.'

Willibald was almost beside himself with joy. He had now an object for labor and frugality, and he redoubled his industry, laying by carefully all he made. Ellen assisted him, for she was much attached to him, and spun more briskly than ever, now that she was permitted to add her small savings to her lover's store.

The lovers met less frequently, but their time passed pleasantly, for they were both incessantly occupied, with hope to animate their toil. Every Sunday evening Willibald went over to Dame Martha's and told her how much he had earned and saved the preceding week. Thus the weeks passed, and eighteen months rolled by, and the young smith, with joy announced himself master of five-and-twenty gold pieces.

About this time Dame Martha became indisposed with a bad cough, which rendered her almost helpless, at least quite unable to work according to her custom. Her physician prescribed change of air, and said a longer abode in the narrow and confined streets of the city would kill her. She must remove to the country. The dame followed this advice, and took a little cottage in the suburbs, about an hour's walk from the city.

Willibald was grieved enough when he found himself so far from his beloved; but he loved her the more, and proved the truth of the old proverb, 'the further off the charmer, the dearer the way to her.' Every Sunday he went to visit her, and thought the air of the country even improved her beauty.

One day, as Willibald approached the house, Ellen came to meet him weeping. She sobbed bitterly as he drew near, and exclaimed, 'Ah, Willibald, what a misfortune!'

'You know it, then!' cried he, with faltering voice.

'What—no—what?' asked Ellen quickly and eagerly.

'That I have been robbed of my box of money,' answered the youth, in a tone of anguish. 'I could find it nowhere this morning; some one has stolen it. You see all our prudence and foresight has gone for nothing.'

'Alas!' replied Ellen, 'then misfortunes never come single.' Yesterday morning a rich gentleman came to our cottage. He asked for a drink of water, and when I handed it to him, looked at me earnestly, and asked if I would go with him and be his wife. I answered 'no,' but he returned early this morning, and demanded me of my grandam. His name is Werner; he is a rich merchant from Ulm.

Even now he is sitting in the room yonder, with my grandam, drinking wine, and telling her of his house and lands, while his servant, who stands by the chimney, confirms every thing he says. But be comforted, dear Willibald; my grandam may say what she will, I will die rather than be faithless to you!

Here Dame Martha came out of the house, and commanded Ellen to go in directly. The poor girl was forced to obey; and the old woman said to Willibald, 'Young man, I came to say to you that I think it best you should come no more to my cottage. A rich man is a suitor to my Ellen, and it is my duty to do what is for her good. I say nothing of myself and my infirmity; I could cheerfully bear hardship, but I wish to see her surrounded with comfort and elegance. I put it to yourself—what could you offer the girl? Would you have her bind herself to poverty and toil, now when she may place herself in ease and affluence?'

'Very good—very good, Dame Martha,' cried Willibald, half choking with emotion. 'I say nothing of your conduct! If you choose to break an honest fellow's heart—and your own word also—it is all the same to you!'

'But, Willibald,' persisted the dame, 'listen to me!—but the impetuous youth was already several paces off. She called after him, but the sound of her voice did not serve to check the mad speed at which he rushed on. Despair drove him; and he slackened not his pace till he found himself in the open fields, night gathering around him. It was darker, night, however in his own breast. He threw himself on the ground and cursed himself and his destiny—for no tear would come to his relief. When he thought, too, of Ellen, and her wretchedness, his heart was like to break.

Some hours must have passed unmarked in the indulgence of his grief, for it was late when he rose, and tried to find his way home, without being able to discover the road, he found he was in a church-yard. The tall spire of the church was visible at some distance, in relief against the drifting clouds. 'There is the house where the people go to pray,' murmured the youth bitterly. 'Have I not also prayed, have I not toiled, have I not denied myself? Have I not kept my soul from taint of sin? And what is my reward? Ellen is lost to me. Prayers will not give her back; else could I pray—aye, to the bad fiend himself—and promise to be his, so she would be mine!'

Scarce had the distracted youth uttered these wild words, when a sound of shrill laughter near startled him, and, looking round, he saw a figure which he had no difficulty in recognizing by the well-known horns and cloven foot. 'I am here,' cried he in hoarse tones, 'at your service, and ready to do your bidding; asking only a small service in return.'

'What is that?' Willibald mustered courage to say, though he trembled all over.

'You are, as I happen to know,' said the fiend, 'an excellent smith. I have a piece of work for you. Follow me; I will take you to a spot where lies buried one of my subjects. You must make me an iron railing round this grave; and, in reward I will give you your bride.'

'If you have nothing more to ask, I am content,' replied the young man.

'This is all; but it is a harder task than you imagine. You have but one hour to work. At twelve you must begin, and the railing must be completed by the time the clock strikes one. If it is done, you are free; if not, you belong to me forever.'

Willibald paused an instant, but a flood of wild thoughts came rushing upon his brain; and the passionate desire to snatch Ellen from his rival overcame all his prudence. He pledged himself to the unhallowed contract, and followed the fiend, who hobbled on till he stood by a new made grave. 'To your work, my lad,' he cried, and vanished.

At the same instant, Willibald saw fire spring out of the ground beside him, and caught a glimpse of several bars of iron, and the tools of his trade. The clock on the church tower struck twelve! and, starting, he betook himself to work. So diligently did he apply himself, that the work grew rapidly under his hand; the railing was almost finished. A single screw only was wanting to complete it, when the dull sound of the clock heard striking one, and Willibald fell to the ground insensible.

When his sense returned it was morning, the sun was shining brightly, and he thought all that had passed a wild dream. But a sight of the railing nearly finished around the grave, and a rusty bar of iron lying on the ground, convinced him of its reality. There was, however, no trace of the fire, and the tools had disappeared.

Full of shame and repentance, Willibald hastened to the church, to pray more earnestly than he had ever prayed before, for the pardon of his dreadful sin. His heart was lighter after the prayer; but he could not go home to work that day, and sadly he walked toward Dame Martha's cottage.

Ellen came to meet him, as before, and shed tears as she threw her arms round his neck.

'This time,' she said, 'they are tears of joy. When you left us so suddenly yesterday, I also came from the house, and into the little garden, where I might weep undisturbed. I sat there long, Willibald, long after dusk; when, as I leaned my head on the table yonder, thinking hopelessly of you, a female figure approached me. She resembled my dead mother; but she smiled very sweetly, Willibald, and said, "Weep not, my child, but pray—pray for your lover; he is in very great danger." She vanished before I could thank her; but I remembered her words and prayed for you Willibald, all night long.'

The young man shuddered, but raised his eyes upward in thankfulness.

'Early this morning,' continued the damsel, 'came Herr Werner; I went out to meet him, and told him I would die rather than become his wife. He was much vexed, but, without another word, mounted his horse and rode away, followed by his servant. My grandam was angry, but my conscience told me I did right, and now that you return to me in safety, Willibald, I am sure that I have the blessing of Heaven.'

And the young smith felt the same assurance, when, a few days after, his box of treasure was restored to him by his master's daughter, who, in a fit of jealousy or love of mischief, had stolen it from him. Dame Martha could no longer withhold her consent; but, before Willibald dared to claim Ellen as his bride, he confessed his great sin to the priest, and submitted to the penance enjoined upon him, and this of course saved him.

The lovers were married and lived happily, remembering their past troubles only as a warning against discontent and a want of submission to Providence. 'If I had been suffered to perish then,' would Willibald say, 'my want of faith would have deserved such a doom!'

To this day the poor people of Augsburg learn the same lesson; for to this day the iron railing, with its one screw wanting, is an object of wonder and curiosity. Many skillful workmen have essayed to furnish a screw that will fit, but the current saying is, that 'no thread will ever be made for it, unless by the fiend himself,' and we incline to the same opinion.

NAMES OF MONTHS EXPLAINED.

JANUARY, the first month of the year, was so called by the Romans, from Janus, one of their deities, to whom they gave two faces; because on the one side the first day of this month looked towards the new year, and on the other towards the old.

The rigor of the season in this month required the figure to appear almost clothed in white; because in this month the earth is frequently covered with snow.

This figure representing January is blowing his nails, and under his left arm is a billet, for the purpose of denoting the season of the year.

The sign of Aquarius the Water-bearer, is added to show that rain and snow, during this month, fall in abundance. The sun enters the sign Aquarius on the 21st of this month.

This month was added to the year of Romulus by Numa Pampilius.

FEBRUARY, the second month of the year, was so named by Numa Pampilius, either from the fevers that were so common in Italy about this time, or from the God Februs, who presided over the feast held by the Romans to celebrate the obsequies of the dead.

This month is characterized as a young man dressed in cloudy-colored drapery, from the frequency of the rain and the gloomy sky. On his left is added the sign Pisces, the Fishes, because the sun in passing this celestial sign denotes the month; and as the fish is an aquatic animal, it alludes to the humidity of the season, from the rain falling about this period in abundance. The sun enters Pisces on the 19th of this month.

MARCH, the third month of the year according to our reckoning, but with the Romans the first, which Romulus called Mars, from the name of his supposed father.

This month is characterized by a young man of a sprightly aspect, and in armor because it was dedicated by Romulus to Mars. The sign

Aries, the Ram, denotes the beginning of the Roman year. The spade alludes to the season, as being necessary to prepare the ground for sowing. The sun enters the sign Aries on the 20th of this month, and makes the vernal equinox.

APRIL, the fourth month of the year, is so named from the Latin word Apris, 'I open;' because in this month the earth begins to open and send forth her riches.

This month is represented by the ancients as a young man in green, with a garland of myrtle and hawthorn in buds, in allusion to the fields sending forth their verdure. In one hand he has some primroses and violets, in the other the sign Taurus, the Bull. The sun enters the sign Taurus on the 20th of this month.

MAY, the fifth month of the year was called by Romulus Maius, out of respect to the senators and nobles of his city, who were called Majores.

Romulus divided the people into two parts, the Major and Minor; the former possessing wisdom and counsel to govern the Republic, and the latter arms to defend it.

Others are of opinion that it received its name from Maius, the mother of Mercury.

May is represented by a young man dressed in green, embroidered with various flowers, with a garland of the same kind upon his head. In one hand he holds a lute, upon the forefinger of the other a nightingale, with the sign Gemini, the Twins. The sun enters Gemini on the 21st of this month. The green-flowered dress and the garland signify the gayness of the fields, and the general face of nature at this season of the year.

JUNE, the sixth month of the year, is said to have been so named from a temple of the goddess Juno; others, however, are of opinion that it took its name from Junius Brutus, who expelled Tarquin the kindom on the 1st of this month.

June is represented by a young man clothed in a lighter dress than the preceding figure, to indicate the commencement of Summer. Upon his head is a garland of flowers, upon his arm is a basket of the fruits of the season, and in his right hand is the sign Cancer, the Crab—on the 21st of this month the sun enters Cancer, and makes the summer solstice.

JULY, the seventh month of the year, was so named from the Latin word Julius, the surname of Caesar, who was born in this month.

Mark Antony first gave this month the name of July, in honor of his illustrious friend Julius Caesar; before which time it was called Quintilis as being the fifth month of the (Roman) year, as had been established by Romulus.

July is represented by a young man in a light jacket eating cherries, with his face and bosom sunburnt; on his head is a wreath of wild thyme; a sythe on his shoulders, a bottle at his girdle, and at his side the sign Leo, the Lion.

July, by the Saxons, was called Haymonat; that is the Hay month, because in this month they usually made their hay. The sun enters the sign Leo on the 23d of this month.

AUGUST, the eighth month of the year, was dedicated to the honor of Augustus Caesar, because in this month he was created consul, triumphed three times in Rome, subjected Egypt to the power of the Romans, and put an end to the civil wars.

This month is characterized by a young man of a fierce and cheerful countenance, with a flame-colored garment; upon his head a garland of wheat and rye; upon his arm a basket of ripe fruits; at his belt, a sickle; and at his side, the sign Virgo, the Virgin. The sun enters Virgo on the 23d of this month.

SEPTEMBER, in the Roman calendar was so called from the Latin word Septem seven, which by the Romans was reckoned the seventh month of the year; but in the present almanac, it is the ninth month from the beginning of the year.

This month is represented by a young man dressed in purple, of a merry and cheerful countenance, upon his head a wreath of white and purple grapes; under his left arm a bundle of oats; in his right a cornucopia of the ripe fruits of the season—as pears, peaches, &c.; and in his right hand the sign Libra, the Balance.

He is dressed in purple, being reckoned the prince of the months, by producing a copious provision of all the necessities of life.

This month was, for some time called Germanicus, from the emperor of that name; and September, from being the seventh after March. The sun enters Libra on the 23d of this month.

OCTOBER, the tenth month in order from January, derives its name in the same manner as the preceding month, from Octo, eight, being the eighth month from March in the Roman calendar.

This month is represented by a young man dressed in a garment of yellow and carnation; upon his head a garland of oak leaves and acorns; in one hand he holds a basket of medlars, mushroom and chestnuts, with other fruits that ripen at this time of the year; in the other sign scorpion.

The garment is painted in these colors—a kind of chestnut, because the sun declining in the winter solstice, the juices of the plants begin to shrink, and their leaves become of this tint.

This month, for a time was called Domitian, from the emperor of that name, but afterwards was cancelled by a decree from the Roman senate. The sun enters the sign Scorpio on the 23d of this month.

NOVEMBER, the eleventh month of the year, is so called from its being the ninth month from March in the Roman calendar; and the following month is so named from its being the tenth from March; from the Latin words novem, nine, and decem, ten.

This month is represented by a young man, whose drapery is the color of the leaves when they begin to fall; round his head is a garland of olives with the fruit; in his left hand bunches of parsnips and turnips, signifying the products of this month; and in his right hand is the sign Sagittarius, the Archer.

The garland of olives is a sign of their maturity, and the time of their being gathered.—The sun enters Sagittarius on the 22d of this month.

November is generally said to be the most gloomy month of the year.

DECEMBER, the twelfth and last month of the year, was so named by Romulus in the Roman calendar, which means there the tenth and last month of the Roman year.

This month is characterized by an old man, with an austere and fearful aspect, clad in an Irish rug, or coarse frieze, girt upon him; upon his head no garland, but three or four night-caps, and over them a Turkish turban; his nose red; his mouth and beard clogged with icicles; at his back is a bundle of holly, ivy, or mistletoe; and holding in furred mittens a hatchet and the sign Capricornus, the Goat.

The hatchet is an emblem of the season, it being now the month for cutting down timber, as the virtue of trees at this time concentrates in the trunks, and for that reason, are more desirable for different purposes.

The earth at this season of the year is bereft of all its ornaments, and for this reason he is represented without a garland.

The sun enters the tropic of Capricorn on the 21st, and forms the winter solstice.

PAY YOUR DEBTS.

Religion that does not make a man honest is good for nothing. If a man professes to be a Christian, and defrauds his neighbor, that man's religion is vain. And he is dishonest who withholds from another that which is his due, when it is in his power to pay it.

We in this country, have acquired a bad name abroad from our state repudiations, but it is not this of which we wish to speak just now. It is of the laxness, not to call it by a harsher name, of many professors of religion, who seldom or never pay their debts until after being called upon again and again, and perhaps finally being threatened with a suit at law.—There are some such men in almost every community.

We have one of these men now in our eye. He is a very amiable, easy man, who never wishes to quarrel with his neighbors, and is always willing to do them a favor when they are in want of help. But he never pays his debts if he can avoid it. His bills at the store, at the shops of mechanics, perhaps for the food which he eats or the raiment he wears, are unpaid, and he feels not the least compunctions of conscience on the subject. He prays in his family and in the social meeting, and some people think he may be a christian; but men of the world say that if he would be honest, they would have a better opinion of his religion.

We see another debtor. He has no objection to buying anything that he can get upon trust; he will even subscribe for a religious newspaper, or a new edition of the Bible, and makes loud professions of his willingness to aid this object and that, but when called on to pay his subscription, he is unfortunately just then out of money, he will certainly pay it in a few days; but he is no more ready a month afterwards than he was before, and he never intends to pay. He pretends nevertheless to be a pious man, but he deceives very few.

Just now, we see another man of this always-owing and never-paying class. Some time ago, he contracted a large debt, and has never yet seen the time when he could pay the whole of it at once; and therefore he has paid none of it. His income has been such that he might, with a little economy and much self-denial, have paid a part of the debt every year, and by this time have extinguished it; but his conscience does not seem to trouble him at all, although he lies on that which does not belong to him.

Men may sophisticate as they please, they can never make it right, and all the bankrupt laws in the universe can never make it right, for them to neglect to pay their debts. There subject in the church that is perfectly irreconcilable with the law of God and the maintenance of a good reputation in the eyes of the world.

Let no man be trusted who neglects to pay his debts. If misfortune has suddenly deprived him of the ability to pay, that is another thing; but if by his conduct he shows that he has no disposition to meet his engagements, especially small debts, let him not be trusted. He that is unjust in a little, will be unjust in much. He who defrauds will steal, and there is scarcely no difference in stealing and wilfully neglecting to discharge a debt.—New York Observer.

A YANKEE SHOEMAKER.

'You hain't no occasion for a jir, nor nothing, I s'pose,' said a jolly son of St. Crispin from the land of wooden nutmegs, as he entered a shoe establishment, with his kit nicely done up in his apron.

'Wouder if I hain't,' was the reply of the Boss, 'why, I should like a dozen if I could get 'em, but what kind of a shoe can you make?'

'O as to the matter o' that,' said the snob, 'I reckon I can make a decent sort of a craft.' 'Spread your kit then,' said the Boss; 'I'll give you a pair to try, and if your work suits I can give you a steady seat of work.'

Crispin was soon at it hammering and whistling away as happy as a clam at high water, and the Boss was called away on some business which detained him two or three hours—meanwhile the tamping jer had produced a thing which bore some faint resemblance to a shoe, and feeling somewhat ashamed of it hid it in a pile of leather chips that lay on the floor, and proceeded to make another which he had barely time to finish, when his employer entered and began to examine it.

'Look here, mister,' said he, 'I guess you needn't make the mate to this; it is the greatest botch that ever was made in my shop, that's a fact.'

'Praps you'd like to bet a trifle on that said the snob.

'Bet,' responded the Boss, 'why I'll bet a ten dollar bill against a hand of tobacco that there never was a shoe made in this shop half so bad as this.'

'Done,' says Crispin, at the same time casting a sly wink at his shopmates, 'but stop, let me see if I've got so much of the weed with me. Oh yes, here's a whole hand of Cavendish,' and laying it on the cutting board, he ventured to suggest the propriety of having the snob skin laid along side of it, which was no sooner done, than he proceeded to draw from its hiding place the other shoe.

'Here boss,' said he, 'you must decide the bet; say which of the two shoes is the worst.' 'Well, I guess I'm fairly sucked in this time,' replied the Boss, pushing the Cavendish and shin-plaster towards the rightful owner, and throwing a nincompo to the youngest apprentice. The boy needed no further instruction as to his duty, but was off in the twinkling of a bed-post, and soon returned with a quart of blackstrap. After all hands had sufficiently regaled themselves, the shrewd yankee put his sticks together, and bidding the boss a hearty good bye, started again on tramp, very well satisfied with his forenoon's work.

A MAN WITH AN APPETITE.

It is related of a Frenchman, one of nine brothers, all remarkable for their appetites, who was taken a prisoner, that he was allowed the rations of ten men daily, which could not quiet his voracious craving for food. The truth of this statement is corroborated by many respectable persons who were present on a day appointed to witness the quantity of food he would eat, and the effects produced. The following is the quantity consumed in twelve hours, and he yet was requesting more, which was refused:—Cow's row udder, four pounds; solid beef, raw, ten pounds; tallow candles, two pounds; total of solids, sixteen pounds; and five bottles of porter.

When he was with the French army, and much distressed for food, he used to eat daily five or six pounds of grass; but vegetables, and even bread, in general did not agree with him.

The diet which he preferred, and which also appears most grateful to his constitution, was entirely animal; and that raw. When in those situations in which he could not be supplied with wholesome provisions, he would eat live cats, dogs, and rats; of the former, he was known to have eaten one hundred and seventy-four in one year. In the English prisons such a shameful practice was not long suffered.

It is surprising that, with this enormous appetite and savage mode of gratifying it, his manners were amiable, and he was universally liked among his fellow prisoners, and in general very lively and active.

His skin was of the usual temperature, his pulse generally about eighty, his eyes were clear and bright, his tongue clean, and his stools natural. He had enjoyed one uninterrupted series of perfect health from a child, and his uncommon feeding never interrupted him during the day, and was so far from rendering him dull, that after he had eaten, he retired with his companions to spend the evening in dancing.

He generally went to bed at eight o'clock, and immediately perspired intensely. About one o'clock he usually awoke very hungry, and would eat the residue of his day's provisions, and would again sleep, and violently perspire till he arose in the morning early, when the perspiration left him; and if he could procure a few pounds of raw flesh to satisfy his immediate craving, he was perfectly easy. As a proof of his strength and activity, he had frequently carried a load of three hundred weight to a considerable distance, and when in the army he has marched fourteen leagues with all his military appointments.

The herring business in Weymouth, last year, amounted to six hundred dollars and upwards.

TEMPERANCE CELEBRATION.

Mr. GREEN.—Permit me, through the columns of your paper, to congratulate the Young Ladies of Quincy, that some few of the members of the Young Men's Washington Total Abstinence Society of Quincy, had the moral courage, spirit, and patriotism, to attend the Temperance Celebration in the City of Boston, on Thursday of last week, and of joining in the GRAND and most MAGNIFICENT procession ever formed in the cause of Temperance, thereby representing their Society, and displaying the beautiful Banner, which the Young Ladies presented to them, as a testimony of their regard for the temperance cause, (which, by the way, was not inferior to any that we saw which have been presented by the ladies to any of the societies.) While we are congratulating the young ladies of Quincy, we feel that a compliment is justly due to the Artist, Mr. ALONZO SOMERBY, of Boston, who executed the painting and lettering of the Banner in a style that must convince every beholder that he is a superior workman in his profession, and deserves the patronage of the public. A.

ANTI SLAVERY MEETINGS.

Mr. EDITOR.—The New England Anti Slavery Convention assembled in the spacious Marlboro' Chapel, on Tuesday morning of anniversary week, and adjourned on Friday evening about eleven o'clock. The interest in the meetings continued to increase; on Friday evening the galleries were thronged with a vast multitude. A splendid Banner was presented by the Convention to the American Society, having for its motto, 'No Union with Slave Holders.' A resolution, declaring it to be inconsistent for an abolitionist to take any part in the government under the present Constitution, was discussed and occupied the principal part of the time on Tuesday and Wednesday. The speakers in the affirmative were C. C. Burleigh, Frederick Douglass, Charles L. Remond, Abby Kelly, W. L. Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Henry Clapp, Jr.; and in the negative, Amasa Walker, Jr., Walter Channing, John Pierpont, G. W. F. Mellen and others. On Friday, at twelve o'clock, all persons were invited to enroll their names as members of the Convention, and the vote on the resolution was taken by yeas and nays, the number was large; I should think about three fourths voted in favor of the resolution.

The Massachusetts Abolition Society, composed of Liberty Party men, held their annual meeting in Tremont Temple. I went to their business meeting a few minutes, and saw about twenty-five or thirty persons present. This society succeeded from the Massachusetts Anti Slavery Society in 1840, in order to draw in the ministers of New England who were opposed to Mr. Garrison as a leader.

But one of the principal charges brought against the old Society, was, that it allowed women the same privilege as members that it did men, (the Constitution reading, 'all persons,') therefore, they called it a Woman's Rights' Society.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1844.

John A. Green, Editor.

OLD COLONY RAIL ROAD. This project, we are happy to learn, meets with encouragement from all sections, en route. Most of the stock has already been taken up, and from present indications, we are warranted in the opinion, that the work will be completed for the accommodation of travel from Boston to this village late in autumn of the present year.

GRAND 'LIBERTY' CELEBRATION. The friends of 'Liberty' in the towns of Braintree, Randolph, Weymouth, and Quincy, in favor of maintaining and defending the principles so nobly asserted in the Declaration of Independence, that 'all men are born free and equal, with the inalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness,' propose celebrating the 4th of July next, with appropriate exercises, at Braintree. Some of the most popular speakers are engaged for addresses on that occasion. Tickets for a dinner or a picnic will soon be issued.

AGES OF THE CANDIDATES. James K. Polk, the democratic candidate for President, was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, on the 23d of November 1795, and therefore is now in the forty-ninth year of his age.

George M. Dallas, the candidate for Vice President, was born on the 10th of July, 1792, and is therefore in the fifty-second year of his age.

THE PRIZE BANNER. The beautiful banner presented to the Washingtonian Mass Convention by Moses Kimball, Esq. of the Boston Museum, with the design of having it given to the County having the largest delegation in the procession, has been awarded to Norfolk County, and has been presented by Miss Adelaide Phillips, with an appropriate address, to the Rev. Edwin Thompson, President of the Norfolk Washington Total Abstinence Society.

BOAT FOUND. Capt. John Hardwick, of the sloop Levi Bates, from Quincy, while beating up Boston harbor, on Saturday morning last, discovered the topmast of a sunken boat, near Bird Island. He succeeded in rising the hull, and found she was a small lap-streak pleasure boat, painted green, schooner rigged, both masts standing, with the foremast set; she was heavily ballasted, and had her stern stove. Capt. Hardwick thought from her appearance she had been run into.

GRANITE ENGINE, COMPANY, No. 3.

Foreman—Edward M. Page.
First Assistant—John A. Simpson.
Second Assistant—Phineas G. Sanborn.
Clerk and Treasurer—Charles L. Badger.
Steward—Stephen F. Fowler.
Standing Committee—William D. Gray, Reuben Ricker, Horace Johnson.
Suction Hosemen—Edward T. Dexter, James Bachelder, Ezra L. C. Badger.
Leading Hosemen—John C. Underwood, Jeremiah D. Sanborn, Luther Knox, David Thayer, Quincy A. Dyer, Luther Ela, Joseph Johnson, Benjamin F. Savil.

MACKEREL. Some of the fishing vessels belonging to Hingham, we learn from the Patriot of that place, have arrived with good fares; the highest fare brought in by any one is one hundred and eighty-three barrels—lowest eighty. About one thousand barrels in all have been packed. This is the first time for ten years that mackerel have been brought into that place so early in the season, and with so good success.

THE VICE PRESIDENCY. The Hon. Silas Wright of New York, having declined the nomination for the Vice Presidency, tendered him by the National Democratic Convention, the Hon. GEORGE M. DALLAS of Pennsylvania, was unanimously elected by that body to supply the vacancy. He has accepted the nomination.

HOMICIDE. Last Saturday afternoon, a laborer had some altercation in Boston with a teamster employed in the lead works of Roxbury, about the pay for work in loading a wagon. The laborer seized one of the horses by the head to stop the team. The teamster exasperated at this step, took a short thick oak stake from his wagon, and struck the laborer once upon the arm and twice over the head. With the last blow he fell and remained senseless till his death, which took place the next morning.

He was over forty-five years of age, and has left a wife and five children. The teamster is said to be a man very much respected and beloved by his friends and acquaintances, and the last man to commit a deliberate murder.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS. Both houses of Congress have voted to adjourn on the seventeenth of the present month.

SENTENCE OF THE LARNEDS. Abijah and Jeremiah, for robbing the Milbury Bank, (Mass.) have been sentenced to imprisonment in the State Prison, the first for ten years, and the other, who is younger, for five years; James is allowed a new trial.

FOREIGN ARRIVAL. The steamship Caledonia arrived at Boston, on Saturday last, bringing little intelligence of general interest. The case of O'Connell and others remain in the same state as reported by previous arrivals.

UNPARALLELED BARBARITY. A man and his wife, in Hartford, (Conn.) have recently been tried on two complaints for assault and battery on a little girl seven or eight years old, who had been bound out to them by the selectmen of a town in the vicinity. It appeared from the testimony, that she had been most shockingly abused by the wife, who had resorted to a system of torture worthy only of the barbarous ages. The girl testified that the ends of her fingers had been dreadfully pinched with a pair of pinchers, taking off the nails as a punishment, and her toes and fingers which were exhibited to the court, showed the very marks of the pinchers, as did also her tongue, which was much swollen and discolored. Her body from head to foot, exhibited marks of the whip in almost innumerable stripes, and wales as large as the finger. Both of them were sentenced on each of the complaints to thirty days imprisonment in the work-house, and a fine of seven dollars and costs. The cold-hearted tyrants that could inflict such cruelties upon poor defenceless orphan must possess a spirit worthy of a Nero.

A wen, weighing two pounds and three quarters, and measuring over two feet in circumference, was recently taken from the back of a man in New Jersey. The operation lasted eight minutes. The man is doing well.

The citizens of New Orleans have obtained the privilege of lighting the city of Havana with gas. A company has already been formed, and the work will commence with activity in October next.

A single manufactory in the city of New York, makes, furnishes, and sells, every week, one thousand clocks, all good, and as it is said, 'keeping excellent time.'

Ex-Chancellor James Kent of New York, has written a letter, in which, without giving the reasons of his opinion, he says that there is ample matter in the late official proceedings of President Tyler, relating to the annexation of Texas, for impeaching him, and that it is the duty of the House of representatives to institute the process.

It is stated in the papers, that Doollittle, of the City Tavern, Brattle Street, Boston, has given up the sale of intoxicating drinks.

Father Matthew, the Irish apostle in the cause of temperance, is not coming to this country this season.

The Missouri papers give doleful accounts of the ravages of the cut worm in that region. These crawling pests move in armies, and cut off near the root every species of vegetation, laying waste acres upon acres.

The British Government are about to send three steamships of war to the coast of Africa for the more effectual suppression of the slave trade.

The Worcester (Mass.) Spy thinks that the name of John Quincy Adams ought to be placed at the head of the Whig Electoral Ticket for Massachusetts.

Bishop Andrew, whose case has been so long under consideration by the Methodist General Conference, has finally, by a vote of one hundred and ten to sixty-eight, been suspended from the exercise of his official functions, because he has become connected with slavery by marriage.

In Williamsburg, (N. Y.) a bank of earth, beneath which several little girls were playing, caved in upon them, causing the death of six, and severely wounding another.

Watch against the practice of leaving portions of food on the plates or throwing them about, which begets a habit of wastefulness highly pernicious.—'Waste not, want not,' is a good proverb, and should be kept in mind.

It is calculated that the motive power of the cat-act of Niagara is forty-fold that of all the water and steam power used in Great Britain, and would be more than sufficient to move all the machinery in the world.

On the completion of the Long Island Railroad, the whole route between New York and Boston may be travelled in little more than eight hours thus:—Long Island Railroad, ninety-five miles—three and a half hours; across the Sound, twenty-four miles—one hour and three quarters; Stonington to Boston, eighty-nine miles—three hours—whole distance, eight and a quarter hours.

There have been fourteen Presidential terms since the Constitution took effect, and the whole number of persons who have received votes for President, is twenty-one, averaging one and a half for each term. Of these twenty-one, more than one half (eleven) have been voted for in the last five elections.

Testimony of an eminent Chemist in favor of PARR'S LIFE PILLS, by John Dale, Esq. Lecturer on Chemistry, and pupil of the celebrated D. Dalton, F. R. S. &c. &c.

MANCHESTER, Dec. 7. 1841.
To T. Roberts & Co. 9 Crane Court, Fleet st. London.

GENTLEMEN:—At the request of several friends who have introduced Parr's Life Pills into their families as a medicine, I have submitted them to a strict chemical analysis, in order to ascertain whether they contained any of those active mercurial preparations now so commonly introduced into many advertised medicines. I beg to say, that I find them worthy of being recommended to the public, for their efficacy and simplicity, and, as stated by the proprietors, to be really Vegetable Pills, containing, as they do, nothing but what is of vegetable origin.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN DALE, Analytical Chemist.

Road Notice.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk:—

THE subscribers respectfully represent, that the road leading from the store of J. & A. Tirrell, in Weymouth, to Hingham, is in many places too narrow and inconvenient for travellers to pass each other with carriages, and is circuitous, and the distance between the above places increased thereby—that public convenience and necessity requires that said road be altered in many places, by making the same wider—that the same be amended by lowering the hills and filling up the valleys—and that sundry parts of new roads within said distance be located and built to shorten the distance and straighten the existing road—that said alterations and new roads will pass through the lands of the following persons, viz:—Lemuel Lovell, James Humphrey, Albert Joyce, Betsey Bates George Dyer, Nathan Canterbury, heirs of Josiah Bates, deceased, Alvah Raymond, Rev. Mr. Stickney, Weymouth Iron Company, Ezra Tirrell, Urban Rice, Stephen French, Ebenezer Whitman Dean, James Bicknell, Widow Ford, Cyrus Washburn, Alexander Blanchard, Samuel French, heirs of Josiah Rice, deceased, Stephen Burdett, heirs of Matthew B. #### Road Notice.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk:—

THE subscribers respectfully represents, that the road leading from the store of J. & A. Tirrell, in Weymouth, to Hingham, is in many places too narrow and inconvenient for travellers to pass each other with ease, and is circuitous, and the distance between the above places increased thereby—that public convenience and necessity requires that said road be widened in many places, by making the same wider—that the same be amended by lowering the hills and filling up the valleys—and that sundry parts of the road within said distance be located and built to shorten the distance and straighten the existing road—that said alterations and new roads will pass through the lands of the following persons, viz:—Lemuel Lovell, James Humphrey, Albert Torrey, Betsey Bates, George Dyer, Nathan Camerbury, heirs of Josiah Bates, deceased, Abner Raymond, Rev. Mr. Stickney, Weymouth Iron Company, Ezra Tirrell, Urban Rice, Stephen French, Ebenezer Whitman Dean, James Bicknell, Widow Ford, Cyrus Washington, Alexander Blandford, Samuel French, heirs of Josiah Rice, deceased, Stephen Barrett, heirs of Matthew Pratt, deceased, Gilman Barrett, Asa Holbrook, Joseph Hawes, heirs of James Pratt, deceased, Horatio B. Loud, Oliver B. Shaw, David Holbrook, Leobodus Holbrook, A. Salisbury, John Dyer, Jr., William Young, John Dyer, Pease Young, David Holbrook, 2d, heirs of Jacob Holbrook, deceased, Silas White, Jason Holbrook, Joseph Torrey, Eliza Bates, John C. Cobb, Ezra Reed, the heirs of James Vining, deceased, the heirs of John Holbrook, deceased, Ezra Reed, Joseph Torrey, Noah Torrey, heirs of Dr. James Torrey, deceased, John G. Rogers, Quincy Reed, Miss Rebecca Ripley, Seth Curtis Jr., Charles A. Wright, Seth Curtis, Christopher S. Bass, Garvill R. Jones, David A. Reed, Danforth Jacobson, Eben B. Joy, David Joy, William Loud, John Pratt, Israel Fearing, J. & A. Tirrell, Calvin Joy, Franklin Wilds, Lyander Hollis, John Dyer, Minot Tirrell. They therefore pray that a view of said road may be had, and that this same may be altered, amended, and located, agreeably to the authority vested in you, and that your order will ever prevail.

Boston, April 6. 1f

THE citizens of Quincy and other towns in the vicinity, who have not as yet favored us with their patronage, are requested to call at the CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT, over the Quincy Market, Boston.

We are prepared to exhibit the most extensive stock of

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, VESTINGS & READY MADE CLOTHING,

ever offered to the public. Every one is aware that there is not so large a place of business in the city as our

Hall, and it is literally crammed full of the most desirable and FASHIONABLE GOODS of the season.

We shall continue on the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, and shall endeavor to give satisfaction to all.

Some have the impression that we keep nothing besides fancy goods and ready made, or top top, as they call it, but we assure the public that we shall keep both coarse and fine clothing—ready made and custom made—so as to accommodate all classes of community, and that, too, at the very lowest prices—for instance, White OVERHAULS, 37 1/2 cts. Blue and other colors 50 cts., GREEN JACKETS, lined throughout, from $1 to $1.50, Sattinets, Canada Gray, etc., etc.

All our custom work shall be in superior style; in fact, we do not intend that any description of Garment shall be called for, that we have not on hand at the lowest prices. Anticipating a heavy shower of patronage we have spread out accordingly. Please call, before purchasing, at the

POETRY.

THE POOR MAN'S EVENING HYMN.

God of the poor man! hear us,
Thou giver of all good!
At this our meal be near us—
Bless, bless our humble food!
We have been toiling through the day,
Sleep hangs upon each brow!
But through the dim night hear us pray,
Look down and bless us now!

God of the poor man! heed us,
And thus on bended knee,
For all thou hast decreed us,
We praise and glory Thee!
Thy hands that made the wealthy,
Unmake them at thy will;
They made us strong and healthy,
May we remain so still!

God of the poor man! listen
To those whose all is gone,
To those whose eyelids glisten
With sorrow deep and lone!
Oh! answer, we beseech Thee,
Their broken, anguish'd pray'r;
Let their dark woes first reach thee,
Then beam on us now here!

God of the poor man! lowly
His heart with love doth beat;
He hath no gift more holy
To deck Thy mercy seat!
Take it, Our Father! though it be
Shaded with earthly sin;
Nought else hath he to offer Thee—
Up! make it right within!

God of the poor man! shining
Amidst his little cot,
Though fortune be declining,
With Thee, how bright his lot!
Guard now the night before us—
Let quiet slumber come;
Spread, spread Thy mantle o'er us,
And bless the poor man's home!

A WARNING.

"He standeth at the door and knocketh."
In the silent midnight watches,
List—thy bosom-door!
How it knocketh, knocketh, knocketh—
Knocketh evermore!
Say not 'tis thy pulse's beating:
'Tis thy heart of sin;
'Tis thy Saviour knocks and crieth
'Rise, and let me in!'

Death comes down, with reckless footstep,
To the hall and hut:
Think you death will tarry knocking,
Where the door is shut?
Jesus waiteth, waiteth, waiteth—
But the door is fast;
Grieved, away the Saviour goeth;
Death breaks in at last!

Then 'tis time to stand entreating
Christ to let thee in;
At the gate of heaven beating,
Waiting for thy sin;
Nay! alas thou guilty creature!
Hast thou then forgot?
Jesus waited long to know thee,
Now he knows thee not!

MARRIAGE.

The hard has sung God never formed a soul
Without his own peculiar mate, to meet
His wandering half, when ripe to crown the whole
Bright plan of bliss, most heavenly, most complete!
But thousand evil things there are that hate
To lock on happiness: these hurt, impede,
And 'argued with time, space, circumstances, and ate,
Keep kindred heart from heart, to pine and pant and bleed.

And as the dove to far Palmyra flying,
From where her native founts of Antioch beam,
Weary, exhausted, longing, pining, sighing,
Lights sadly at the desert's bitter stream;
So many a soul, o'er life's dear desert faring,
Love's pure congenial spring unfound, unquaffed,
Suffers, recoils, then, thirsty and despairing
Of what it would, descends and sips the nearest draught.

ANECDOTES.

While a monitor was hearing a boy recite his lesson, the following passage occurred: "The wages of sin is death." The monitor, wishing to get "wages" out by deduction asked—What does your father get on Sunday night? The boy answered, "He gets drunk."

A lady, lately, who had been scolding her lover for wearing whiskers, nevertheless gave him the usual kiss on his leaving her. "Oh, you can kiss me, then," said the swain, "for all I have these odious whiskers?" "To be sure," was the reply, "you know I set my face against such things."

A dandy wishing to be witty, accosted the old bell-man as follows: "You take all sorts of trumpery in your cart, don't you?" "Yes—jump in, jump in!"

As one of the children in a school was reading from the Epistle of Paul to the Romans, he came to the verse in which Paul says—"I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise," whereupon a small boy, his eyes flashing with intelligence, jumped up and sung out—"I say, master, why don't he go into Chancery—father did—Judge—"

Hush, Ben, sit down. The Judge did not flourish when Paul did. Read on the next.

The wife of a studious man went into his library whether he was reading, and wished that she was a book, for then he would be more attentive to her. "I wish you were an almanac," said he, "because then I should have a new one every year."

Dr. Louis Kurtz.

RESPECTFULLY informs the afflicted and the public in general, that he has, on account of the great increase of business, removed his Infirmary to the spacious dwelling house

NO 64 CAMBRIDGE STREET, BOSTON, where he may be consulted gratis, and with the utmost confidence, in French, German or English.

Thankful for the liberal patronage the public have bestowed upon him for the last three years, he solicits its continuance, assuring them that he shall do all in his power to make himself worthy of it.

Dr. K. has had during his sojourn at the hospitals of Leipzig, (Germany,) Paris, (France,) and for the last three years in this country, a very extensive practice, and is confident of being able to give entire satisfaction to the following complaints, viz:—

Scrophulous Humor, Sore Legs, Spine Complaint, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Cough, Consumption, Dropsy, Mercurial Affection, White Swelling on the knee, etc., etc.

In diseases of a private nature, (maladies secretes,) Dr. Kurtz is acknowledged to be surpassed by no physician in this country, and warrants a perfect cure in from three to ten days, according to the stage of the disease.

Dr. Louis Kurtz would respectfully call the attention of invalids to the following valuable remedies, viz:—

German Anti-Mercurial Panacea. This medicine has been pronounced by the faculty of Leipzig, (Germany,) a sure and perfect cure, when that deadly poison, Mercury, has been immoderately used. Price $1 per bottle—six bottles safely packed in a small box, $5.00.

German Tonic Mixture—an excellent remedy for dyspepsia. Price $1.00—six bottles $5.00.

German Tonic and Diuretic Pills—a sure and perfect cure for Fluor Albus, (Whites.) Price $1.00 per box—six boxes $5.00.

German Renovating Mixture or Female Monthly Pills. The above named medicines have been pronounced by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe, the only sure and safe remedies for suppression, stoppage, etc., and since their introduction into this country, several thousand bottles and boxes have been used, and given entire satisfaction. Price $2.00 per box or bottle—given entire satisfaction.

Dr. L. Kurtz pays particular attention to all Female Complaints, in the treatment of which he has had much experience and great success.

Doctor L. Kurtz est consulte, gratis, en francais, allemand, et anglais.

Dr. L. Kurtz gibt freie consultationen in deutscher, franzoesischer und englischer Sprache.

Office hours from 8 A. M. until 9 P. M. Letters promptly attended to and strict secrecy observed.

DR. BUTLER,
NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevails to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the fulsome description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sexes, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Imprudences in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The completion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician.
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

SIR—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast fading upon me the worst of all human diseases in which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief.

About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.
Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy State Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health, as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great fatigues, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has restored me to health, I feel greatly invigorated, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,
IBRAHIM BARTLETT.
Quincy, May 2d, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House, Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum.

SIR—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of Sore Throat from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was left in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for relief from the same source, which I readily improved, and with gratification, since to the public this I have experienced that relief by the use of one bottle, which I so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

MISCELLANY.

THE HIGHWAYMAN.

Of all the wild and romantic sports of England, I know of none so striking as may be found lying between the Canton and Stoughton, in Norfolk Massachusetts. Taking the turnpike

Canton, and the little tavern known name of Punkabog, and immediately cending the hill, you enter into a for and wild as ever sheltered banditti of prey. The road winds through the distance of about five miles, before space of ground of any notable extent found, while its sides are closely lined trees, whose proximity often cause rattle roughly against the carriages at times the spreading branches, almost the way. A more 'Dick Turpin' hill can hardly be conceived. I have through the wood many times and at but never without having my imagination set to work, with thoughts of 'get the road,' and that very laconic and ry sentence—"Stand and deliver!"

I the spot, as mellow twilight casts its shadows, and though you may enjoy seclusion, you will find yourself inclining your horse the rein, and mayhap, a whip or spur besides.

One fine July afternoon in the y having received intelligence from Massachusetts, which demanded my ate personal attention, I started forth that place, taking for my conveyance horse and vehicle, determining to drive in the course of the afternoon.

After a pleasant ride, by the way of Hill Turnpike, a little more than a do I 'bailed' my horses at 'Cherry Tree' well known resort, and then continue towards Taunton by way of Stoughton.

MISCELLANY.

THE HIGHWAYMAN.

Of all the wild and romantic sports in New-England, I know of none so striking and real, as may be found lying between the towns of Canton and Stoughton, in Norfolk County, Massachusetts. Taking the turnpike road in Canton, and the little tavern known by the name of Punkabog, and immediately after ascending the hill, you enter into a forest dense and wild as ever sheltered banditti or beasts of prey. The road winds through the woods, the distance of about five miles, before an open space of ground of any notable extent can be found, while its sides are closely lined with forest trees, whose proximity often causes them to rattle roughly against the carriage tops, and at times the spreading branches almost impede the way. A more "Dick Turpin" like avenue can hardly be conceived. I have passed through the wood many times and at all hours, but never without having my imagination busily set to work, with thoughts of "gentlemen of the road," and that very laconic and pre-emptory sentence—"Stand and deliver." Drive over the spot, as mellow twilight casts her velvet shadows, and though you may enjoy the wild seclusion, you will find yourself inclined to give your horse the rein, and mayhap, little of the whip or spur besides.

One fine July afternoon in the year 1842, having received intelligence from Taunton, Massachusetts, which demanded my immediate personal attention, I started forthwith for that place, taking for my conveyance my own horse and vehicle, determining to make the drive in the course of the afternoon and evening. After a pleasant ride, by the way of Brush Hill Turnpike, a little more than a dozen miles, I baited "my horses at 'Cherry Tavern,' a well known resort, and then continued my way towards Taunton by way of Stoughton, when I proposed to pass a few moments, in a call upon a younger brother, then attending school in that town. I think the school was kept by a Mr. Tollman, who still resides in the same place, and I believe is similarly occupied.

It was a moonlight night, though a few clouds interspersed the sky, at intervals obscuring the light of the still summer night. I had just passed a point about midway between Punkabog and the farther extremity of the road, where a road, branching from the main road, leads still deeper into the forest, and was just rising to the summit of the hill, that forms the road at this point, when I was overtaken by a single horseman. As we reached the level together, he turned his horse and dismounted, seized the bridle rein of mine, directing me in a calm voice to stop. I drew up my horse, satisfied that I was about to realize one of the adventures, that had so often suggested themselves to me, as I had passed the lonely wood. His horse, as if aware of his master's purpose, stood like a statue when he had dismounted from him.

"You must know," said the man, "that there is but one errand a person can have, who stops another on the road in this manner, I want your money and must have it." This he spoke as calmly and with as little apparent emotion, as though the fellow was addressing a friend save that there was a determined look in his eye, that told he was a desperate man. As he spoke he unbuckled my reins from both sides of the bit, and then approached the steps of the vehicle. He was about the middle size, a dark complexioned man, prominent features, his eyes very dark and piercing. His dress consisted of a suit of dark broadcloth, the coat of rather a jockey cut, ornamented with dark metallic buttons.

Now as I am not a person to give up even in an argument without a pretty severe discussion, I was not, as the reader may suppose, one who would be inclined to give up my property merely for the asking.

I carefully examined the robber as he approached me, and satisfying myself that he had no weapons in his hands, for immediate use, my plan of action was instantly formed. Laying his hands upon the dasher of the chaise I was in, he said:

"Well, sir, you will oblige me by wasting as little time as possible. Just hand me the valuables about your person, and proceed quietly on your route."

I muttered something, intending to sound like justice, and words of like import, and half rising as if to get at the pocket of my coat, I sprang with the whole force of my body upon the man. He was utterly unprepared for this, and had evidently taken me for an easy prey, as he had not up to that time shown any weapons. As I have said, I sprang upon him, and we both came heavily to the ground. My first effort was to pinion his arms, nor was I a moment too quick in accomplishing my purpose, for as I bore down the right arm, it already contained a pistol, which at the same moment was discharged into the ground. Seeing that matters were thus desperate, I exerted my strength to the utmost. Fortunately I was much stronger and larger than the robber, whose head I was obliged to bruise severely, before he would yield in the least, and then only through exhaustion and pain.

My antagonist almost blind with the blood and dirt that covered his face, and faint from loss of blood, after much resistance, allowed me to confine his arms behind him, which I secured with my whip lash. My endeavors to lift him into the vehicle proved utterly fruitless, and I found that I must leave him on the road. In this dilemma I hardly knew what course to pursue. I had already lost nearly an hour of time, my business was highly important, besides it must be accomplished, and myself back again in Boston, so as to start for New York City the next afternoon, as I had already engaged passage in a sailing packet from the latter city for Europe.

The rough and hardened villain now became a suppliant, and begged, and promised, more than I can here relate. I disarmed him of a pair of pistols and a Spanish knife, the blade of which shut into the handle, or half of the weapon. Having done this, I took out my pocket-book, and showed the robber that had he succeeded in his murderous attempt, he would have reaped a harvest of ten dollars, and for this paltry sum he would have committed murder. I determined to leave the man to his own reflections, discovering, as I thought, symptoms of true regret in his speech.

Having his weapons in my possession and one of his pistols being loaded, as I first ascertained, I arranged my horse's harness, unbundled the robber, who was evidently suffering severely from his bruises, pointed to his horse for him to mount, which I saw him do, and take the branch road that led deeper into the forest. I drove quickly on my route, but not without often looking back, half expecting a second visit from my late antagonist. I hurried to my journey's end, transacted my business, and returned immediately to Boston. My way was by the woody road, but this time I was armed with the robber's weapons. I mentioned hastily to one or two of my confidential friends, that I had narrowly escaped being robbed, intending at a future time to relate the circumstances more fully, and immediately left the city for New York. I was soon careering over the heaving bosom of the broad ocean, in one of the noble Liverpool lines, that still "held their own," notwithstanding the application of steam had been made to navigation.

I passed about five years in Europe, during which time I visited almost every section of the continent. After many vicissitudes and enjoyments, which the traveller alone can experience, I returned to my native country and my home.

Not long after my return a few years since, a robbery was perpetrated on that part of Lynn turnpike, which crosses the lower marshes between that town and Chelsea, upon the person of a market man, who was returning home from the sale of his produce in the city. The description of the affair as it occurred, appeared in the papers of the day, and is doubtless familiar to my readers. The robber on this occasion discharged a pistol at the person whom he assailed, whose life was saved by the singular chance of the ball's striking a buckle, that secured the suspenders attached to his lower garments, and then glancing off from his person. After much excitement relative to this affair, such information was obtained as led to the detection of the highwayman, who was accordingly secured in prison.

The circumstances called to my mind a similar adventure of my own, an affair which had in a few eventful years been almost forgotten. In thinking over the matter, I experienced a strong desire to see the criminal, and accordingly visited him in his cell. In WALTON, the well-known highwayman, I discovered the robber whom I had by a singular coup de main overcome in the woods of Punkabog. The recognition was mutual, and it was with a strange wildness that he exclaimed:

"Have you come to bear witness against me?"

I held a long conversation with him, during which he related to me many incidents in his life, since we last met. Said he:

"Your lesson had well nigh succeeded in reclaiming me, but my habits were strong upon me, and you see me here."

Before his trial, and in fact immediately after my conversation with him in prison, I again embarked for Europe, and remained, after a business sojourn in its principal cities, until within a few months. I am again in my native land.

That WALTON paid the penalty of his crimes, is well known to all, but what has led me to the relation of my personal adventures with him, is somewhat singular. The matter had been forgotten by me, and perhaps would never again be recalled to me, had I not happened to drop in at a medical lecture, (one of the series now delivering in the city by Dr. Jones,) when the speaker exhibited not only the skull of WALTON, but also a book, bound in leather made from his skin!

Little did I think, when I unpinioned the arms of the highwayman, who could have taken my life, in the lonely woods between Canton and Stoughton, that I should live to see his life printed, and bound in his own skin!

THE DRUNKARD'S WIFE.

BY ELIHO BURRITT—THE LEARNED BLACKSMITH.

There are new developments of human character, which, like the light of distant stars are yet to visit the eye of man and operate upon human society. Ever since the image of the God-head was first sketched in Eden, its great Author and angels have been painting upon it; men have tried their hands upon it; influences, like the incessant breath of heaven, have left each its line upon the canvass; still the finishing stroke of the pencil will not be accomplished until the last, lingering survivor of the wreck of matter and the crush of worlds is changed in the twinkling of an eye.

The hemisphere of the present age is studded all over with such pearls and patines of bright gold, as never shone before in the heavens of the human soul. In these latter days, the waves of time have washed up from depths that angels never fathomed, "gems of purer light serene," than were ever won before in the crown of man. We are now but half way advanced in a new cycle of human history.—The race is but just emerging from the long reaching shadows of an iron age, and coming out into the starlight and sunlight of new influences. If, as we are assured, scores of new stars have taken rank with the heavenly hosts during the last two centuries, stars brighter than they, have, in the same period, kindled up new lights in the moral firmament. Among these new stars, one a little lower than that of Bethlehem, had just appeared above the horizon. It is the star of WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.—Influential woman is a being of scarcely two centuries: up to that period, and almost hitherto, her influences have fallen upon human character and society, like the feeble rays of a rising winter's sun upon polar fields of ice. But her sun is reaching upward. There is a glorious meridian to which she shall surely come as to-morrow's rising sun shall reach his in our natural heavens.—What man will be, when she shall shine upon him then and thence, we are unable to divine; but we can find an anticipation from the influences of her dawning rays. Her morning light has gilded the visions of human hope, and silvered over the night shadows of human sorrow. There has been no depth of human misery beyond the reach of her ameliorating influence, nor any height of human happiness which she has not raised still higher. Whoever has touched at either of these extremities, or at any of their intervening points, could attest that neither height nor depth, nor principalities nor powers, nor things present or to come, could divert or vitiate the accents and analogies of her love. Whether we trace the lineaments of her character in the mild twilight of her morning sun, or in the living beams of her risen day, we find that she has touched human society like an angel. It would be irreverent to her worth to say, in what walks of life she has walked most like an angel of love; in what vicissitudes, in what joys or sorrows, in what situations or circumstances, she has most signally discharged the heavenly ministrations of her mission; what ordeals have best brought out the radiance of her hidden jewels; what frictions of earthly bliss, or furnaces of affliction, have best declared the fineness of her gold.—Still there is a scene, which has escaped the "culture's eye," and almost every other eye, where she has cast forth her costliest pearls, and shown such qualities of her native character as almost merit our adoration. This scene has been allotted to the DRUNKARD'S WIFE.—How she has filled this most desperate outpost of humanity, will be revealed when the secrets of human life shall be disclosed "to more worlds than this." When the history of hovels, and of murky garrets shall be given in; when the career of the enslaved inebriate shall be told, from the first to the lowest degree of his degradation—there will be a memorial made of woman, worthy of being told and heard in heaven. From the first moment she gave up her young and hoping heart, and all its treasures into the hands of him she loved, to the luckless hour when the charmer, wine, fastened around that loved one, all the serpent spells of his sorcery,—down through all the crushing of her young born hopes,—through years of estrangement and strange insanity,—when harsh unkindness bit at her heartstrings with an adder's tooth—thence down through each successive depth of disgrace and misery, until she bent over the drunkard's grave;—through all these scenes, a halo of divinity has gathered around her, and stirred her to angel deeds of love. When the maddened victim tried to cut him adrift from the sympathy and society of God and man, she has clung to him and held him to her heart "with hooks of steel." And when he was cast out all defiled with his leprous pollution—when he was reduced to such a thing as the beasts of the fields would bellow at,—there was one who still kept him throned in her heart of hearts; who could say over the fallen, drivelling creature: "Although you are nothing to the world, you are all the world to me." When that awful insanity of the drunkard set in upon him, with all its fiendish shapes of torture; while he lay writhing beneath the scorpion stings of the fiery phantasies and furies of DELIRIUM TREMENS,—there was woman by his side, enslaved with all the attributes of her loveliness. There was her tearful love-beaming eye, that never dimmed but with tears when the black spirits were at him. There she stood alone, and in lone hours of night, to watch his breathings, with her heart braced with the omnipotence of her love. No! brute as he was not a tie which her young heart had thrown around him in his bright days, had ever given away, but had grown stronger as he approached the nadir of his degradation. And if he sank into that dark, hopeless grave, she ensnathed him in her broken heart, and laid it in his coffin; or if some mighty angel's arm or voice brought him up from the grave of drunkenness, the deepest ever dug for man, he came forth Lazarus-like, bound fast and forever within the ceremonies of her deathless affection.

Such is her sceptre; such are the cords which she throws around the wayward and wandering, and leads him back to virtue and to heaven, saying, as she gives him in, "Here am I and he whom thou gavest me."

THE MATRIMONIAL CREED.

Whosoever will be married, before all things it is necessary that he hold the conjugal faith; and the conjugal faith is this: That there were two rational beings created, both equal, and yet one superior to the other; and the inferior shall bear rule over the superior; which faith, except every one keep whole and undefiled, without doubt, he shall be scolded everlastingly.

The man is superior to the woman and the woman is inferior to the man; yet both are equal, and the woman shall govern the man.

The woman is commanded to obey the man, and the man ought to obey the woman; and yet there are not two obediences, but one obedience.

For there is one dominion nominal of the husband, and another dominion real of the wife; and yet there are not two dominions, but one dominion.

For, like as we are compelled by the christian verity to acknowledge, that wives must submit themselves to their husbands, and be subject to them in all things; so are we forbidden by the conjugal faith to say, that they should be at all influenced by their wills, or pay regard to their commands.

The man was not created for the woman, but the woman for the man; yet the man shall be the slave of the woman, and the woman the tyrant of the man.

So that in all things, as aforesaid, the subjection of the superior to the inferior is to be believed.

He, therefore, that will be married, must thus think of the woman and the man.

Furthermore, it is necessary to submissive matrimony, that he also believe rightly the infallibility of the wife.

For the right faith is, that we believe and confess, that the wife is fallible and infallible; perfectly fallible and perfectly infallible; fallible, as touching her human nature; and infallible, as touching her female sex.

Who, although she be fallible and infallible, yet she is not two, but one woman; who submitted to lawful marriage to acquire unlawful dominion; and promised religiously to obey, that she might rule with uncontrolled sway.

This is the conjugal faith; which, except a man believe faithfully, he cannot be married.

A SOLEMN SCENE. The funeral of the six children who were so suddenly killed by the caving in of a bank of earth at Williamsburg, (N. Y.) took place in that town, and the ceremonies were solemn and imposing.

Finding that no building would be sufficiently large to contain the audience, a temporary stage was erected, where appropriate ceremonies were performed; after which the procession moved to the Methodist burying ground, in the following order.—Clergymen of various denominations; corpses borne on biers by youths from ten to fourteen years of age; mourners in carriages and on foot; scholars of the Sabbath schools to which four of the deceased children belonged; scholars of the various schools of that village; then came citizens in carriages and on foot; the whole procession being flanked on either side by citizens and strangers, large numbers of whom were from Brooklyn and New York. The procession could not have numbered less than five thousand. As the six little girls died so they were buried—all in one common grave or vault. A grave was dug sufficiently wide to admit three coffins side by side; this was lined with thick plank, and the three larger coffins placed at the bottom with the three smaller ones above.

The Episcopal service was read at the grave. All the clergymen of that place, eight in number, were present.

The names and ages of the children are as follows:—Harriet, Abigail and Mary, aged eleven, six, and two years—daughters of Lewis Jones, a very worthy man; Martha, daughter of George Darlington, aged about six years; Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Paul, aged eleven years, and Harriet N. Rand, whose father is not living. The one who was saved, aged about ten, though badly hurt, is recovering, and is likely to survive. Since she has so far recovered as to be able to converse, she relates the accident as follows:—Her six playmates were sitting in a circle partly under an overhanging mass of earth, and she was on the side or top of it; observing an opening before her, she attempted to step over it, when the earth gave way from beneath her and buried those below. Another mass above her giving way almost instantaneously, buried her also.—Harriet, the eldest daughter of Mr. Jones, was found with her younger sister in her arms.—Possibly she saw her danger and vainly attempted to escape with or to protect the little one, with that beautiful female instinct so frequently illustrated in scenes of danger.

It is in contemplation to raise by voluntary subscription a sum sufficient to erect a suitable monument over the grave of the six little innocents, who have been so suddenly taken from their doting parents and friends.

AN OUTLAW KILLED. The New York Sun states that the people of Orange County, in that State, have been frequently alarmed within the past two years by a company of freebooters who infested the mountains around West Point, and often committed the most daring robberies. The leader of the band, an athletic young scoundrel, aged about twenty-one years, had his retreat upon the top of Shonemok Mountain, where he concealed his plunder and dissipated with his companions. The band gradually increased in strength and boldness, when, in conformity with a reward of fifty dollars offered by the Sheriff for the leader's body, a company of seventy or a hundred men sallied out with arms to take him. He fled to a high range of woodland, whither he was pursued and surrounded. Two young men discovered him in a thicket, when he presented one of his large horse pistols at one of them, but the pistol did not go off; and as he was preparing to fire a second time, the other person levelled his rifle and shot the daring outlaw through the head, killing him instantly.

IMMENSE MANUFACTURING OPERATIONS. The Preston (Eng.) Guardian mentions the erection of a gigantic power-loom shed, said to be the largest in the world. It is described as follows: The shed is three hundred and fifty feet in length by one hundred and eighty-seven in breadth, divided into thirty-six bays. The roof is supported by three hundred and fifty-two columns. It is calculated to contain one thousand six hundred and

RESPONSE MEETING.

Pursuant to notice, an enthusiastic meeting of the democrats was held at Columbia Hall, in Weymouth, on the 6th inst., and was organized by the choice of Col. John W. Thomas as President, and Gen. F. A. Kingsbury, Dr. David Torrey, Benjamin Tirrell, Eri T. Joy, and Lovell Bicknell, Esqs., as Vice Presidents, and Martin Derby and Noah Vining, Jr., Secretaries.

The president on taking the chair briefly stated the object of the meeting, and eloquently responded to the nomination of Polk and Dallas, and urged the importance of energetic action.

On motion, a committee consisting of Edmund Thomas, Esq., Dr. David Torrey, Capt. Gilbert Bates, Eri T. Joy, and Eliphalet Lord, were appointed to report resolutions for the consideration of the meeting. After spirited remarks were made by several gentlemen, the committee on resolutions submitted the following:

Whereas, that high as our confidence is in the spotless purity of our principles, in the patriotism of our cause, and also in the speedy triumph that awaits us, yet nevertheless, the signs of the times admonish us that we are contending with a party who are adepts in treachery and corruption, and whose principles are encompassed round about with monopolies, which, when defined by the "goldlike," are, in essence, legislate for the rich, and let the poor take care of themselves. Be it, therefore,

Resolved, That we now are, as we ever have been, prepared boldly to enter into the presidential contest, nervous with undiminished zeal and energy, and with a purpose not to be bent.

Resolved, That in James K. Polk, we recognize a statesman of sterling integrity and consummate ability, a friend of the sainted Jackson, whose eloquence on the floor of Congress, and firmness in the speaker's chair, so gloriously sustained the hero of New Orleans from the assaults of the bribed minions of that mammoth of iniquity, the United States Bank.

Resolved, That we congratulate the democracy that George M. Dallas, a distinguished son of the "Key Stone" State is presented to us for the second highest office in the gift of the people, the services he rendered the country, so devoted and brilliant, in the Senate of the United States, throughout the administration of Old Hickory, justly entitles him to their gratitude and support, and we cordially and enthusiastically respond to his nomination.

TEXAS QUESTION.

The following is a synopsis of the views of Hon. George M. Bibb, (whig) late colleague of Henry Clay in the Senate. He is now Chancellor of Kentucky, and one of the brightest legal minds of our country, standing in the highest position in the whig ranks. While in the Senate of the United States, his efforts in that body were alluded to by the whig press as characterized by unsurpassed ability and intellectual acumen. He is worthy of comment, that he now stands before the country in an entirely antagonist position to Henry Clay, and his example cannot but add another element to the anticipated whig defeat in Kentucky and throughout the nation.

Mr. Bibb, by a train of unanswerable reasoning, (in a letter to Senator Buchanan of Pennsylvania) establishes the following points:

1st. That Texas is, in fact, an independent republic—and is ranked as such by other nations, and is well entitled to be so ranked in the family of nations.

2d. That the people of Texas were parties to, and under the protection of, the Federal Republican Constitution of 1824, and one of the sovereign States composing that Confederation. They have refused to submit to the consolidated central despotism established forcibly by Santa Anna upon the overthrow of the Constitution in 1824, and have achieved their independence with the entire possession of the territory of Texas. That by the cession to Spain, and revolution in Mexico in revolting and by the revolution in Texas, and the maintenance of her independence as a republic, Texas has a good title, and the United States, by a treaty of cession from that republic, can acquire a good title to the territory.

3d. That the acquisition of the territory of Texas by the United States, will add to their strength, and security, and defence, to domestic and foreign commerce; it will afford a great supply and varieties of necessities, conveniences, and comforts to the citizens. By the acquisition, the nation will perform those duties which, by the writers on natural law and Government, are called the duties of self-preservation and perfection of the nation. The obligation imposed by the law of nature, the dictates of wisdom and sound policy, urge the expediency of annexing Texas to the United States.

4th. That the United States by the cession to Spain violated their treaty with France; they violated their engagements to the inhabitants of the ceded territory now called Texas. The people of Texas have now a perfect right to demand of the United States the fulfillment of the stipulations of the third article of the treaty of the 30th April, 1803, with France. The United States are bound by the obligations of justice, by the ties of honor and good faith, to repair the breach committed by the cession to Spain, as soon as possible. A most fit and just occasion offers now, by the application of Texas to be received into the United States. The United States cannot in honor, fliggle about the debts incurred by the Texans in their defence. Honor and good faith are above money and price.

5th. And that the objections which have been made to a treaty with Texas for annexation, are futile in the last degree. That Santa Anna has no claim to Texas; that the war began by him was ended at San Jacinto; that Mexico should not be allowed to commence another; that President Tyler did right to conduct the treaty quietly and unobtrusively, as had been done in similar cases by Presidents Jefferson, Adams, Jackson and others; and that the treaty-making power, from the nature of the subjects upon which it is to be exerted, requires that it be confided to the Executive Department; that the action, from the commencement to the conclusion, requires privacy.

Mr. Bibb eloquently concludes his letter as follows:

"It is to be hoped and ardently desired, that these great and ever-enduring interests of the United States, and the sacred obligations of the treaty and public faith, will triumph over the temporary interests of contending parties. My judgment is, that Texas ought to be annexed to this Union. She is ours by position; she is part and parcel of us; kindred in blood; kindred in spirit; kindred in glory—a gallant co-worker in the great cause of free Government. She is a cast off child of the Union—she deserves to be recalled to the bosom of the family. I should rejoice to see 'the lone' star of Texas added to our own glorious six-and-twenty, together forming a constellation, which will diffuse the light and knowledge of human Government amongst the ignorant and oppressed. And if for this annexation Santa Anna, or the people of Mexico, shall make war upon the United States, then it will not be long before the Star Spangled Banner will wave in triumph over the palace of the Montezumas."

RATIFICATION MEETING.

Weymouth, June 14th, 1844.

At a very large and full meeting of the Democratic citizens of Weymouth and the neighboring towns, for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of President and Vice President made at the Democratic Convention assembled at Baltimore, in May last—the meeting was called to order by the Chairman of the Town Committee of Weymouth, and organized by the election of GEN. F. A. KINGSBURY, President.

Vice Presidents.

NATHANIEL WHITE of Quincy,

HIRAM THAYER of Randolph,

SILAS CANTERBURY of Weymouth,

WILLIAM COLE of Braintree,

EDMUND THOMAS of Weymouth.

OREN WHITE, } Secretaries.

NATHAN CANTERBURY. }

A committee was appointed to prepare Resolutions, consisting of Minat Thomas, Thomas B. Porter, and Ira Curtis of Weymouth, Jacob Richards of Braintree, Eleazer Beale of Randolph.

The following Resolutions were offered by said committee, and after several spirited and forcible addresses in favor of their adoption, they were unanimously passed.

Resolved—That we view the approaching election of President and Vice President of the United States as a contest for principles and not for men; principles for which the Democratic party have contended for years, and maintained to the utmost of their ability through prosperity and through adversity; and, therefore, such election is one of great importance, and demands and ought to call forth the united strength of the democracy.

Resolved—That the attempt to revive the charter of the old National Bank, with all its train of abuses, in the selection of its champion, Henry Clay, by the Whig party, after its almost universal condemnation, prompts to the most united action in the people's cause, and calls loudly for CONSENSUS, UNION AND HARMONY.

Resolved—That the raising of a revenue for distribution, another measure of the Whig champion, is in our opinion a most ruinous measure, and consists in imposing a tax upon the industry of the country for the support of the tax-gatherer, and to enable the government to exercise its generosity in permitting the people to have the residue from whom such revenue must originally come.

Resolved—That these self-styled great measures of relief, together with the Bankrupt law, were all that the whigs of 1840 thought necessary to clothe the Country with prosperity and which now are their leading measures, to avert the evils which the adoption of these measures impend, the united exertion of the whole democracy is imperiously demanded.

Resolved—That we most cordially approve of the nomination of JAMES K. POLK of Tennessee, for President, and GEORGE M. DALLAS of Pennsylvania, for Vice President, of the United States, made by the Democratic Convention assembled at Baltimore in May last.

Resolved—That we have the most unlimited confidence in the integrity and fidelity of Messrs. POLK and DALLAS, and that they will administer the government upon the pure principles of Democracy, and will ably maintain the great and leading measures commenced and established under JEFFERSON, MADISON, JACKSON, and VAN BUREN.

Resolved—That the Territory of Oregon of right belongs to the United States, and as such ought to be under the exclusive jurisdiction of our laws; and that the time has come in which the Government ought to assert her right of jurisdiction by the expulsion of all foreign intruders from her soil.

Resolved—That upon grounds of national suffrage and national interests, and for the purpose of extending the American institutions of free government, we are of opinion that the annexation of Texas ought to be made at the earliest practicable time, and in a proper manner.

The convention was addressed by the Hon. Isaac H. Wright of Roxbury, in a pertinent, forcible, and animated manner, and the utmost harmony and good feeling prevailed, the meeting ending by a termination to exert their utmost ability to effect the election of the nominees for President and Vice President made at the Democratic National Convention.

Voted—That the proceedings of this Convention be published in the democratic papers of this Commonwealth.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1844.

John A. Green, Editor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Boston, June 12th, 1844.

FRIEND GREEN—Did you ever attempt to write a letter when you lacked matter; if so, you can fully sympathize with me in my present situation.

This 'city of notions' is just at the present time as common-place as the most retired town among the hills of Berkshire. Ole Bull, the last 'lion' has gone, and our godly city is, I trust, for a few days, to enjoy a little freedom from excitement.

People from the city are beginning to retire to the country for the summer season. Your own beautiful town, I suppose, has already received its share of Bostonians; when your Railroad is completed, Quincy will doubtless be but a suburb of Boston; the distance between the two places will be annihilated. When, by the way, is the building of the Old Colony Railroad to be commenced? It seems to me that the company is rather dilatory in the matter; does the stock go a begging? Your Quincy capitalists must put their shoulders to the wheel.

The Executive Council commenced a session on Tuesday last, and confirmed several nominations of the Governor, but none of them of any great importance. No appointments of Judges of the Court of Common Pleas have as yet been made. Who will be appointed to these offices is as yet unknown. I have heard the names of several gentlemen mentioned as likely to receive the appointments. Among them, Judge Rogers of the Police Court of this city, L. S. Cushing Esq., also of this city, formerly Clerk of the House of Representatives, Hon. Linus Child of Worcester County, etc.

The fashions of the city are not unworthy of a little notice. It is quite a matter of rejoicing to all lovers of good taste that the ladies do not seem disposed very generally to adopt the practice, now somewhat in vogue, of enlarging their circumferences, but seem content with the fair proportions with which nature has adorned them; as the ladies are disposed to discountenance all innovations of dress, it is to be hoped that skirts of the gentlemen's coats will soon be restored to their primitive simplicity, and that nice broadcloth will hereafter be put to some better purpose than the making of slouchy coats fit only for Dutch suitors.

Among the improvements of the city, we notice that the wooden pavement in State Street is being removed and the old stone pavement substituted in its place. So it seems that the servants of man-mop prefer noise with less expense, quiet and stillness with more expense.

The Annual Convention of the Episcopal Church of the Diocese of Massachusetts is now holding meetings in the city, to continue during the week.

The latest news from Washington this morning, is that President Tyler is about to withdraw from the contest for the Presidency. Whether any credit is to be given to this piece of news or not I leave to those in possession of party secrets to judge. For my own part I do not believe it. He will not be so easily 'headed.'

THE CONCERT. The admirers of good singing enjoyed a rich treat in listening to the performances of the Braintree Singing Society, last Thursday evening, in this place. Several pieces were admirably sung; the audience seemed highly gratified.

EXPENSES OF THE RIOT. The county board have appropriated thirty thousand dollars to pay the military for services during the late riots in Philadelphia, and for the necessary expenses incurred for ammunition, provisions, etc. They likewise resolved that the amount of money to be raised by taxation for the year 1844, shall be six hundred and twenty-three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars.

ANOTHER GONE! The Salem Register announces the death of the last of Washington's Life Guards, in the person of Capt. Jesse Smith, who died at his residence in that city, aged eighty-eight. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and afterwards was drafted into Washington's Guards. He was present in the battles of Brandywine, Trenton, Germantown, and Monmouth. He received his discharge in 1779, from Col. Washington.

TIDE OF EMIGRATION. It is thought that at no previous season, says an exchange paper, have emigrants from the old world arrived in this country in so large numbers as at the present. They do not tarry in the eastern cities, but start off immediately for the fertile plains and valleys of the west.

WHIG CAUCES. The whig citizens of this town are notified to meet at the Town Hall, this evening, at eight o'clock, for the purpose of choosing delegates to the State Convention, at Worcester, on the 19th inst.

THE RAILROAD. The committee on the location of the Old Colony Railroad have reported, as we learn, in favor of running the road through Weymouth and Abington. Forty thousand dollars of the stock has already been taken in the latter place.

THE TEXAS TREATY REJECTED. On Saturday evening last, in executive session, the Senate rejected the Treaty concluded between this Government and the Republic of Texas, by the decisive vote of thirty-five yeas to sixteen nays.

Mr. Benton immediately introduced a bill for the annexation of Texas, which was read the first time. It fixes the boundaries of Texas, and annexes it on certain conditions, among which are the assent of Mexico, a determined boundary between the two countries, without the debt, and the settlement of the limits of slavery.

FIRE. On last Sunday afternoon, about one o'clock, a dwelling-house, in the western part of the town, near the store of George H. Locke, was damaged by fire to the amount of a hundred dollars. It originated in the second story, and is supposed to have been caused by a child playing with matches. The alacrity of the neighbors prevented its entire destruction.

DROWNED. Mr. Thomas Barnes of this place, was drowned on Wednesday last, at about seven o'clock in the afternoon, about twenty rods east of Quincy Great Hill. He, in company with Mr. Samuel P. Hardwick, was returning from a gunning excursion, when a sudden squall capsized the boat, and failing to remain upon the keel thus met his end. Mr. Hardwick sustained himself on the bottom of the boat about three hours when he was happily rescued from his perilous situation by a sloop which he hailed. The body of Barnes has not been recovered, although their guns, etc, have been found.

REMOVAL AND APPOINTMENT. John K. Corbett, (whig), has been removed from the office of Deputy Collector and Inspector at Hingham, and Henry Thaxter, Esq., of that place, re-appointed to the office.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE.

Original and Selected.

More than five hundred persons (male and female) have already signed a pledge in Baltimore, not to participate in gambling; and it is supposed that the number will be increased to five thousand.

An unfortunate crazy man was lately brought before the Recorder of New Orleans who had on a bet, ate thirty-two hard boiled eggs, shells and all.

The Boston papers contradict the report of the death of the venerable Simon Willard, Clockmaker, of that city. His brother, Aaron Willard, died a few weeks ago as was announced in all the newspapers.

Sir Robert Peel of England, recently stated in the House of Commons, that there are no fewer than twenty-two thousand applicants for Government situations.

The Millerites of Cincinnati, (Ohio) have leased a lot for five years, with privilege of renewal, and are about to erect a church. This does not look as if they expected immediate annihilation.

In Vienna, every man, from the prince to the shoemaker, wears a ring—the noble has his arms engraved on it; the merchant his initials;—the mechanic the device of his trade.

The French Government has determined to follow the example of England, in the abolition of slavery in their colonies.

The managers of a beautiful and romantic Cemetery, near Philadelphia, have applied to the widow of Com. Decatur for leave to bury his remains at that place. Mrs. Decatur replies that it was the wish of her husband to be buried in St. Peter's Churchyard, in Philadelphia, and that his remains will be removed for that purpose at the period of her death.

The Bay State Democrat remarks, that a small band of Indians will visit Boston during the present summer, headed by their chief, 'White Cloud.'

A journeyman type-setter of New York has been attacked with paralysis of the face, in consequence of holding type in his mouth while correcting proof. It required some three or four months to effect a cure.

A man who married a particularly plump specimen of womanhood, being a bit of a wag, told her one day that she filled the measures of his matrimonial joys full; for she was beautiful, dutiful, youthful, healthful, plentiful, and an armful.

The President has nominated Edward D. King, Esq., of Philadelphia, to fill the vacancy on the Bench of the Supreme Court, occasioned by the death of Judge Baldwin.

Hon. Alexander Barrow, United States Senator from Louisiana, has addressed a letter to his constituents, in which he gives his reasons for opposing the annexation of Texas.

Governor Mattocks of Vermont, declines being a candidate for re-election. He assigns recent domestic afflictions as his reason for this course.

Hon. John C. Calhoun, Secretary of State, has informed a committee of citizens of Charleston, (S. C.) that ample redress will be demanded of the Spanish Government for the murder of an American citizen, at the quay in Havana, by a Spanish guard.

Franklin was an observing and sensible man, and his conclusions were seldom incorrect. He said—'A newspaper and a bible in every house, a good school house in every district, all studied and appreciated as they merit, are the principal supporters of virtue, morality and civil liberty.'

The first bell in Haverhill, (Mass.) says the Salem Gazette, was purchased in 1784; before that time there was a singular substitute, as appears by a vote passed in 1650. 'That Abraham Tyler blow his horn half an hour before meeting, on the Lord's day, and on lecture days, and receive one pound of pork annually for his services, from each family.'

Two slaves, a male and a female, have been found guilty of murdering a driver in South Carolina, and sentenced to be hung.

A schooner from Wilmington, (N. C.) for New York, put into Norfolk, (Va.) and handed over to the Mayor a negro man, whom the captain had discovered concealed in the fore-castle, some time after he left the former port.

A meeting of the friends of the temperance cause has been held on the eastern portico of the Capitol, in honor of the vote of Congress to exclude the sale of intoxicating drinks from the premises.

Joe Smith, the Mormon prophet, has petitioned Congress for permission to raise one hundred thousand men, and arm and equip them for the propagation of Christianity, and the arts and refinements of civilized society, in the western wilderness.

The total cost of supporting the established police of the city of London, per annum, is about a quarter of a million of dollars. How much of this expense does rum cause?

An opposition steamboat has been placed on the route between Providence and New York. Fare from Boston to New York, three dollars.

Hon. David Henshaw of this State, has written a letter, which has been published, in favor of the annexation of Texas. He takes the same ground as all the other friends of annexation.

The result of the late vote on the question of forming a State Government in Iowa and demanding admission into the Union, was for a State Government, 6976; against it, 4181; majority in favor 2795.

FOURTH OF JULY. The friends of the Liberty Party in Weymouth, Braintree, Quincy and Randolph, intend to celebrate the ensuing anniversary of our country's declaration of freedom, in a manner worthy of the occasion. Addresses will be delivered in the Rev. Mr. Perkins' Meeting-house, at the Landing, (so called.) Dinner will be provided at Wales' Hotel, in Weymouth. The music will be by the Randolph and Stoughton Band. Gen. Appleton Howe will act as President of the Day.—The arrangements warrant a fine festival which nothing but the weather will interrupt.

WASHINGTONIAN JUBILEE. The intrepid and indefatigable Washingtonians of Norfolk County, says the Bay State Democrat, determined to hold the palm of victory, meet in County Convention at East Needham, on Monday, the 17th of June.—Mitchell, the first Washingtonian pledge man will be there, the prize banner will be exhibited, Miss Phillips will repeat her beautiful presentation address, and many popular advocates of the cause will lift up their voices.

Parr's Life Pills.

Warm weather is fast approaching, and the impurities of the blood require rectifying. Of the functions necessary to be cleansed and invigorated, none have a more intimate connection than the stomach and the liver. The presence of food in the stomach, and the healthy operation of the digestive powers, furnish the only natural stimulant to the liver; but whenever the coating of the former becomes weak and morbid, the bile is improperly secreted, and disease of the liver and generally unhealthy state of the digestive organs supervene. To give a healthy tone to the stomach, to free the blood of its impurities, and strengthen those organs, take medicine free from mineral compounds, not deteriorating, but strengthening. Such as Parr's Life Pills, being perfectly gentle in their operation, and compounded purely of Vegetables.

Road Notice.
To the Honorable the County Commissioners for the County of Norfolk:—
THE subscribers, inhabitants of the town of Weymouth, in said County, respectfully represent, that the highway in said town, commencing at the dwelling house of Benjamin T. Pierce, and running over Burying Hill to the dwelling house of Dr. Timothy Gordon, is narrow and inconvenient, and that public convenience and necessity require that it be altered, by widening the same and otherwise—that said alterations would take land belonging to the following persons, viz: David Blanchard, Lemuel Humphrey, Esq., inhabitants of North Parish in Weymouth, and Quincy Falls of Boston.
They therefore pray that your Honors would view said highway, and cause said alterations to be made as in duty bound will ever pray.
LEWEL TORREY, and 40 others.
Weymouth, March 25, 1844.

Valuable Real Estate for Sale.
THE Land and Buildings in Quincy, formerly owned by Thaddeus W. Cross, and improved by him for several years as a Carriage and Harness Manufactory, are now offered for sale.
It consists of half an acre of land, two large and one small two story buildings, with sheds, etc. It is pleasantly situated on the main street, having two fronts, in the immediate vicinity of business, schools, the Unitarian Meeting-house, Bank, Hotel, etc. It is a desirable location for almost any mechanical branch of industry, might be improved with very little expense for the business it has been occupied so many years, or the site would make a very pleasant situation for a gentleman's residence. Such a chance to obtain so central, valuable, and pleasant a location for business or site for a residence will not probably occur again in this town for many years. A good title given of the property, which will be sold for a reasonable price, and part of the money can remain on mortgage. Further information may be obtained from the subscriber, and all letters on the subject, post paid, will command his immediate attention.
JOHN A. GREEN.
Quincy, Jan. 20.

For Sale.
A GENTEEL and convenient Dwelling-house, situated near the Railway Meeting house, in Milton, with about one quarter of an acre of Land in a good state of cultivation, on which are many thrifty Fruit Trees.—The House and out-buildings were erected in 1841, of the best materials, and is thoroughly finished. It is a desirable location for a mechanic, particularly in the boot and shoe or stone business.
The present owner, intending to remove from Milton, offers the above described delightful residence for sale, at a great bargain and discount from the price cost. Half of the purchase money can remain on mortgage for a term of years.
For further information, please apply to
WILLIAM B. DUGGAN.
Quincy, May 15.

Sheriff's Sale.
NORFOLK SS. May 10th, 1844.
BY virtue of an Execution, in favor of J. Jenkins Lane against Chauncey S. Howe, I have taken and seized the following described lands and tenements as the property of said Howe, viz:—
About half an acre of land, situated in Weymouth, in said County, bounded easterly by land of J. & A. Tirrell, westerly by Main Street, northerly by land of Ebenezer Joy and Martin Joy, and southerly by land of Daniel Lord, with a dwelling house thereon, the same being mortgaged to the Weymouth and Braintree Institutions for Savings to secure the payment of three hundred and fifty dollars, dated January 26th, 1842, and recorded in the 134—6th—24. These are therefore to give notice, that the said Howe's right in equity to redeem the same will be sold at public vendue, on MONDAY, the seventeenth day of June next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, at the Hotel of Asa B. Wales, in said Weymouth.
Conditions at sale.
SILAS BINNEY, Deputy Sheriff.

DR. BUTLER,
NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

Dr. Butler deems it prudent to remark, as quackery, empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevail to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has some nearly exhausted the vocabulary of "illingsgate," in the false description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of "illingsgate," in the false description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sexes, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

All letters must be post paid.

Dr. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obstructed Cutaneous Excretions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Breasts, and Diseases arising from an impudic use of Mercury. The compound is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernand, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practising as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernand, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernand himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernand, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States, J. K. FERNAND, Indian Physician.

JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant

Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine:

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast enacting upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 30, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy

Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are bent on establishing a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, mucus of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours truly,

IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House,

Quincy.

To Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernand's Arcanum:

Sir—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of low fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was in a state of languid inactivity, or, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, with had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernand's Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for relief from the same source, which I readily improved, with gratification, state to the public that I have pronounced that relief by the use of one bottle which I desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

MISCELLANY.

MONEY TO MAKE OUT.

'Unfortunate, indeed! There is Col. B. and I must meet him, or cross over the street, which by the by I can do with a very good grace, as there is a table on the opposite wall covered with fine flower pots arranged for sale. Really, that's too bad; he's crossing too, and I must meet him after all. I began to hope that I should reach home this morning without the honor of another dun.'

'Good morning, Mr. Hall, how are you?'

'Quite well myself, Col.; but—my child is rather ill, so you will please excuse me, as I must be in haste.'

'With all my heart, Mr. Hall, but when you have a little leisure, we will look over our accounts, as I have a large sum of money to make out within a week; and shall therefore be under the necessity of calling in all my duns. Good morning.'

'Money to make out. This is the universal cry. Now there is not, in the whole English language, another combination of words which can fill my mind with such strange gloom and terror, as that same 'money to make out.' Should a bold assassin enter my chamber at midnight, present a dagger at my bosom, and bid me fight for my life, it would not horrify me half so much as the entrance of a kind friend, whom I owed and could not pay, if I guessed he had 'money to make out.' Were I on a frail vessel in the midst of a furious tempest, and should I hear the captain say, after a long and desperate struggle of effort, that all is over, and we were sinking into the dark bosom of the deep, it would not innerv me half so much as the dreadful 'money to make out.'

Nor if I hung on the tallest spire of St. Peter's Church at Rome, and saw the whole vast building a mass of red flame beneath me, methinks I should not feel one half the strange uneasiness that maddens my brain when I am told, with a peculiar nod, there is 'money to be made out.'

Yes, and what would be, if possible, still worse, were I fastened to the fatal table of the Inquisition, watching the slowly descending swinging knife, as it came nearer—nearer—nearer—until it whizzed my very hair, I am sure that a colder horror would not then curdle my life blood, than the most fearful of all arrangements of letters,—'money to make out.'

Thus mused our genteel and richly dressed city mechanic, as he passed rapidly up Broadway, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left, lest he should meet some too familiar countenances. Just as he turned into the street which led to his own house, he met a woman who was selling early strawberries.—She asked him to buy. He thought he could not afford it, but the fruit looked delicious. He fumbled his pockets and finally succeeded in bringing out a fifty cent piece. This would purchase a fine dessert; and any way, it was only fifty cents if he was in debt, and certainly such a trifle could not affect him, so he gave the woman the only piece of coin he possessed, and directed her where to leave the fruit. He had walked on but a few rods, when a ragged, half-starved negro boy stepped into the path before him and very impudently said his mother wanted the money he owed her for washing.

'Very well, my little man,' said Mr. Hall, who was sometimes rather complimentary when unexpectedly dunned, 'but I have no change to-day, though I shall have some this week.'

'Mother said she must have it now,' persevered the boy in a louder tone of voice. 'It is only fifty cents, sir. She has some money to make out to pay her rent, and if it ain't paid by to-night we shall be kicked into the street in the morning.'

'Money to make out again!' groaned Mr. Hall, with strides which left little blackey far in the rear and soon brought him to the marble steps of his dwelling. 'Who could have believed that even the very mouths of the negro boys in the streets would open to pour upon me these words of shame and madness.'

He entered a large and handsome back parlor, threw himself on a sofa, and covering his face with his handkerchief, he charged the maid to admit no person to that room, and answer all inquiries after himself with a 'not at home.'

We do not know exactly what passed in his mind during the hour which he remained in that position—for he gave no other signs of life than a wild whisper of the word 'debt,' followed by a convulsive shiver, when the door bell was heard to ring—but will take his own text, and thus fill up this blank of time by imagining what the sermon might have been; and if our words are not the same as those by which he expressed his feelings to his own mind, still we doubt not but there may be a very striking similarity between the ideas.

'DEBT! Who is nursing a scorpion in his bosom, until the poison will taint his own blood, and madness of death ensue? It is the man in debt. Who is clinging to the top of the unsheltered, eternal rock, gazing with bursting eye on the vast and wide expanse of ocean around him, and exposed to the pitiless vengeance of the wild elements, with no hope of escape? It is the man in debt! Who is sailing on the calm waters far above Niagara, and delighting himself by gazing into the clear depth beneath him, knows not his position until the changed motion and the rapidity of his boat startles him with the dreadful truth that he is in the rapids, and is nearing with increasing speed the frightful chasm? It is the man in debt! Ah! and who is leaning over Atna's crater, and while he gazes far down into the depths of the boiling flame, feels his foot slip, his balance lost, and finds himself sinking—sinking! It is the man in debt.'

At length our man in debt sprang upon his feet with an energy so wild and yet so determined, that one might well have imagined that he believed himself suspended over the waning fires of the volcano, and fully designed to make good his escape. His eyes gleamed with a new fire, and his countenance glowed with a strange brightness. He strided the room rapidly, and clearly evinced by his quick glances from one thing to another, that some new and important subject was undergoing investigation in his mind. Once he paused and carefully examined the quality of his coat and pants, the lustre of his satin vest, and fineness of his linen, and his gold chain, which was the safeguard of a one hundred and fifty dollar watch. Then he glanced at his wife's piano, but quickly turned from it with a deep sigh to a long and sorrowful gaze upon the flower pots arranged in the back yard. The dinner bell at length broke in upon his reveries, and an unusual expression was seen on his countenance when he entered the dining room. His wife tenderly inquired the cause, but he replied only by a strict scrutiny of her cap, her dress, the furniture of the room, and lastly, of every thing upon the table. After the meats were removed, a beautiful glass dish filled with strawberries covered with cream and loaf-sugar, were brought in and placed upon the table. He started at the sight as though an adder had bitten him, and his affectionate wife again inquired the cause of his strange conduct.

'We are not able to afford such things, Lucy,' he said quickly.

'Why, my dear,' answered Mrs. Hall, 'the woman told Betty that you only paid fifty cents for them.'

'Only fifty cents!' reiterated the husband rising from his chair. The bill of our poor wash-woman is only fifty cents, and though she needs it to-day I cannot pay it in consequence of purchasing this unnecessary fruit.'

'Unnecessary?' repeated Mrs. Hall with a sneer.

'But wife,' added he, with a severe determination in his voice, 'there must be a change in our affairs. I cannot live any longer as I have done for a year or two past. I am no longer a man among men. I am dunned at the corner of every street, and am always afraid to look about me lest I should meet the eye of some one whom I owe. I am utterly crushed with debts, and if there cannot be a change we are lost.'

The pretty lip of the young wife pouted in silence.

'I repeat it in the strong emphasis of a dying man, there must be a change in our affairs. We must abridge.'

'ABRIDGE!' cried Mrs. Hall, reddening to her very temples, what can we possibly abridge?'

'My dear,' continued Mr. Hall, with a soothing tone, as he beheld the distress of a wife whom he tenderly loved, 'any sacrifice you may be obliged to make will cost me a far more severe trial than it can possibly cost you; but I see no other way—we must abridge our expenditures.'

A long pause succeeded. At length Mr. Hall resumed,—

'My brother has a less lucrative trade than mine, and yet with a family three times as large, he owes no man a dollar; besides, he has money in the bank.'

'And he works like a slave with his own hands,' replied Mrs. Hall; and just look at his wife—she is always in the kitchen like a bound girl. Besides, only think, two dreary half-finished parlors, and such a morsel of a kitchen with no nursery.'

'And I intend to work with my own hands, too,' answered her husband; 'and as we have but one child, can't you give up your nursery and nursery maid?'

Mrs. Hall turned pale. Had it come to that? Must she be tied up to her own offspring, no longer able to ride and walk or visit at pleasure?'

'And,' continued he cautiously, 'if we had a similar house, we could do with less help in the kitchen; and besides, we should need less furniture, and several expenses and nearly useless articles might be turned into the payment of our debts. My gold watch, and your piano—'

The poor wife sunk back into her chair, and covering her face burst into a hysterical flood of tears. Had she heard the conclusion of the sentence, she might perhaps have felt more for her husband than herself,—for, pressing his hands against his throbbing heart, he declared that death, but no debt, was preferable to asking her to make this last sacrifice, and with hollow groans he traversed the apartment.

Mrs. Hall was the spoiled child of indulgence; still she was naturally kind and amiable, and nothing was wanting by the proper circumstances and the right direction given to her feelings, to develop her true character, and make her a most patient and self-denying wife. That afternoon, as soon as her husband had gone, she ran over the street to see old Mrs. Howe—a woman highly esteemed by all for her excellent good sense as well as for her kind and sympathetic heart—and to her she made known her troubles.

'Tush! tush! child,' said the old lady with a smile, 'never mind that. Just come down patiently to your altered circumstances, and trust me for it, you'll be a great deal better off for it some day than you ever were yet.'

'But how shall I begin,' said the young wife, wiping away the tears.

'Begin? why begin by giving up all you can do without and be comfortable. Let the piano go first!'

'Don't name it, Mrs. Howe! Oh, my dear piano? What should I do without its music?'

'Its music! Would not the music of your husband's happy heart, relieved from burden or debt, be much sweeter in your ears? Give up the piano—it is a childish toy compared with his peace.'

'And what next, Mrs. Howe?' inquired Mrs. Hall, as a new light seemed to animate her countenance.

'Why, my dear woman,' replied the old lady, tapping her under the chin, 'after you have parted with all you can spare, have taken a low rent house, and dismissed all your help but one girl, then begin one of the sweetest things you ever had to do—the taking care of your own dear babe; and you will soon find its smiles and love will more than repay all your efforts.'

'Mrs. Howe!—my friends would all shun me! Just think of Mrs. Brown, Mrs. White, Mrs. Goodene—'

'Stop! stop! child—what have you to do with them? They will not pay you or your husband's debts. Besides, if they are persons of good common sense, they will not despise you for conduct which it is both your duty and interest to perform, and if not, why should you care for their friendship? It is not on them that you depend for happiness, but as the old fashioned poetry says,—

'From our ourselves our joys must flow,
And that dear cot—our home.'

Now let me assure you that nothing affords greater contentment than independence, even on a small scale—and this your poor husband is fully prepared to enjoy. I have been told for a long time that he was deeply in debt, and that he was toiling to keep up style and appearance which he could not long maintain.—Yes, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Willet both told me so; and they said too, that he owed their husbands money, which they often asked him for, but never expected to get.'

'Is it so then?' replied Mrs. Hall, sobbing like a grief-stricken child. 'I am glad you told me that; it will help to crush my pride, and nerve me up to duty. My resolution is taken. Dear Mrs. Howe, you have saved me.'

'But let me give you a little advice,' said the old lady, 'before you commence your new course of life. I have been over the same ground myself, and I can assist and encourage you a great many times, by telling how I got along, and perhaps you may profit a good deal by my experience. In the first place, and I consider this important, too, never appear depressed or discouraged before your husband.—Your cheerfulness will do much to keep up his courage, and assist him in the labor and self-denial which he would have to encounter. If you have any sad feelings, either suppress them entirely or give them vent when you are alone; but above all things, never upbraid him. This would inflict a wound upon his very heart-strings, and I should greatly fear would shake the very foundations of his affections for you. You say your husband was always kind and indulgent; be assured then that he will do the best for you he can; and even if, in his righteous determination to throw off the burden of debt, and restore to every man he owes his own property, he should sometimes be obliged to deny you conveniences which you may find it difficult to do without, don't repine before him, or make use of any short words; nay, don't even let a shade pass over your countenance, but let him see that you can cheerfully deny yourself for his sake. I can assure you he will reward you when he is able. There is another rule which you must adopt, and impress it daily upon the mind of your husband, if you would get out of debt: never buy what you do not strictly need, not even then, if you cannot pay for the articles when you take it—do without it rather than make a debt. This is what has ruined you.'

Mrs. Hall went home with altered feelings. She examined all her furniture, and selected the plainest and most useful articles to be retained. She looked at her beloved piano, and the tears would start, but she dashed them away, and said the sacrifice must be made. It was the gift of her dear husband on the morning of their marriage, and it should be given up for his sake. Suddenly a thought crossed her mind. She was a fine musician—every one admired her at the piano. The instrument, if sold, would not probably bring more than half its value—would it not be more advantageous to keep it and become a music teacher? She screamed with joy at the thought. Several young ladies were about commencing music. In less than three hours she had visited every one of them, and had engaged ten scholars, at fifty dollars per annum. Four of the young ladies were daughters of merchants, to whom Mr. Hall was indebted for a less sum than the amount of the music lessons.

'And now,' she said, as she flew home with the lightness of a happy bird, 'they will never dun my dear husband again.'

That night Mr. Hall walked Broadway with a slow step and heavy heart. He had seen most of his creditors, and told them the plan, and arranged with some of them to take some of his most valuable furniture and his watch. He had dismissed his foreman, determining to fill that station himself, and he had rented a small but convenient two story house, at one hundred and eighty dollars per annum. This was in reality the best afternoon's work he had done for more than two years. Still he was miserable. When he went out he left his wife in a paroxysm of tears. How could he meet her and tell her of his arrangements? He passed his own door several times, and walked up and down the street with the feelings of an outcast. He was unable to ring the bell, and sat down upon the steps to meditate his wretched lot. At length observing that the back gate was open, he passed into the kitchen and stole softly up stairs. The nursery door stood ajar, and he heard his wife singing Watts' cradle hymn with a cheerful voice, and rocking her infant in her arms. He felt encouraged, and the next moment he was embracing the two dearest objects of his earthly love. The young wife tenderly smoothed back the long black curls that had fallen over his forehead, and assured him that she never was so happy as at that moment. Then she went on to tell him all her plans, and when he met the animated glances of her sweet blue eyes, he pressed her still closer to his heart, and felt that he too was happy.

Two years from that evening, Mr. Hall owed not a man a shilling. He still lived in the same small house, still labored early and late, and his wife still taught music; but had you searched the city over, you could scarcely have found so happy a family. Every prospect of wealth began to dawn upon them, and they looked back with grateful hearts on the vortex of ruin from which they had so narrowly escaped.

BUNKER HILL MONUMENT.

To the Editor of the Quincy Patriot:

I was much pleased to see in the Patriot of July 29th, 1843, the article headed "false inscription," the design of it being to give honor to whom honor is due. Notwithstanding the fact that the name of Alexander Paris is inscribed upon the plate deposited in the corner stone of Bunker Hill Monument, as the architect, it is well known to many, that he was not. He might have seen the architectural plans and drawings after they were made, as others did, but Solomon Willard drafted them, and he alone, was employed by the Directors, as the architect, for designing and constructing the monument from its foundation to the top stone. He was also a large contributor towards the expense of its erection. The old wooden monument, that stood near the same place, built soon after the American Revolution, by Free Masons, in honor of General Warren, had been regarded as an honorable testimony of the patriotism of the Masonic Order. They claimed and exclusively enjoyed the merit of the undertaking, and they gloried in the achievement, and well they might, for it was somewhat over twenty feet high. Of this no one complained, for through their efficiency the work was accomplished. When the construction of the present monument was in contemplation, the Order of Free Masons had become greatly devalued, and as rotten as the old monument, but their extravagant pretensions to wondrous knowledge, especially to a familiar acquaintance with architectural science, operated still upon the credulity of the public, and they were consulted. But the most of their wisdom was of the baser sort, consisting in chicanery and in the arts of circumvention, and to use a popular word of their own vocabulary in the art of 'wonder-working' by signs and enigmas. As the project for the new monument attained maturity and its magnitude developed, the whole machinery of the wily craft was set in motion to monopolize the honor of laying the corner-stone. By their 'wonder-working' powers, they not only obtained the control of the Directors in this thing, but they so managed as to get the name of Alexander Paris, a brother mason, inscribed upon the metal plate, as the architect, to be deposited in the stone to the entire exclusion of the man, who had consecrated all his talents and much of his time to the acquisition of a favorite object.

By this nefarious management, the Free Masons by hood-winking some and cajoling others of the Directors, the indefatigable Willard was supplanted of his birth-right, and a man of no merit, except that of being a Free Mason, by intrigue and falsehood, was basely substituted. The stone laid by Grand Master Abbott, is not the corner-stone of the Monument. It was a rough stone, which happened to be on the hill, adopted at that juncture because it would combine the anniversary of the Bunker Hill battle, with the presence of Gen. La Fayette. The real corner stone of the Monument was laid months afterwards by Solomon Willard, although the plate says it was laid by John Abbott, Grand Master of Masons in Massachusetts. Considering the eclat of Free Masonry at that time, and the high wrought pretensions of her votaries to algebraic acumen, and the unsuspicious habits of high minded honorable men, where they see no cause to excite suspicion, it is not strange that the Directors were thus imposed upon; but after the imposition was detected, it is passing strange that their magnanimity did not prompt them to expose the falsehood. They unwittingly gave to Free Masons the honor of raising the Monument; but they should, as there was time and opportunity during the progress of the work, and long before the corner stone was enclosed, have corrected the falsehood. But the Directors were now willing to remain under the imputation of being cajoled by Masons, than to be at the trouble of doing equal justice to Mr. Willard.

The Hon. Daniel Webster and George Ticknor, Esq., were of the committee, to whose special inspection the monumental plans and drawings were submitted by Mr. Willard.—They knew to whose talents and ingenuity the country is indebted for the splendid structure of which all are proud; yet when Mr. Webster delivered his Bunker Hill address and made allusions to the architect, he did not mention the name of Willard. That there should be such reluctance to render honor to whom honor is due, when Masonry interposes its veto, is rather paradoxical. To suspect the motives of honorable men, or to charge them with connivance in supplanting a retiring, unassuming, modest, but meritorious mechanic of his just reward, is not intended, but that such has been the effect in this case, is undeniable. Mr. Willard, no doubt, has been more regardless of asserting his claims than most men would have been, but this does not transfer his honorable claim to another, nor justify the public in withholding from him his due reward.

To remove the lying plate and substitute a true one, would now cost something over twenty dollars but not thirty. By taking out one stone which covers the cavity that contains the box in which are the deposits, the plate may be come at; and this stone to be removed is a surface stone in the Monument near the ground. But would it not injure the structure? About as much as to take a single brick out of the wall of a house, and replace it with another.

By the acts and doings, or negligence of the Directors, falsehood has obtained currency, and they ought to arrest its perpetuity. If it did no other good, they would show to the world their indignity at the imposition played off upon them by the sagacious trickery of the old handmaid. She plunges herself very much upon her Machiavelian dexterity in this instance of circumvention—and it goes far to show her insatiable sympathy with falsehood in her decline of life—unconscious of the ignominy that is entailed upon her memory; the young brood, under a new name or designation, are vainly striving to resuscitate the order, but too much is known of their origin to admit of success—and the youthful eccentricities of those who join, are too volatile to resist long the pressure of public disapprobation.

The two other cases of 'laxity of principle' which you mention in laying corner stones, of the Dedham Court House, and of a building at the South, go far to show that there is little truth in plates deposited by Free Masons.

These remarks were seasonably prepared to be communicated for your paper, under an expectation that I could have immediately put my hand on positive evidence in another case, not to be called one of 'laxity of principle' but of downright falsehood. I have just now obtained it. It occurs in the laying of the corner stone of the Masonic Temple in Boston, which evidence you have below, and which with these remarks I hope you will not consider unseasonable now for an insertion in the Patriot. The inscription on the plate is taken from the proceedings recorded in the Boston Masonic Mirror of October 23d, 1830, which was presented me by a Free Mason as something valuable and worthy of preservation. G.

Boston, December 22d, 1830.

To his Excellency Levi Lincoln,

Governor of the State of Massachusetts:

SIR.—We have seen in the public prints a description of the ceremonies, which took place in laying the corner stone of a Masonic Temple in this city, on the 14th of October last, in which it is stated that a plate was placed in the cavity of the stone with the following inscription, viz—

POETRY.

THE OLD BACHELORS.

They are wanderers and ramblers—never at home,
Making sure of a welcome wherever they roam,
And every one knows that the Bachelor's den,
Is a room set apart for these singular men—
A nook in the clouds, of some five feet by four,
Through sometimes, by chance, it may be rather more.
With skylight, or no light, ghosts, goblins and gloom,
And every where termed 'the Old Bachelor's room.'
These creatures, they say, are not valued at all,
Except when the herd give a 'Bachelor's Ball.'

Then drest in their best,
In their gold brocaded vest,
It is known as a fact
That they act with much tact,
And they hiss 'How d'ye do'
And they coo, and they woo,
And they smile, for a while,
Their fair guests to beguile;
Condescending and bending,
For fear of offending,
Though inert, And they spy,
To be pert, And they sigh,
And to flirt, As they fly.

And they wink and they whizz,
And are brisk when they quiz,
For they meet Advancing,
To be sweet, And glancing,
And are fleet, And dancing,
On their feet, And prancing,
Sliding and gliding with minute pace,
Promoting and setting with infinite grace.

And bumping, And chasing,
And bumping, And racing,
And bumping, And dancing,
And bumping, And dancing.

They are flitting and glittering, gallant and gay;
Yawning all morning—and lounging all day.

But when he grows old,
And his sunshine is past,
Three score years being told,
Brings repentance at last,
He then becomes an odd old man,
His warmest friend's the warming pan;
He's fidgety, fretful and weary; in fine,
Loves nothing but self and his dinner and wine.
He rates and he grates,
And reads the debates;

Despised by the men, and the women he hates.

Then prosing, And poring,
And dozing, And snoring,
And cooing, And boring,
And nosing, And roaring,
When'er he falls in with a rattle,
His delight is to vapor and gabble.

He's gruffly, And musty,
And puffy, And rusty,
He sits in slippers, with back to the door,
Near freezing, And grumbling,
And wheezing, And mumbeling,
And sneezing, And tumbling,

He curses the carpet, or nails in the floor,
Of falling, Of walking,
Of hawling, Of aching,
And sprawling, And shaking,
His hand is unsteady, his stomach is sore.

He's railing, Uncheerly,
And failing, And dreary,
And ailing, And weary.

And groaning and moaning,
His selfishness owning,
Grieving and heaving,
Though nought is he leaving,
But pelf and all health,
Himself and his wealth.

He sends for a doctor to cure or to kill,
Who gives him advice, and offense and a pill,
Who drops him a hint about making his will,
As fretful antiquity cannot be mended,
The miserable life of a bachelor's ended,
Nobody misses him, nobody sighs,
Nobody grieves when the Bachelor dies.

SELF-DEDICATION.

O Thou! in whom we all are one,
If faithful found and true;
Thy will, on earth, by each be done,
As each in Heaven, might do.
To Thee, ourselves we first would give—
Live to Thy glory, while we live—
From step to step on Thine rely,
Then, in Thy service die.

ANECDOTES.

*A stranger in passing through a rural village of New England, many years ago, who was attracted to the tub of a cider press, by accidentally discovering the feet of a child projecting over its top. It seems that the boy had procured a straw sucker, and was in the act of sipping from the tub, when he fell in—his head being entirely submerged. He was immediately taken out and carried by the stranger to the farm house of his parents, a few rods distant, where efforts were commenced to restore the child, now apparently lifeless. After about one hour, signs of returning life were visible, and ultimately an entire restoration was effected, and the child lived.—became a man—became a minister—became a bishop—and ultimately, the second presiding Bishop of the American Protestant Episcopal Church.

*Boy, run up stairs to No. —, and bring down my baggage; hurry, I'm about moving," said a tall Arkansas meat-axe looking person to a waiter at a crack hotel. "What is your baggage, massa, what is he?" "Why, three pistols, a pack of cards, a howie-knife and a shirt." "You'll find them under my pillow."

*Jim, which is the heaviest, a quart of rum or a quart of water?" "A quart of rum, surely," said Jim. "For I saw a large man staggering under a quart of rum, when he could have carried a gallon of water with ease."

*Aint it wicked to rob this henroost, Jim?" "That's a great moral question, Gumbo—hand down another pullet."

*All flesh is grass," as the horse said, when he bit a piece out of the man's arm.

A lady was asked how she liked a gentleman's singing, who had an offensive breath. "The words are good," replied she, "but the air is intolerable."

Dr. Louis Kurtz,

RESPECTFULLY informs the afflicted and the public in general, that he has, on account of the great increase of business, removed his Infirmary to the spacious dwelling house where he may be consulted gratis, and with the utmost confidence, in French, German or English. Thankful for the liberal patronage the public have bestowed upon him for the last three years, he solicits its continuance, assuring them that he shall do all in his power to make himself worthy of it.

NO 64 CAMBRIDGE STREET, BOSTON,

Dr. K. has had during his residence at the hospitals of Leipzig, (Germany,) Paris, (France,) and for the last three years in this country, a very extensive practice, and is confident of being able to give entire satisfaction in the following complaints, viz:—
Scrophulous Humor, Sore Legs, Spine Complaint, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Cough, Consumption, Dropsy, Mercurial Affection, White Swelling on the knee, etc, etc.

In diseases of a private nature, (maladies secret,) Dr. Kurtz is acknowledged to be surpassed by no physician in this country, and warrants a perfect cure in from three to ten days, according to the stage of the disease.

Dr. Louis Kurtz would respectfully call the attention of invalids to the following valuable remedies, viz:—
German Anti-Mercurial Powders. This medicine has been pronounced by the faculty of Leipzig, (Germany,) a sure and perfect cure, when that deadly poison, Mercury, has been injudiciously used. Price $1 per bottle—six bottles safely packed in a small box, $5.00.
German Tonic Mixture—an excellent remedy for dyspepsia. Price $1.00—six bottles $5.00.
German Tonic Pills—a sure and perfect cure for Fluor Albus, (Whites). Price $1.00 per box—six boxes $5.00.
German Renovating Mixture or Female Monthly Pills. The above named medicines have been pronounced by some of the most eminent physicians of Europe the only sume and safe remedies for suppression, stoppage, etc, etc, and since their introduction into this country, several thousand bottles and boxes have been used and given entire satisfaction. Price $2.00 per box or bottle.

Dr. L. Kurtz pays particular attention to all Female Complaints, in the treatment of which he has had much experience and great success.

Doctor L. Kurtz est consulte, gratis, en francais, allemand, et anglais.

Dr. L. Kurtz giebt freie consultationen in deutsch, franzzosischer und englischer Sprache.

Office hours from 9 A. M. until 9 P. M. Letters promptly attended to and strict secrecy observed.

Medical aid in Boston.

DR. BUTLER,
NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism and the grossest imposition prevail to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has seen more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisements, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the false description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of one disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sex, so that there can be no hesitation in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

All letters must be post paid.

DR. FERNANDS'

Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrophula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples, or Pustules on the Face, Female Whites, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous, inasmuch that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues solely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician.
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.
To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine:—

SIR:—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast en-tailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief.

About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy

Stone Bank.
To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:—

DEAR SIR:—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wymann Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from my own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

MISCELLANY.

CRASH, DIAPER AND DIMITY.

Fashion is arbitrary, we all know. What it was that originally gave Sassafraz street the right to despise Pepperridge street, the oldest inhabitant of the village of Simford could not positively say. The court house and jail were in Sassafraz street, but the orthodox church and female seminary were in Pepperridge street. Two of the directors of Simford Bank lived in Sassafraz street—two in Pepperridge street. The Diaper family lived in Sassafraz street; and the Dimity family lived in Pepperridge street; and the fathers of the Diaper girls and the Dimity girls were worth about the same money, and had both made it in the lumber line. There was no difference in their respective modes of living—none in the education of the girls—none in the family grave stones, or church pews. Yet, deny it who liked, the Diapers were the aristocracy of Simford.

I have mentioned but two families—one in each of the principal streets of Simford. Having a little story to tell, I cannot afford to distract my narrative with unnecessary 'asides.' I must not only omit all description of all the other Sassafrazes and Pepperridges, but I must leave to your imagination several Miss Diapers, and several Miss Dimities. Harriet Diaper and Meena Dimity being two exclusive objects of my hero's Sunday and evening attentions.

For eleven months in a year, the lovers of the ladies of Simford were presided over by indigenous Cupids. Brown Crash and the other boys of the village had the Diapers and the Dimities for that respectable period to themselves. The remaining month, when their sun of favor was eclipsed, was during the falling of the leaf, when the drummers came up to gun. The counter-jumpers of the dry goods merchants were too much for the provincials. Brown Crash knocked under and sulked—owing as he said, to the melancholy depression accompanying the fall of the deciduous vegetation—but I have not yet introduced you to my hero.

Brown Crash was a stage-agent. He was the son of a retired watch-maker, and had been laughed at in his boyhood for what they called his 'airs.' He loved even as a lad, to be at the tavern when the stage got in to help out the ladies. With instinctive leishureness he pulled off his cap soon after the 'whop' up as was necessary, and no sooner—asked the ladies if they would 'alight and take dinner,' with a seductive smile that the landlord said 'paid.' At sixteen he was nominated stage-agent, and thence-forward he was the most conspicuous man in the village—for man he was in speech and gait go for anything.

But we must minister a moment to the reader's inner sense, for we do not write altogether for Simford comprehension. Brown Crash had something in his composition 'above the vulgar.' If men's qualities were mixed like salads, and I were giving a receipt for Brown Crash, in Mrs. Glass' style, I should say his two principal ingredients were a dictionary and a dunghill cock; for his language was as ornate as his style of ambulation was deliberate and imposing. What Brown Crash would have been, born right honorable, I leave to the smaller Diapers and Dimities, to the readers' fancy. My object is to show what he was, minus patrician nurture and valuation. Words, with Brown Crash, were susceptible of being dirty by use. He liked a clean towel, he preferred an unused phrase. But here stopped his peculiarities. Below the epidermis he was like other men, subject to like tastes and like passions. And if he expressed his loves and passions with gaudiloquent imagery, they were the honest love and hates of a week-day world; no finer nor flimsier for their bedecked plumage.

Now Mr. Crash had an ambitious weakness for the best society, and he liked to appear intimate with the Diapers. But in Meena Dimity there was a secret charm, which made him wish she was an ever-to-be-handled-out lady-stage-passenger. He could have given her a hand, and brought out her umbrella and hand-bag all day long. In his hours of pride, he thought of the Diapers—in his hours of affliction of Meena Dimity. But the Diapers looked down upon the Dimities, and to play his card delicately between Harriet and Meena took all the diplomacy of Brown Crash. The unconscious Meena would walk up Sassafraz street, when she had her arm, the scornful Harriet would be there, with her nose over the front gate, to sneer at them. He managed as well as he could. He went on light evenings to the Diapers—on dark evenings to the Dimities. He took town walks with the Diapers—country walks with the Dimities. But his acquaintance with the Diapers hung by the eyelids. Harriet liked him, but her acquaintance with him was but a condescension.

But a change came over the spirit of Brown Crash's dream! The drummers were lording it in Simford, and Brown, reduced to Meena Dimity (for he was too proud to play the second-fiddle to a town dandy,) was walking with her one dark night, past the Diapers. The Diapers were hanging over the gate, unluckily, and their Pearl street admirers sitting on the top rail of a fence.

'Who is it?' said a strange voice. The reply sent upward from a scornful projecting under lip, rebounded in echoes from Miss Diaper.

'A Mr. Crash, and a girl from the back streets.'

It was enough. A hot spot on his cheek—a warm rim around his eyes—a pimply pricking in his skin, and all was over! His vow was made. He coolly bid Meena good night, at her father's door, and went home and counted his money; and from that hour, without regard to sex, he secretly accepted shillings from gratified travellers, and 'stood treat' no more.

Saratoga was crowded with the dispersed uncle; of the metropolis. Fashion, wealth and beauty were there. Brown Crash was there, on his return from a tour to Niagara and the lakes.

'Brown Crash Esq.' was one of the notabilities of Congress Hall. Here and there a dandy 'could not quite make him out,' but there was evidently something uncommon about him 'of the old school of politeness,' and politicians thought he had the air of one used to influence in his country. His language was certainly very choice and peculiar, and his gait was conscious dignity itself. He must have been carefully educated, yet his manners were very popular, and he was particularly courteous on a first introduction. The elegance and ease with which he helped the ladies out of their carriages were particularly remarked, and a shrewd observer of manners said of him, 'that point of high breeding was only acquired by daily habit. He must have been brought up where were carriages and ladies.' A member of Congress, who expected to run for governor, inquired his country, and took wine with him. His name was mentioned by the letter-writers from the Springs. Brown Crash was in his perihelion!

The season leaned to its close, and the following paragraph appeared in the New York American:

'Fashionable Intelligence.—The company at the Springs is breaking up. We understand that the Vice President, and Brown Crash, Esq., have already left for their respective residences. The latter gentleman, it is understood, has found a matrimonial engagement with a family of wealth and distinction from the south. We trust these interesting bonds, binding together the leading families of the far divided extremities of our country, may tend to strengthen the tenacity of the great American Union!'

It was not surprising that the class in Simford who knew every thing—the milliners, to wit—moralized somewhat bitterly on Mr. Crash's devotion to the Diapers after his return, and his consequent slights to Meena Dimity. 'If that was the effect of fashion and distinction on the heart, Mr. Crash was welcome to his honors! Let him marry Miss Diaper, and they wished him much joy, but they would never believe he had not ruthlessly broken the heart of Meena Dimity, and he ought to be ashamed of himself, if there was any shame in such a dandy!'

But the milliners, though powerful people in their way, could little effect the momentum of Brown Crash's glories. The paragraph from the 'American' had been copied into the Simford Advertiser, and the eyes of Sassafraz and Pepperridge streets were alike opened.—They had undervalued their indigenous prophet. They had misinterpreted and mis-read the stamp of his superiority. He had been obliged to go from them to be recognized. But he had returned. He was there to have reparation made—justice done. And now what office would he like, from assessor to path-master and would be good enough to name it before the next town meeting. Brown Crash was king of Simford!

And Harriet Diaper! The scorn from her lip had gone, like the blue from the radish.—Notes for 'B. Crash,' showered from Sassafraz street—bouquets from old Diaper's front yard glided to him per black boy—no end to the endeavoring attentions, undisguised and unequivocal.

Brown Crash and Harriet Diaper were engaged—if having the front parlor entirely given up to them of an evening meant anything—if his being expected every night to tea meant anything—of his devoted (though she thought rather cold) attentions meant anything.

They did not mean anything! They all did not mean anything! What does the orthodox minister do, the third Sunday after Brown Crash's return but read the bans of matrimony between that fatherless man and Meena Dimity.

But this was not to be endured. Harriet Diaper had a cousin who was a 'strapper!' He was boss of a saw-mill in the next county, and he must be sent for. He was sent for.

The fight was over. Boss Diaper had undertaken to flog Brown Crash, but it was a drawn battle, for the combatants had been pulled apart by their coat-tails. They stepped into the bar-room, and stood recovering their breath. The people of Simford crowded in and wanted to have the matter talked over.—Boss Diaper bolted out his grievances.

'Gentlemen!' said Brown Crash, with one of his irresistible come-to-dinner smiles. 'I am culpable, perhaps in the minutia of this business—justifiable I trust you will say, in the scope and tendency. You, all of you, probably, have mothers, and some of you have wives, and 'your silver cord' naturally sympathizes with a worsted woman. But gentlemen, you are republicans! You, all of you, are the rulers of a country very large indeed; and you are not limited in your views to one woman, nor to a thousand women—to one mile, nor to a thousand miles. You generalize. You go for magnificent principles, gentlemen! You scorn high-and-mightiness, and aristocracy! 'Hurrah for Mr. Crash!' cried a stage driver from the outside.

'Well, gentlemen! In what I have done I have deserved well of a republican country! True, it has been my misfortune to roll my juggernaut of principle over the sensibilities of that gentleman's respectable female relative. But gentlemen, she offended, remediously and grossly, one of earth's fairest daughters, who lived in the back street! Gentlemen, you know that pride tripped up Lucifer? Shall a tip-toe angel fall for it, and a girl who is nothing particular be left scornfully standing? Shall Miss Diaper have more privileges than Lucifer? I appreciate your indignant negative!'

'But gentlemen, I am free to confess, I had also my republican, private end. You know my early history. You have witnessed my struggles to be respected by my honorable contemporaries. If it be my weakness to be sensitive to the finger of scorn, be it so. You will know how to pardon me. But I will be brief. At a particular crisis of my acquaintance with Miss Diaper, I found it expedient to transfer my untrammelled tenderness to Pepperridge st. But, gentlemen, to have done it without removing from before my eyes the contumelious finger of scorn of Sassafraz street, was beyond my capabilities of endurance. In justice to my present 'future,' gentlemen, I felt that I must remove 'sour grapes' from my escutcheon—that I must soar to a point whence, swooping proudly to Meena Dimity, I should pass the Diapers in descending. (Cheers and murmurs.)'

'Gentlemen and friends! This world is all a fleeting show. The bell has rung, and I keep you from your suppers. Briefly, I found the means to travel and test the ring of my metal among unprejudiced strangers. I wished to achieve distinction, and return to my birthplace; but for what? Do me justice, gentlemen! Not to lord it in Sassafraz street! Not to carry off a Diaper with triumphant elation! Not to pounce on your aristocratic No. 1, and link my destiny with the disdainful Diapers! No! But to choose where I liked, and have the credit of liking it! To have Simford believe that if I preferred their No. 2, it was because I liked it better than their No. 1. Gentlemen, I am a republican! I may find my congenial spirit among the wealthy—I may find it among the humble. But I want the liberty to choose. And I have achieved it—I trust you will permit me to say. Having been honored by the dignities of a metropolis—having consorted with a candidate for gubernatorial distinction—having been recorded in a public journal as a companion of the Vice President of this free and happy country—you will believe me when I declare that I prefer Pepperridge street to Sassafraz—you will credit my sincerity, when, having been approved by the Diapers' betters, I give them the go-by for Dimities! Gentlemen, I have done.'

The reader will not be surprised to learn that Mr. Brown Crash is now a very prominent member of the legislature and an excessive aristocrat—Pepperridge Street and very democratic speeches to the contrary notwithstanding.

GERMAN SILVER. Few are aware of the poisonous qualities of this compound. It is very good for gun mountings, rifles, etc., but never should be used in the form of spoons, or vessels for cooking. It is composed of copper, arsenic, and nickel. It oxidizes very rapidly in contact with any acid, even slight vegetable ones; and the small particles which are taken into the stomach, imperceptibly act as a slow but sure poison. Pure copper spoons would be preferable. Every one is acquainted with the nature of arsenic; nickel is equally poisonous.

THE HONEY MOON.

Tell me, lovely, loving pair?
Why so kind and so severe?
Why so careless of our care,
Only to yourself so dear?—Walker.

Leonard and Clementine were married.—They were in love with each other—they wished to employ their entire time in each other's society—they longed to be alone—and tiresome friends! and dull relations! and persecuting visitors, would scarcely permit them to exchange a word in private. Can anything be more annoying, more afflicting—more persecuting—than all this? Such was Leonard's constant thought—such his incessant exclamation, when he could snatch an instant to whisper it in the ear of his bride. He bride, He felt the evil to be intolerable; and therefore, when they were about one week married, he thus addressed his wife:

'My dearest Clementine; I am sure you remember my promise to you, as well as I do your vow to me—that we should love each other forever and forever; that the one should only live for the other, and that we should die together. Now then, my dear, I appeal to you, is it possible for us to have such love in the midst of a world that annoys, plagues, persecutes, and interferes with us both? Must we not bestow upon others those looks, thoughts, smiles, and sweet fancies, that if we were alone we could reserve for each other's use and delight? Why not enjoy the sweet liberty of living for each other solely and exclusively—for ourselves, and by ourselves alone—instead of wasting our precious minutes, nay, hours, and even days, on those who do not care for us—who are as indifferent to our fate, as we are to theirs?'

'You are right, my love,' was the answer of the bride—and what we ought to do, is to escape as quietly as we can from this wretched world, that robs us of our time, and steals from us by its impudent intrusions, our love.'

'My dear Clementine,' remarked Leonard, 'I adore the treasure that heaven has sent me in you, and I am so niggardly, that I would, if possible, conceal it from all eyes. But is there not some fear that my beloved angel will be soon tired of solitude, of silence, of being quite alone with me. Will she be always content with loving her adoring husband?'

'Leonard, wherever you go, said the pretty bride, 'I shall be happy to follow you; for I would give up my entire life to save you from the smallest pain! Let us, without a moment's hesitation depart.'

The place of retreat chosen by the enamored couple was in the small village of Touraine.—It was there they determined to fly from the world. The world sought to follow them; but they shut the door in its face. They would have no visits—they would receive no company—they would not go beyond the demesne attached to their country residence—they would see, and be seen by nobody.

The world smiled, and all natteredly said:—'Love has removed them from society—marriage will soon send them back again.'

The hermitage that nuptial love had chosen for itself, was a most charming place for two young lovers. Affection began its ascetic life, in a solitude, that was by no means terrible.—Within, there was everything to be found that a luxurious taste could suggest, and an ample fortune supply—and without, there were to be seen the magnificent attractions of nature.

Within was the most costly furniture—velvet, gilding, satin; and without, were the trees, shrubs, sweet fields, and gushing cascades. In the evening a richly stored library opened to them its brilliant pages, and in the day they had unfolded before them that magnificent book, which Heaven itself has given to men, and that extends from the sky to the earth. In the drawing-room might be heard the exquisite tones of the piano, and in the garden there were small winged musicians, who joined in a symphony, composed for them by a Mighty Author. Such a hermitage had never been dreamed of by saint or martyr.

When a lady or gentlemen is in love, and particularly when either is certain of being loved in return, the entire creation seems to feel the joy of a friend in beholding such happiness. Nature smiles on them—speaks to them—inspires them. The poetry that love creates to embellish the object of adoration, is cast upon every object that meets its smiles. Then the dew-drops are in the eyes of the poetic lovers, pearls that the day hath cast upon every blade of grass, or tears that night has shed upon the earth. The sun, which dazzles and scorches, becomes a duty that warms and cheers; the stars are transformed into beneficent beings that bless the love they contemplate; the flowers are transformed into tender-hearted virgins, adorned in secret by the little birds, who sing amorous ditties to please them; even the commonest peasant is changed into cupid, and his crook only requires to be encircled with roses; while every country girl is an Estelle, such as Clorian has depicted. In fine, every thing that surrounds the credulous lover is animated, changed, and converted to please his fancy, to give a new zest to his adoration, and to increase his felicity. For lovers there are always miracles—but it is no miracle that lovers are apt to change their mind.

Leonard and Clementine had not a moment to lose, nor to regret. They lived for themselves, and for themselves alone. When they wished to walk, there was no impertinent crowd to impede their footsteps—when they wished for music, they could be affected by it—nay, could even weep over it, without being considered 'nonsensical,' or 'ridiculous,' by others—and when they read, they were not obliged to read anything but fine novels, full of high flown sentiment, romance, enthusiasm, and passion. They were assuredly 'the happiest, dearest, most loving, most devoted married couple, that ever existed!' So they said to each other, and so they thought.

Clementine, in the enthusiasm and exaltation of her love, consigned to the flames some lively quadrilles, because her husband did not like them, and he stopped receiving his newspapers. The ball room and the senate house, were alike proscribed to the arbor of love.

They were living about a fortnight thus alone, when Leonard received by express one morning a letter from his uncle, who had just been appointed to an embassy. The letter was to the following effect:—

'My dear enamored nephew, you have been born a century too late. You should have lived in the times of Mademoiselle Scudery, or of Mademoiselle de Lafayette. You must have slept without living for a hundred years.—Thanks to your long slumber, you know nothing of the world as it is. Instead of marrying a rich heiress in prose, you have espoused a pretty woman in poetry—a little heroine of romance, who seems only made for languor, sighs, and passion. Folly and romance have up to this time had a victory. If your absurdity is not altogether incurable, I have an office of high honor to offer to you. Would you like to be secretary to the embassy at Madrid? Come, nephew, awake to real life. Spain is of all the countries in the world, the finest, and the most worthy of being studied—I do not even except Acadia. I expect you, my dear Leonard, in Paris immediately. I pray heaven to keep you in your sound senses, and I know no one who stands in so much need of such a prayer as yourself.'

When Leonard read over this letter, he determined to proceed at once to the chamber of his wife, in order that they might laugh over its absurdity, and the strange proposal it contained. He determined not to lose an instant in doing so, although he was aware that the hour was one in which his beloved Clementine was in the habit of enjoying her siesta.

He found his wife in her chamber, but—how was she engaged? She was reading—a romance? No—a prayer-book? No—a new piece of music? No. She was reading letters, and she smiled as she read them. Nay, some she read over more than once. It was thus her husband saw her engaged, and when she saw him she started with terror and affright, and then, she ran out of the room. Leonard did not attempt to follow her, but he seized hold of the letters, of which he neither knew the contents, nor by whom they were written, nor to whom they had been addressed. He perceived, alas! upon examining them, that they were the composition of a very handsome young gentleman, a Mr. Frederick d'Ormay, and that they had been addressed to a certain young lady named Clementine!

The young bride stole into the room again, just as he had made this awful discovery. She gazed at him with a look full of inexpressible tenderness and affection.

'Clementine!' said Leonard, in a voice hoarse with passion, 'you have known a young man named Frederick d'Ormay.'

'I have, my darling,' replied Clementine, in faltering accents; 'and he was so bold as to fall in love with me, and so imprudent as to write letters to me. That was all very amusing to me, for I was only a mere child at the time; but I never cared a pin for him; indeed, I didn't. I swear to you I have never loved any one in the world but yourself, my dear, dear Leonard.'

'Aye, but for all that you have taken good care of his letters; you seem to have a regard for them.'

'Yes, my dear, just the same as I have for the toys and books of my school days, and the little presents of my play-fellows, and all those other little trifles that amuse a child growing into girlhood. The fact is, I was beginning to feel a little ennuied, and—and—and it just occurred to me, it might amuse me to look over the different trifles I had at school. I—I—met with these; I stopped to read them, and—and in short, it did amuse me to read over all the fine, florid, high flown phrases that were addressed to me, and that I had long since forgotten. It was very wrong—yes, very wrong. I am now sure of it; but now, my dearest, take all these letters, tear them without reading such stuff; burn them this instant; I desire you to do so; I order it; kiss and forgive your little wife.'

The letters were burned—the married folks were reconciled; but Leonard thought he might as well not say anything at that moment of the epistle of his uncle.

The next day the weather was dreadful.—The rain kept pouring down in one constant torrent, and while Clementine was slumbering in her mid-day nap, Leonard betook himself to his study. He had been there for several hours, when his wife determined upon paying him a visit. She found him engaged in painting a portrait; and such was the ardor with which he pursued his task, that he did not perceive the approach of the lady. She saw that he was enchanted with the task on which he was engaged, and being anxious to know what it was could so engross his entire thoughts, she stole to the back of his chair.—She looked upon the canvass, and there she beheld—the portrait of a most charming young

DR. BUTLER,
NO. 4 BRATTLE SQUARE.

DR. BUTLER deems it prudent to remark, as quackery Empiricism, and the grossest imposition prevails to a great extent in this community, that he is properly qualified in his profession; and that he has more practice, and really cured more patients of various and complicated diseases, than has fallen to the lot of many practitioners.

Dr. Butler's practice is not confined to any peculiar class of diseases as many may perhaps infer, from the general tenor of a certain class of advertisers, who have nearly exhausted the vocabulary of billingsgate, in the false description of their infallible specifics, and multifarious compounds, for the immediate cure of every disease.

Dr. Butler treats all diseases that flesh is heir to, in the most approved and scientific manner; and from his long experience and extensive practice, he is enabled to give satisfaction to all who see fit to honor him with their confidence.

His office is arranged for the convenience of both sexes, so that there can be no hesitancy in calling. Please observe, No. 4 Brattle Square, opposite the Church, in the rear of the Broker's Office. Entrance in the Alley.

DR. FERNANDES'
Vegetable Indian Arcanum,

FOR THE CURE OF

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous Eruptions, Pimples or Pusules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impotence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Disorders arising from an impure use of Mercury. The complexion is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernandes, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he does for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernandes, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in asserting the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and effectual cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernandes himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that no more has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and have prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bill of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernandes, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDES, Indian Physician.

JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernandes' Medicine:

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for several years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fastening upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in my time used many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernandes' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 23, 1843.

From Abraham Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

Sir—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernandes' Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that in general health as he has stated, has been on the decline, and that he has had frequent turns of spitting blood, such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernandes' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is distressing great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, and a sense of great pain in the liver, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,

ABRAHAM BARTLETT.

Quincy, May 24, 1843.

From John Page, Clerk of the Hancock House, Quincy.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent for Dr. Fernandes' Arcanum:

Sir—Some time since I was so much indisposed as to be unable to pursue my business, from an attack of the Fever from which I partially recovered by the use of medicines which physicians prescribed, but was then in a state of languid inactivity, as it may be termed, general debility of the system. At this stage of my health, my friend Mr. Abercrombie, who had been happily cured by the use of a few bottles of Dr. Fernandes' Indian Arcanum, advised me to seek for relief from the same source, which I readily improved, and with great satisfaction, state to you that I have experienced great relief by the use of one bottle which so much desired, in a restoration to the enjoyment of good health, which I solely attribute to the Arcanum.

Parr's Life Pills.

Warm weather is fast approaching, and the impurities of the blood require rectifying. Of the functions necessary to be cleansed and invigorated, none have a more intimate connection than the stomach and the liver. The presence of food in the stomach, and the healthy operation of the digestive powers, furnish the natural stimulus to the liver; but whenever the action of the former becomes weak and morbid, the liver is improperly excited, and disease of the liver is the consequence. To give a healthy tone to the stomach, and free the blood of its impurities, and strengthen those organs, take medicine free from mineral compounds, and containing no deleterious ingredients. Such as Parr's Life Pills, being purely vegetable, in their operation and compounded of purest of Vegetables.
